Con Com supports Murley Farm

Plan for 66 condos passes another test

NEWTON — The Conservation Commission Thursday night approved matters within its jurisdiction for the Murley Farm development and the proposed Chestnut Hill development.

The Murley Farm development of 66 condominium attached houses has already been approved by the Board of Aldermen.

The Chestnut Hill Country Club proposal for development of some of the property in order to save the rest as open space has a distance to go before receiving board approval.

The Green Company and its soil and water experts assured the commission that the wetland on the Murley land will store enough runoff to prevent flooding of any nearby property and that nothing will be done to the land to reduce that capacity.

In fact, according to Gary Hollands, Green's environmental expert, the storage capacity will be enhanced by a dam in the stream outlet of the wetland.

The small dam will assure that there is no increase in the runoff rate of rainwater and will help provide a slow release of water during dry periods.

Conservation Commission member Richard Staley was concerned about access to the conservation easement that will encompass all the wetland and a border around the whole property, about 10 acres all told.

There will not be public access, because the whole property will be under the control of the condominium association and there would be a question of liability, Alan Green said, but Staley could get permission to take his environmental science program onto the site for study.

The Barkan Properties-Newton Commonwealth Improvement Corp. plans for the Chestnut Hill Country Club include filling of the land off Kenrick Street, reshaping some of the ponds, and building a clubhouse and parking lot near the wetlands.

The development plan is to build 20 townhouses near Kenrick Street and 40 off Algonquin Road on the other side of the land, preserving about 70 acres of the 81 acres as a golf course.

The Land Use Committee may complete its work with the Barkan-NCIC petition at its working meeting April 28, but so far few members of the Board of Aldermen are in favor of the proposal. Algonquin Road residents are strongly opposed because of the number of townhouses imposed on them, and housing advocates on the Board of Aldermen do not like the resistance of the developer to providing six low-income housing units as required by a city ordinance. Even though it appears there may be a major redesign of the Barkan proposal, the developer proceeded with getting the necessary Conservation Commission approvals, which were given Thursday night. The Conservation Commission was most concer ned with preventing silt from construction from getting into the drainage system that runs beneath the golf course, eventually into Boston.

Barkan's engineer said he planned to deepen one of the so-called ponds on the property to take care of any extra earth that is washed into what he called the "remains" of Strong's Pond as well as providing additional storage capacity for runoff from the houses and parking lots.

All the ponds, which connect with each other, will be enlarged to provide more retention capacity for water.

On the Algonquin Road side of the golf course the runoff will be less than now, Peter Kasch, project director, said.

Two Boston residents said they are extremely concerned about what will happen on their side of the line when there is a large storm.

John Bercury of Algonquin Road asked the commission to consider the danger of deepening the ponds because children play around water and ice. The ponds will not be more than 2 feet deep, the developer said.

Mary Rossetti doesn't look like she really wants to find out what a snake feels like in this demonstration at the Crystal Lake Bathhouse. One of the activities put on for Earth week, the demonstration was run by by naturalist and photographer Sue Jacobson who taught the 18 children who attended about their natural environment. Housing grant is awarded to Newton

NEWTON— U.S. Congressman Robert F. Drinan announced recently that the city of Newton has been awarded a $159,264 grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to convert the former Hamilton School, 677 Grove St., into 42 units of housing for senior citizens.

Newton Mayor Theodore Mann has praise for Drinan's work in helping to secure the grant.

"Once again Congressman Drinan and his office have offered invaluable assistance in helping Newton secure federal funds," Mann said. "These funds will help to alleviate the housing shortage now faced by both senior citizens and families."

"The city is very grateful to Congressman Drinan," Mann concluded.

The grant was awarded through the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency.

Jaycees to host award presentation

WEST NEWTON — The Newton Jaycees will host its annual "Distinguished Service Award" presentation Sunday, May 4. The event will take place at 10:30 a.m. at Valles on Rt. 9 in Newton. For ticket information call Ted Gross of the Newton Jaycees at 244-2899.

The occasion allows the Jaycees to honor a deserving person between the ages of 18 and 35 who has helped to make Newton a better community.

The guest speaker that morning will be Representative William G. Robinson, Minority Floor Leader of the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

Israeli celebration to include replica of early kibbutz

BROOKLINE — Anyone who has ever wondered what life on an Israeli kibbutz is like will be able to find out on Sunday, May 4.

The flavor of day-to-day living on Israel's unique agricultural settlement will be there for the sampling when the 32nd Celebration of Israel Independence Day gets underway at the Central Area Facility in Newton at the close of the Boston Jewish Community Walkathon.

A complete replica of a turn of the century kibbutz will be one of the day's many offerings, and a guaranteed favorite for children of all ages. Costumed "halutzim" (pioneers) will welcome families to a small cluster of tents, agricultural animals and activities that will give substance to the oft-read descriptions of life among the earliest settlers in Palestine.

Join them for a "halutz" snack of bread and jam, a tour through a shelter like those used to ward off enemy attacks, or play the street games that Israeli children have played for decades. Enjoy the activities on a "meshek Viladim," a children's farm used to stimulate the satisfactions and responsibilities of adult kibbutz life. Live camels, donkeys and other farm animals will be there for children to see, feed and ride.

Coordinated by the Kibbutz Aliyah Desk and the Young Judaea of Boston, the kibbutz replica is being developed with the guidance of Amikam Osem, the Young Judaea "shaliach" (emissary). He is a member of Kibbutz Afikim, in Emek Hayarden (the Jordan Valley), and is taking great pleasure in helping to create an environment like that on his own home.

Members of Young Judaea will staff an information booth at the replica, offering brochures and current information on kibbutz programs in Israel and answering questions about kibbutz life. And "madrichim" (leaders) will instruct teams of children in various games, awarding as prizes various Israeli goods.

The kibbutz is but one facet of the full day of activities at the Central Area Facility in Newton. Thousands of people from all over Massachusetts are expected to attend the Boston Jewish Community Walkathon, which will begin at the Newton Industrial Park at One Wells Avenue at 1:30 p.m. Several hundred more are expected for the new three-mile "Mini-Walk" designed specially for senior adults and parents with small children. Shuttle buses for the "Mini-Walk" will begin to leave from One Wells parking lot at 2 p.m. And the lavish Israel Independence Day Celebration, scheduled to begin at 3 p.m. should draw even a few thousand more.

T-shirts emblazoned with the 1980 walkathon logo will be available during the week prior to the event, and will be on sale at the Israel Independence Day Celebration. Furthermore, a prize will be awarded to the walker raising the highest total on behalf of the 1980 campaign of the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston, and to the lucky winners of a drawing to be held two weeks following the walkathon. Registration for that drawing will be on Sunday, May 4.

Time is short, but it is not too late to get involved in the events. Walkers, sponsors and marshals are still needed to assure the smooth operation of the day's schedule. Marshals in particular are needed to walk along the 10-mile route, to assist at crosswalks, drive "poop-out" vans, and to register walkers at checkpoints.

For a schedule of the day's events, a walk card, or for further information, please call the Central Area Facility, 969-0733.

Recital to benefit 'Hunger Walk'

HIGHLANDS — The Newton Highlands Congregational Church announces a recital by mezzo-soprano Natash Lutov on Sunday afternoon, May 4 at 4 p.m. She will be accompanied by her husband, pianist Edwin Hymovitz.

The program was first presented April 20 in New York at St. Peter's Church in Citicorp Center. It features songs of Beethoven, Brahms, Wolf, Faure and Rachmaninoff. All songs are of a serious or devotional nature.

Natasha Lutov was born in France of French and Russian parents and grew up in Washington, D.C. She attended Westminster Choir College and graduated from Smith College, continuing music study in Heidelberg, Germany. She has appeared extensively in oratorio and developed a speciality in the French and Russian art songs that form her personal heritage. Recent operatic appearances in the New York area have included featured roles with Bel Canto Opera, the New York Lyric, and a Carmen with Opera On the Sound.

Edwin Hymovitz was born in Philadelphia, attended the Yale School of Music and pursued advanced piano study in New York. He has made a special study of French and Russian repertoire, receiving a grant from the Ingram Merrill Foundation in support of his Scriabin performances. Hymovitz is chairman of the Piano Department for the Extension Division of the New England Conservatory of Music.

Tickets to the concert will be available in the church office and on the day of the performance: $3 for adults; $1.50 for students and senior citizens. The concert is sponsored by the music committee and the Christian Outreach-Social Action committees of the church to benefit the Greater Boston Walk for Hunger which takes place on this day.

Former Fire Chief Perkins dies

NEWTON — Retired Newton Fire Chief Frederick A. Perkins died last week at his home on Cape Cod and was buried in Newton Cemetery Saturday after services in Trinity Church, Newton Centre.

Chief Perkins was a member of the Newton Fire Department for nearly 40 years and was chief for 20 before he retired in 1976 at the age of 63.

Mayor Theodore Mann called him "an outstanding professional who helped give Newton the highly respected Fire Department that it has."

"Under his leadership, the Fire Department received the highest rating in the United States in fire safety," Mann said.

"To me, he was a valued friend and strong leader," Mann said. "His quality of leadership has set the style for excellence in firefighting."

Chief Perkins was named chief in 1956 during the administration of Mayor Howard Whitmore Jr. He succeeded John E. Corcoran, who had served as chief from 1949 to 1956.

Born Oct. 13, 1912, Chief Perkins graduated from Newton North High School and received instruction from the Boston University Fire College, the U.S. Navy firefighting and salvage schools, and the Massachusetts Department of Education extension classes.

Appointed to the Fire Department in 1937, he served in the Navy during World War II, returned to the department, and became a lieutenant in 1946.

He continued a family tradition in joining the Newton Fire Department. His father, the late Capt. Frederick A. Perkins, served the city for 45 years.

During Chief Perkins' service, manpower in the Fire Department nearly trebled from 100 firefighters in 1937 to 275 in 1976.

There were many "firsts" in the department under his leadership. His was the first in New England to have a diesel engine, Engine 3. His was the first department in Greater Boston to obtain a "Jaws of Life," a tool used to extricate people from serious car accidents.

His was also the first department in the city to receive the National Fire Protective Association Award for Fire Prevention.

Chief Perkin's interest in firefighting dated to his childhood when he would visit the station with his father, becoming what is know as a "red hot" spark.

Chief Perkins was a past member of American Legion Post No. 48 in Newton.

He served on the Newton Traffic Commission and was a former secretary-treasurer of the Fire Chiefs Association of Massachusetts, a post he held for 17 years. He was appointed by Governor Endicott Peabody to help establish the Fire Academy Commission.

He was a member of Trinity Episcopal Church in Newton Centre, Dalhousie Lodge, Royal Arch Chapter; Gethsemane Commandry and the Aleppo Temple.

Chief Perkins is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ruth E. (Doyle) Perkins; two sons, Frederick A. III of Wells, Me. and Richard A. of Newton; a daughter, Dorothy J. MacKinnon of Orleans; step-children Kathleen Martell of Westwood, Karen Cleveland and Lawrence Hayes of Kingston; a sister, Ruth E. Benson of Arkansas; and nine grandchildren.

The Frank Zervas School will be presenting "Mirror, Mirror," a mod-opera based on the story of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfes." The performances will be Friday, May 2 at 11 a.m. at the Angier School, and Tuesday, May 6 at 10:30 a.m. and again at 8 p.m. at the Zervas School. The public is welcome at al performances.

Newtonite recipient of Merit Scholarship

NEWTON — In the last of three major announcements of Merit Scholars this spring, the National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC) of Evanston, Illinois, has released the names of almost 1,900 winners of college-sponsored four-year Merit Scholarships. At the completion this 25th Annual competition in 1980, more than 4,500 highly able students will win Merit Scholarships valued at almost $14 million.

David L. Albert of Newton was one of the recipients of a Merit Scholarship. He attends Commonwealth School in Boston and will study mathematics at the University of Chicago next fall.

Albert also received a "Youthgrant in the Humanities" from the National Endowment for the Humanities. He is a volunteer in the education department of Boston's Museum of Science, a day care center volunteer, and a member of his school's chorus.

College-sponsored Merit Scholarships are offered with the stipulation that the winner must attend the institution financing the award. These scholarships are renewable for up to four years of undergraduate study but are not transferable to another college or university. Winners were selected by officials of the sponsoring institution, who also computed the students' financial need and determined the individual stipends. The dollar amounts, which can range from $1,000 to $6,000 over the four college years, are not made public since they are related to confidential family financial information. The average annual stipend for college— sponsored scholarship winners is currently about $725, or $2,9000 for the four undergraduate years.

"Colleges and universities have added significantly to the number of Merit Scholarships that can be awarded annually to the outstanding Merit Program Finalists since they were first invited to become program sponsors 18 years ago," said NMSC president Edward C. Smith. "The number of scholarships that each institution is sponsoring in 1980 ranges from one to 100. The total number of Merit Scholarships offered has grown from 175 in 1963 to more than 1,900 being offered in 1980," he said.

Approximately 1.1 million high school students entered the current (1980) Merit Scholarship competition by taking the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test-National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT-NMSQT) in October 1978. Over 18,000 public, independent, and parochial U.S. secondary schools administered this qualifying test to their junior students. Some 15,000 of these students — the highest scorers in each of the fifty states — were named semifinalists in the fall of 1979. Additional semifinalists are named from schools in the District of Columbia, U.S. independent schools enrolling students from several states, U.S. commonwealths and territories, and schools abroad that enroll U.S. citizens.

About 14,000 semifinalists advanced to finalist level in the competition by meeting further requirements, including being endorsed and recommended by their high school principals, submitting school records that confirmed high academic standing, and substantiating their PSAT-NMSQT performance with equivalent scores on another examination. All Merit Scholarship winners are chosen from the group of highly able finalists.

In addition to the winners being named today, two other major announcements of Merit Scholars were made in 1980. The first Merit Scholar announcement on April 10 named 1,500 winners of corporate-sponsored four-year Merit Scholarships; on April 24, NMSC released the names of 1,125 winners of one-time National Merit $1000 Scholarships.

Damon to detail Westwood operations

WESTWOOD — A presentation on the manufacturing and production operations of Damon Corp. will be given at the company's Westwood plant on Thursday, May 1 beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The presentation is meant to allay neighbors' fears about the company's request to the Board of Appeals for permission to receive an undiluted "raw" radioactive isotope, Iodine-125, dilute it, put it into sealed vials and conduct quality control testing. Damon is also seeking permission to receive, store and ship small amounts of the radioactive isotope tridium.

About 50 households, including abutters and abutters of abutters, as well as town officials, reporters and the attorney for residents opposed to Damon's plans, have been invited to Thursday night's program, according to a company spokesman.

In addition to demonstrating the operations now performed by Damon and describing the changes in these operations which would be allowed if the Board of Appeals grants the extension of the company's existing special permit, the company in a written invitation says that "company and recognized experts will discuss the government regulations and the health and safety program and precautions being implemented in Westwood with respect to low-level radioactive materials, quality assurance testing, personnel monitoring, plant security and product shipping."

The informal program is expected to run until 9 p.m. A guided tour of the Westwood facilities will be provided, along with some basic literature describing the business of Damon Corporation and the products of Damon Diagnostics.

Damon sought the extension of its special permit from the Westwood Board of Appeals on April 10 at a hearing which drew many area residents opposed to the extension. Abutters have hired attorney Louis Beigbeder to represent them.

The company already has a special permit in Westwood to assemble test kits containing small vials of radioactive isotope Iodine-125, which has been sealed in Damon's Needham facility.

The Westwood facility, where Thursday's program will be held, is located at 80 Wilson Way.

Union: Guard cut perils 'T'

BOSTON (UPI) — A union representing Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority carmen has warned the transit system will stop running if authority chairman Robert L. Foster decreases the number of guards riding the trains.

Foster ordered eliminating "all extra guards being utilized on four-car train units" in memorandums sent in March to Andrew C. Hyde, MBTA operations director.

Sky divers expedition

An expedition that plans to attempt the first group sky-dive onto the North Pole has been delayed, within the Arctic Circle, on an island in the Northwest Territories of Canada.

Richard Duane, a New Jersey ham radio operator who is the contact man for the group, said the men probably would leave Hazen Lake about 560 miles from the pole, early today.

Playmate pays off

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — 'Tis a far, far better thing to become a Playboy magazine Playmate of the Year than to be crowned Miss America — financially at least.

Dorothy Stratten, a statuesque blonde from Vancouver, B.C., bursts forth this month in the pages of the girlie magazine with 14 photographs of herself mostly naked.

As the 21st annual Playmate, Dorothy was paid $25,000 in cash plus $175,000 in gifts, including a $26,000 Jaguar XJ-S, jewelry worth about $20,000 and a Russian crown sable coat valued at $65,000.

Unlike reigning Miss Americas, Dorothy will not have to spend the year touring the country promoting her newfound celebrity. Neither will she worry her pretty little head about the decorum expected of the beauty queen.

Granted, Dorothy is in no danger of receiving a Rhodes scholarship, but neither does she epitomize the traditional dumb blonde.

An actress with five movies to her credit and a couple of television guest shots, Dorothy is smart enough to know that her nude layout in the magazine will help promote her acting career.

Diet without exercise will not work... (I know, I tried it!!!)

Ann LeCamera

"Yes, I took off several pounds when I dieted with a weight loss group, but I quickly gained the weight back. I was terribly disappointed; so much calorie counting for so little weight difference.

Finally, I tried Gloria Stevens and found out for myself that their MED method really works. I feel better and look better.

Now, I'm not only losing pounds, but inches, too.

The Gloria Stevens diet is a healthy one; but it's the combination of exercise and diet that makes the difference. And the exercises are fun! Whether I'm doing them alone, a group, the techs are there to correct and encourage me.

For me, it's Gloria Stevens!"

Silver dollars woo busloads to casinos

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — There are so many little old ladies at the casinos you'd think bingo — not craps — was the attraction.

"I'll bet $5," announced a suburban-looking matron as she and a companion emerged from their charter bus, complementary lunch ticket, free Susan B. Anthony dollars and salt water taffy in hand. "If I win, I'll stretch it to $10."

"I once saw a man put down a $10 bill — and it was gone just like that," said her more sophisticated friend.

"Oh my — well that's not really very wise," said the first woman, stunned into silent contemplation.

Bus 32693 was playing it cool, being, after all, New Yorkers who had never met each other until they plunked down $15 each for the trip, taffy, buffet and three silver dollars.

"You want to have fun, go to a movie," said Leo, who wore a green checked suit and an American flag on his lapel. "This is serious business."

"Roulette wheel here I come," yelled his girlfriend, Gerri, breaking the mood.

Last year 12,000 charter buses rolled up to Atlantic City's three shiny new casinos, giving the East Coast's clubwomen, retired elderly, penny-wise vacationers and a smattering of hopeful unemployeds their crack at the only legal slot machines and roulette wheels east of Las Vegas.

On 32693, Pete, who is young and dreamy and unemployed, fingered his $50 stake and told his seatmate Martha, a retired bookkeeper, about his missed opportunities — lottery numbers that came in just one digit off, a friend who was hit by a bus and collected $125,000.

"I could have been a bookkeeper," he confided. "I was good at that in school. I was so good I didn't even have to take the exam. I should have kept at that."

Phyllis, who visits the casinos often, warned her fellow passengers about the crush at the $2 blackjack tables. "You feel like you're drinking coffee at a Chock Full 'O Nuts," she sniffed.

Inside the Boardwalk Regency, however, the real jam was not at blackjack but the fruitbowl at the free buffet.

"Just delicious, girls," called out a chunky matron in slacks and fur coat to dozens of similarly dressed women waiting in line for their turns.

"These ladies eat so much," wondered an elderly Hungarian doctor as he watched the crowd pile their plates with pseudo-beef stroganoff. At the next table, two elderly women with crooked wigs and crooked lipstick carefully piled up surplus pats of butter.

"We hate to waste," said one as her sister nodded sagely.

The free buffet is an investment for the Boardwalk Regency, which knows that most of the people who are congratulating themselves on their great bargain at noon will have lost far more than its price by 5 p.m.

'Casinobus' transports crowds to Atlantic City casinos

Computers help the whole family

NEW YORK (UPI) — Within a very few years it could be difficult to make a living unless you can work at a cathode ray video display terminal and color graphic home computers could give tomorrow's workforce a head start.

A lot of parents are willing to pay from $450 to $2,000 for a free-standing computer with a VDT (also called a CRT) and keyboard to be used in the home, says Peter J. Curnin, president of Intelligent Systems Corp. of Atlanta.

ISC makes small computers for business and a series of Compucolor household computers.

"There are fewer than a dozen companies making household computers with standard-size display terminals," Curnin said. "Perhaps five have substantial sales, but the sales gains of the successful companies are phenomenal — up to 200 percent a year."

ISC says it has an estimated 28 percent market share. The firm's sales have grown from $60,000 in 1975 to $4 million in 1978 and an estimated $15 million for fiscal 1979.

"Taking a guess, I would say overall industry sales could reach $500 million a year," Curnin said.

While the home computer is not an item that's desperately needed, it's no mere toy or status symbol either, Curnin said. Its potential for life enrichment and for learning is enormous and just starting to be realized.

Some companies selling home computers emphasize their usefulness for household and small business accounting. Compucolor does that too, but Curnin, who came to ISC recently after 23 years with International Business Machines Corp., says that's being stressed too much.

More emphasis should be put on the level of sophisticated cultural, educational and recreational pursuits the home computer gives the family, he said.

The home computer can familiarize children as young as six with the basic principles of the computer and VDT, which are fast becoming both the communicating and calculating tool of commerce, industry, science, education and even the arts," he said.

In addition it is a fascinating game-playing device. This is particularly true of the color display terminals, which can be used not only to play a wide variety of programmed games but for creative artistic designs.

Curnin said he discovered recently by accident that the home computer can offer real help to children who don't take readily to reading or to drawing with their hands.

"The dyslexic child who can't draw a cube or write figures or letters on the blackboard can accurately punch keys and do as well as the normal child on the home computer's VDT."

Children who don't have a learning disability but are slow in the classroom may do much better on the home computer tube, Curnin said, because they can proceed at their own speed. The youngster feels freer to exercise his or her imagination than would be the case in the classroom and will work harder.

As a learning machine, Compucolor can teach languages, sciences, mathematics and elementary design. It will balance your check book, help with your income tax, keep up with the mortgage and tax payments.

And it can be used to convert a recipe for a dish for four to the right quantities to serve nine or twenty-nine.

Pregnancy classes 24T1

Early pregnancy classes are now being offered locally at Dedham Medical Associates. The three-week series is for couples in the early stages of pregnancy.

This program is designed to promote understanding, and help couples recognize and effectively deal with physical and emotional changes that occur during pregnancy.

Some of the topics that are included are nutrition, partners role, relaxation, exercise and planning for delivery. These classes will include discussions, handouts and practical sessions. Partners are encouraged to participate.

The instructors for the program are Rebecca Gourley, R.P.T., and Patience Leland, R.P.T., both certified childbirth instructors. Classes will be held on Wednesday nights from 7 to 9. The fee for the series $25. Registration and inquires may be made at 329-1400 (ext. 102).

11 graduate at Aquinas 18T1

Recently 11 women completed a back-to-work workshop, New Directions, at Aquinas Junior College, Newton. After a six-week program of typewriting and office procedures, the women received a certificate from Sr. Julia Ford, C.S.J. president.

The participants came from Weston, Newton, Westwood and East Boston. Seven of the graduates and collegiate degrees, but wanted to change careers. Three of the women added an international dimension to the group. They received their educations in Australia, Poland and South Africa.

Another group of women is enrolled in the final New Directions for the current school year.

Beginning in September, the Center for Continuing Education will offer the Back-to-Work Workshop. Women who are interested in the program should telephone 244-0089 for more information.

Public drinking leads to teen vandalism

WALTHAM — "Mass arrest" is not going to stop vandalism, but education, crime prevention, recreation, and legislative reform might, according to Sgt. Kenneth McGilvray.

In an address to members of the Citizens Committee for Crisis Prevention, McGllvray placed public drinking high on his list of causes for vandalism.

He said, however, that "public drinking is not going to be solved by mass arrest or by fines" and that "there must be some other avenue for this youthful energy."

McGilvray said, "This committee should demand (that) there are no cutbacks in our recreation department programs.

"It is foolhardy to prefer to fund repairs to buildings (damaged by vandals) to funding recreation programs."

He said, "The answer lies in education in the formative years, through the schools and in the homes. Children must learn respect for others."

He stressed that "arrest is not the bottom line" because, he said, "some young people wear it as a badge of honor. And that is a fact of life."

Among the solutions McGilvray listed as more viable than arrest are "forcing the kids to clean up their act" by making them clean up their empty beer cans, and spill out their alcohol.

"Hit them in the pocketbook," McGilvray suggested.

A third deterrent to vandalism is the visibility of the police force, McGilvray said.

And finally, he called on committee members to work towards "the repeal of some of our out-dated vandalism laws and new legislation to make vandalism punishment realistic."

As the laws currently stand "they protect out children," McGilvray said, adding that in certain instances children do not need protection.

"I have the scars from when I was attacked by a 16-year-old," he said.

McGilvray told committee members that none of the suggestions he offered "are easy" but said "they can be done with (the help of) sincere, concerted efforts."

Survey hopes to learn what kids like to do mos

WALTHAM — Discussion of the city's public drinking ordinance was inexplicably tabled by the Special Citizens Committee for Crisis Prevention on the suggestion of Chairman John M. Duffy Tuesday.

The long-planned discussion did not appear on the committee agenda but was raised by committee member Edmond R. Joyal, Jr. Duffy, who was apparently signaled by Police Detective and Committee Member Richard Scanlon, then suggested tabling t discussion.

Duffy said there is "some sensiti ty" surrounding the ordinance t said he didn't know the identity of t sensitive party, or the grounds.

"I don't know by who," he said.

Committee member Joseph Alessandro then motioned for tabli until an indefinite time.

Discussion of the public drinki law began earlier this month.

Private trash firm has okay from Clark

By DAVE GRAM
Staff Writer

WALTHAM — Mayor Arthur J. Clark said Tuesday he will seek City Council approval to hire SCA Disposal Services Co. of Boston to collect city reeidents' rubbish for the next three years.

The council will have a chance to act on the SCA contract proposal after the mayor submits his fiscal 1981 budget request to the council next monday.

Included in that request will be a provjsion to pay SCA $649,500, the low bid submitted last Wednesday for one year's rubbish collection.

The mayor's decision was announced after a four-hour City Hall meeting with officials from SCA, City Auditor George Gallitano, and Public Works Director Edward Delaney.

The decision came four days after Delaney sent Clark a letter recommending that the city continue to collect its own rubbish and forego all four bids received from private contractors.

"It t this time to continue appears that it is more advantageous for the city a its present method of collecting and disposing of rubbish," Delaney said in his letter.

"For collection only, I estimate that our three-year costs will be $2.1 million, compared with SCA's) low bid of $2,143,500," Delaney's letter said. w, he said he saw "no significant savings" in the city going to a private contractor.

Clark said Tuesday that while he does not intend to lay off any of the Public Works Department's trash collectors, savings "will begin to accrue" from attrition within the department.

Delaney said the city would try to find other suitable work for the 30 men currently employed as trash collectors.

While three of the four firms submitting bids last Wednesday gave prices for both collection only and for collection and disposal of rubbish, opted Clark to pursue SCA's bid for collection only.

Fuel clause asked by school bus firm

NEWTON — The company that provides transportation for public school special needs students has asked that a fuel escalation clause be added to its two-year-old contract.

The city Purchasing Department is seeking a contractual and legal opinion on the request.

Transportation Management Corporation (TMC) provides all public school transportation in the city but the request applies only to the station wagons used to carry special needs students.

In a letter to the School Department, TMC President Richard Zimmerman said when the company assumed the Newton special needs contract 2.5-years ago, the price of gasoline was approximately 50 cents per gallon. The price is now approaching $1.50 per gallon.

"While we have attempted to shoulder this tremendous burden alone, it is becoming more and more difficult, and it has reached the point where it may possibly jeopardize the future of this company."

Zimmerman said he is approaching other communities where the company has contracts without fuel escalation clauses "in the hope that even though there is no contractual obligation that they assist us, we are hoping that in the interest of fair play that they will attempt to help us with this critical problem."

"I fully recognize that we did not request a gas escalation clause at the time of the original bid," Zimmerman said, "however at that time every authority was predicting that gasoline would not approach $1 per gallon until, at least, 1985."

Shoplifter took rings worth $1,000

WALTHAM — A shoplifter made off with two rings worth more than $1,000 from the Sterling Jewelers store, 368 Moody St., Monday afternoon, police said.

Det. Capt. John R. McDonald said a black male, described as about six feet tall and weighing 150 pounds, was "in the store looking at rings. He took two of them, ran out the door, south on Moody Street and east on Cushing (Street)."

McDonald said the man reportedly jumped into a car driven by an accomplice on Cushing Street, and the two sped off toward Newton Street.

He said the black male suspect was reportedly wearing a brown jacket and a wine-colored tee shirt with white lettering. He said police do not know what the lettering said, nor do they have a description of the getaway car.

Stolen were one white gold ring with a diamond Marquis setting and a yellow gold ring with a nine-point round stone setting' McDonald said.

Center on call 24 hours a day

WALTHAM — Since the middle of February the new emergency team of the Metropolitan Beaverbrook Mental Health and Retardation Center has been available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, for emergency crisis counseling for adolescents, adults and the elderly, who live in Belmont, Waltham or Watertown.

During February the Emergency Team recorded 139 contr contacts with people who were experiencing an emotional crisis, in need of hospitalization, or looking for help and from agencies re questing assistance in helping one of their own clients.

Since July, 1979, the center has been adding professional staff and expanding services for the residents of Belmont, Waltham and Watertown.

King: oil, fishing can mix

BOSTON (UPI) — Discussions of North Sea oil exploration efforts have left him convinced the fishing industry can prosper in areas of offshore oil drilling, Gov. Edward J. King said on returning from a week-long European trip.

"We're satisfied that fishing interests have been protected over there, and they're going to be protected over here," King Wednesday told a news conference at Logan International Airport.

He repeated previous claims that proper safeguards should be in place to protect the fishing industry before oil drilling actually begins and that offshore oil is needed to reduce Massachusetts' reliance on foreign oil.

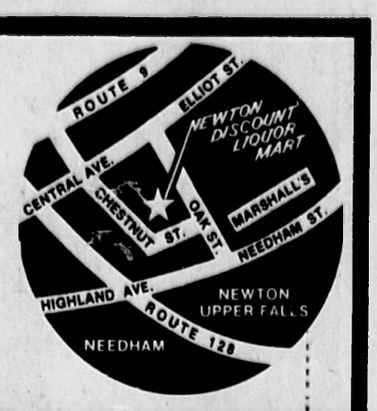

King's trip, which took him to Scotland, Belgium and England, focused on discussions of offshore oil exploration and expansion of Massachusetts business involvements with European nations.

He refused during the news conference to discuss costs of the trip, which were to be paid by both the state and private sources. Details of the costs will be released after bills have been paid, he said.

Add one more location to Mutual Bank's map of convenience, because PLUS/24 'round-the-clock banking has come to Newtonville. Now with PLUS/24 you can make deposits and loan payments, get cash or transfer funds between REDi-NOW checking or statement savings accounts.

It's the seventh convenient PLUS/24 location from Mutual Bank For Savings, designed to meet your banking needs every day of the year. If you haven't tried PLUS/24 before, now's the time, and here are two good reasons why:

FREE MAPS: Just for trying PLUS/24 at our Newtonville office, you'll receive a free, detailed driver's map of the Boston area. That's something we all can use.*

ENERGY SAVING GIFTS: When you apply for a free REDi-CASH Card (the heart and soul of PLUS/24), we'll give you an energy saving gift, free. It's just our way of saying thanks.

Stop by our Newtonville office soon and ask for a demonstration of PLUS/24. It's conveniently yours, from Mutual Bank For Savings.

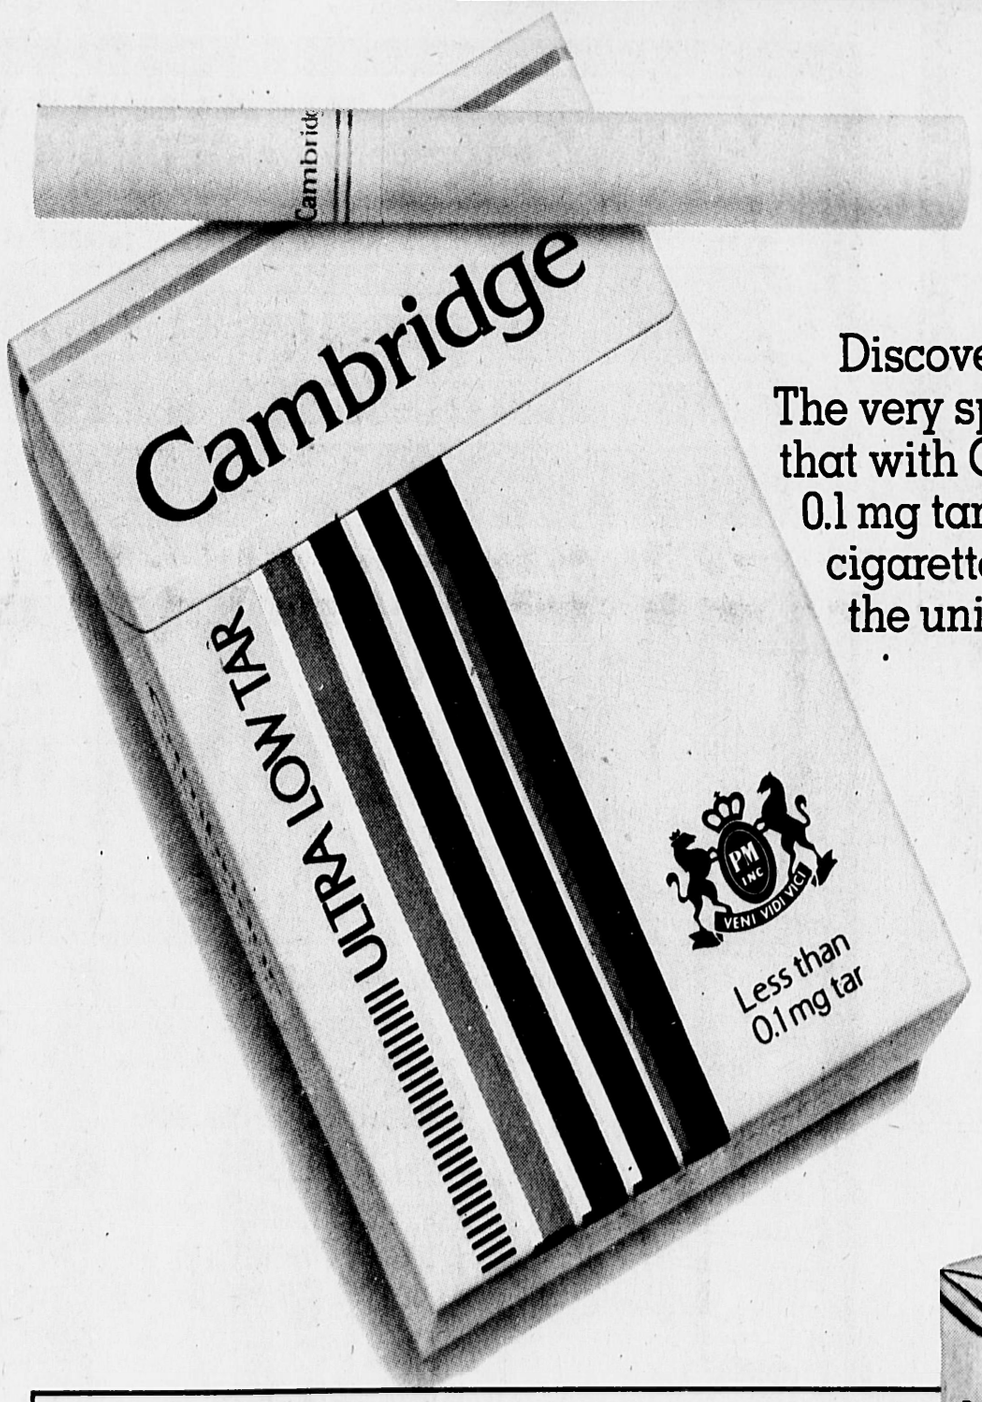

Watch "This Old House" every Wednesday at 8:00 on Channel 2.

Viking Magnetite Window
A NEW TOOL TO SAVE FUEL
The VIKING MAGNETITE window is a revolutionary new inside storm window that attaches magnetically and seals the cold out just like your refrigerator door seals the cold in. These inside insulating windows far surpass traditional storm windows doubling the resistance to conductive heat loss and eliminating air infiltration.
VIKING MAGNETITE is more than twice as efficient as standard storm windows at only a fraction of the cost. MAGNETITE is a durable system easily installed on any type of existing windows with or without old storm windows.
The MAGNETITE uses a continuous strip of magnetic material and ABS Polymer to attach the acrylic window. Millions of tiny magnets working together reducing heat loss up to 50%.

Mount Ida Junior College MINI-COURSE HORSEMANSHIP PROGRAM
Mount Ida Junior College's Horsemanship Program Mini Course offers five beginning to advanced equitation courses on a continuing education basis. The only requirement of applicants is that they are 18 years of age or older.

At Mount Ida, the Horsemanship Program is designed to progressively instruct beginning, intermediate and advanced students. Two courses are offered at each of the beginning and intermediate levels. The advanced equitation course is offered to skilled riders. Instructors follow the guidelines of the American Horse Show Association, of which they are certified members. Riding hats are mandatory.

The course is held twice a week for an hour and thirty minutes. A $25.00 deposit must accompany application, which is credited towards tuition. The tuition is $150. Classes are held Monday and Wednesday or Tuesday and Thursday at the following times:

In Marriott's Fairfield Inn Restaurant:
The Early Bird Catches the Special
Early dining now means saving at the Fairfield Inn Restaurant. Choose from the restaurant's new Early Bird Special selections any Monday through Thursday evening from 5 to 7 P.M. and enjoy a full course dinner at a special low price.
Now the whole family can afford to dine out together without compromising on food quality, atmosphere or service.
All complete Early Bird Special dinners include appetizer and dessert for only $5.95 plus tax and gratuity.
These include such nightly specials as London Broil, Stuffed Breast of Chicken, or Broiled Boston Schrod.
So now you can dine out early — and often by taking advantage of the new Fairfield Inn Early Bird Dinner Specials.

A free CentralBank bunny ...just for openers.

CentralBank/Chestnut Hill and CentralBank/Needham are giving away gifts to depositors. Just deposit $250 or more into any new or existing savings account,* and we'll give you a free bunny.
If your sweet tooth wins out, you can have the Smucker's Sundae Twosome instead — two sundae dishes and three 6-oz. jars of Smucker's ice cream toppings. Or, you can choose a 72" x 90" blanket for those chilly end-of-winter evenings.
When you deposit $5,000 or more, you can walk away with one of the following: A man's or woman's Timex Watch. Hallmark's classic Chrome Felt-Tip Pen. A three-piece Corning Ware Wildflower set, for beautiful cooking and serving. Or, a complete sixteen piece set of Homer Laughlin Ironstone Dinnerware, which is both durable and attractive.

Visit our Chestnut Hill or Needham office today and take home one of our free gifts just for openers.
Chestnut Hill Cooperative Bank is now...

REAL ESTATE NEWS

REALTORS in 17 cities and towns in southwestern Norfolk County have launched an anti-vandalism campaign as this year's "Make America Better" project, enlisting the support of fifth and sixth grade students in their area.

As part of the program, the REALTORS are showing a film on vandalism at the more than 40 schools participating in the project. After viewing the film, distributed by the National Association of Realtors, the fifth and sixth graders are asked to create anti-vandalism posters, expressing their feelings on the subject.

A winning poster will be selected at each school to be displayed in a public place, and the winning students will be presented awards during the REALTORS' "Private Property Week", April 15-21.

The program is being conducted by members of Council I & M, a regional organization of the Brokers Institute, a division of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board.

Edward F. Smith of the Audrey C. Fields office and Karen Glaser of the Florence Kates office in Canton are coordinating the project as co-chairpersons of the council's Make America Better Committee.

Council I & M represents REALTORS in Bellingham, Canton, Dedham, East Milton, Foxboro, Franklin, Mansfield, Medfield, Medway, Millis, Milton, Norfolk, Norwood, Sharon, Walpole, Westwood, and Wrentham.

CAMELOT(S)
DON'T HAVE TO COST A LOT
Make your winter dreams come true this summer by building your summer home on the finest location on the "Gateway to the Cape".
There's a lot of Camelot on this 30,300 sq ft of prime waterfront land in Wareham. It's on a beautiful, breath-taking knoll overlooking the sparkling Weweanic & Marion shore.
Yet it's only a 50 minute drive from the Greater Boston area even on the busiest of traffic weekends since you don't have to go over either of the clogged Cape Cod Canal bridges.
This Camelot is the nicest area left on the Upper Cape. A one minute walk to a private sandy ocean beach on one side while there's just a saltmarsh between you and the river on the other.
You can build your own private dock riverside or just stroll across the road to an Atlantic inlet and a spectacular view of Buzzards Bay.
Land has 165 feet fronting on water with 200 feet bordering on rustic road. Asking $30,000 and at that price it's the last bargain left on the Upper Cape. Shown by appt. only by ROD MERRILL, Realtor, Wareham. 1-295-4443.

DO YOUR KIDS HAVE A HIGHER E.Q. THAN YOU?

(Economics Quotient)

They might. Take this quick quiz and rate yourself.

True False

☐ ☐ (1.) One cause of inflation is when consumers, business and government spend too heavily on available goods and services.

☐ ☐ (2.) Since 1960, the U.S. has had the highest productivity growth rate in manufacturing of leading free world industrial nations.

☐ ☐ (3.) The value of all U.S. goods and services produced in one year is called the Gross National Product (GNP).

☐ ☐ (4.) If you have a savings account, own stock, bonds or life insurance, or are in a pension fund, you are an investor in the U.S. economy.

Did our little E.Q. quiz stump you? Your kids probably would have breezed through it. But don't feel too bad. Most people don't know even basic facts and figures about our American Economic System. In short, a lot of Economics Quotients, E.Qs., could stand improvement.

It's important. Not just because we all face some important decisions about our economic system. But because the more you know about our system, the more you'll be able to make it work for you.

A special booklet has been prepared to help you learn more about what makes our American Economic System tick. It's fact-filled, easy reading and free. It's also an easy way to raise your E.Q..

For your copy, write: "Economics," Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

ANSWERS:
1.T 2.F (U.S. ranked last) 3.T 4.T

The American Economic System.
We should all learn more about it

RN'S It's a Matter of Course

. . . a retraining course for RN's that will undoubtedly change your outlook for the future . . . a retraining course offering both theory and clinical practice for RN's who have been out of active practice or acute care nursing for 15 years or less . . . and a course of action that will help you accomplish all that you know you are capable of.

Our eight week retraining course will begin in early Spring at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Brighton. And as an added incentive, your successful employment with us after course completion may lead to tuition refund. Full and part time positions are available on weekend, evening and night shifts.

So think about it . . . because the course you choose to take will influence the rest of your years to come.

For more information, or an application form, contact Julie O'Connell at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, 782-7000 (ext. 2233 or 2247)

This retraining course is sponsored by the following hospitals:

Cardinal Cushing General Hospital - Brockton
Carney Hospital - Dorchester
St. Elizabeth's Hospital - Brighton
St. John of God Hospital - Brighton
St. Margaret's Hospital for Women - Dorchester
Sancta Maria Hospital - Cambridge

News Briefs

County position reaffirmed

Despite threats of a suit by Middlesex County Treasurer Rocco Antonelli, the Newton Board of Aldermen Monday voted again not to pay its county assessment.

By a vote of 18-4, aldermen voted not to pay $664,000 due May 1 until the county commissioners submit a report of expenditures in fiscal 1979.

Two weeks ago, Antonelli sent Newton a bill for past due assessments totalling $1.2 million and threatened to sue Newton to get his money.

Ald. Wendell Bauckman, Bruce Carmichael, James Miller and Ethel Sheehan voted against withholding the money.

St. John of Damascus

The fate of plans by St. John of Damascus Church to relocate on Dudley Road in Newton Centre will be taken up by the aldermanic Land Use Committee again on June 3.

While the city government cannot legally prohibit a church from building, there is concern over the fact there is already a church on Dudley Road, a narrow street that deadends into Rte. 9.

The Newton Law Department is exploring whether or not the church plans constitute an "overuse" of the land.

Auburndale Yard reuse

Neighbors in West Newton would like to see the vacant Auburndale City Yard used as housing, they told a recent public hearing.

Fate of the abandoned city yard hinges on a report being prepared on better deployment of Public Works forces currently using the Elliot, Crafts, Watertown and Crescent streets and Rumford Avenue city facilities.

The report on Public Works deployment should be ready in June.

Mileage meters for police

The Newton Police Department is planning to purchase four fuel meters which measure the amount of gasoline being used at any given time in a cruiser.

The meters can be used to check fuel efficiency and click off each time a spoonful of gas is used.

The meters cost about $500 each and are being purchased with extra funds budgeted for meters on the department's gas pumps.

Sick skunks a problem

Police Chief William Quinn has issued a warning that Newton residents should avoid skunks now coming out of hibernation because many are suffering from a non-contagious virus.

Affected skunks walk slowly in circles, are unsteady on their feet or seem to walk off balance. There may be a yellow discharge from the eyes.

Anyone who sees a sick skunk should call Animal Control at 552-7253.

Historic chairman resigns

Elisie Husher, chairman of the Newton Historical Commission has resigned her chairmanship effective June 1.

Mrs. Husher has been chairman of the commission since 1974. During her tenure, Colby Hall of Andover Newton Theological School and Lasell Castle have been included in the National Register of Historic Places and funds were allocated for the preservation of the Bigelow House in Oak Hill and the Allen House in West Newton.

Mrs. Husher will remain a commission member.

Liquor store to appeal

The Highlands Beverage Co., 9 Woodward St., Newton Highlands, has appealed a two-week suspension handed down by the Newton Board of License Commissioners to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC).

An ABCC hearing will be held in June. According to the liquor store's attorney the appeal is based on the severity of the penalty.

Warren money held

The sum of $184,000 requested to pay for repairs to fire-damaged Warren Junior High School in West Newton was sent to the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee Monday night for further review.

Murray, Weeks reuse

Recommendations on the reuse of the Murray Road School in West Newton and Weeks Junior High School in Newton Centre have been referred to the aldermanic Finance Committee, which sets the prices of the buildings for sale.

Previous aldermanic committees have recommended that Murray Road be torn down to make way for housing or re-used as housing.

Weeks Junior High is earmarked for a mix of elderly and low-income housing with elderly housing predominating.

Funds for bus route

Mayor Theodore Mann will ask for a $14,000 appropriation from a reserve account to fund two experimnental bus routes that will start in September.

One route will start at the Chestnut Hill Green Line station and connect the Chestnut Hill shopping center areas to Newton Centre as did MBTA Rte. 59 prior to its termination last year.

The bus will continue from Newton Centre to the Marshall's Mall on Needham Street and the Needham Street industrial area.

The second route will connect Auburndale and the Boston College area with a bus running from Auburndale Square to Beacon Street via Grove Street. At Newton Centre it will change to Commonwealth Avenue and proceed to Boston College.

Waban target for break-ins

Police report a rash of breaks in Waban recently, all of them near Beacon Street between Newton-Wellesley Hospital and Waban Square.

All breaks occurred after 6 p.m. and entrance was gained in all cases through doors and windows in the rear of the houses. Silverware was the prime target.

Cohen tries MBTA reform

State Rep. David Cohen (D-Newton) is cosponsoring legislation to reform MBTA personnel practices.

His bill would allow the MBTA to set staffing levels, hire part-time workers, set standards of productivity and establish minimum qualifications for job applicants.

Appropriation sought

The Newton School Committee has requested an appropriation of $497,451 to cover unexpected school expenses for special education tuition and fuel oil.

Special education tuitions have increased in the past three years from $457,000 to $990,000, or 116 percent. During the past year, the increase was $300,000 or 43 percent.

Before the end of the fiscal year June 30, the School Department will buy another 150,00 to 180,000 gallons of oil.

Drinan's departure from office shocks, stuns local supporters

By CYNTHIA BLACK
Political Analysis

NEWTON — Anita Greenbaum recalls how it all started 10 years ago at a meeting of the once-powerful, now defunct Newton Coalition for New Politicas (NCNP).

Coalition members, infuriated and frustrated by the continuing war in Vietnam, were discussing who they could find to run for Congress as an anti-war candidate.

Someone suggested Father Robert Drinan, dean of the Boston College Law School. Others figured he was a "long-shot" to accept the bid and knew he'd have to get permission to run from the Jesuits.

They asked him, and he got permission.

The NCNP meeting was followed by a caucus of Democrats. Drinan was vying with John Kerry, a Vietnam veteran and member of Vietnam Veterans Against the War, for the support of the caucus.

After three ballots, Drinan won the support and with the help of a then unknown John Martilla and an army of Newton supporters, won the election too.

"The main thing about this is that the citizens asked him to run' " Mrs. Greenbaum noted. "I don't think he would have done it himself."

Invitations are in the mail to what was to have been a 10th anniversary party and campaign kick-off for the five-term congressman Saturday night.

The party is still on, but its tenor has changed to a gathering of people shaken and angered by Congressman Drinan's abrupt removal from politics.

"We're losing the best congressman in the country, you know," Anita Greenbaum said matter-of-factly.

"But we're not going to abandon him just because he'll be out of office," she continued. "He's not just another congressman."

"This decision by Pope John Paul II sets ecumenism back in the Fourth Congressional District about as far as you can set it back," Harry Crosby, a long-time Newton liberal activist and Drinan campaigner said in an interview Tuesday night.

While Drinan and others have denied it, Crosby feels the "Right-to-Life" people, who have run candidates in opposition to Drinan in every election and lost, finally found a way to do him in.

He also described the congressman's obedience to the dictates of his church "an eloquent testimony to discipline."

Dorothy Reichard, a former School Committeewoman and district director of Congressman Drinan's office in Waltham, bears the burden of carrying on with the district's business.

The congressman called her Saturday, she recalled, to tell her he had "sad news" for her.

"It was a real shock," she said about learning he could not run again. "I called a staff meeting on Sunday so that everyone would know before the press conference Monday."

"I went to work on Tuesday and I thought it would be okay," she said. "The first person I met in the hall said, 'I'm so sorry,' and it just started all over again."

Mrs. Reichard said the office has received hundreds of what amount to condolence calls and very few asking for constitutent services.

She also said the office intends to contiune its work and constituent service through the end the of the congressman's current term.

That includes his periodic office hours in towns and cities within the district and his reports to the district on legislation in Congress.

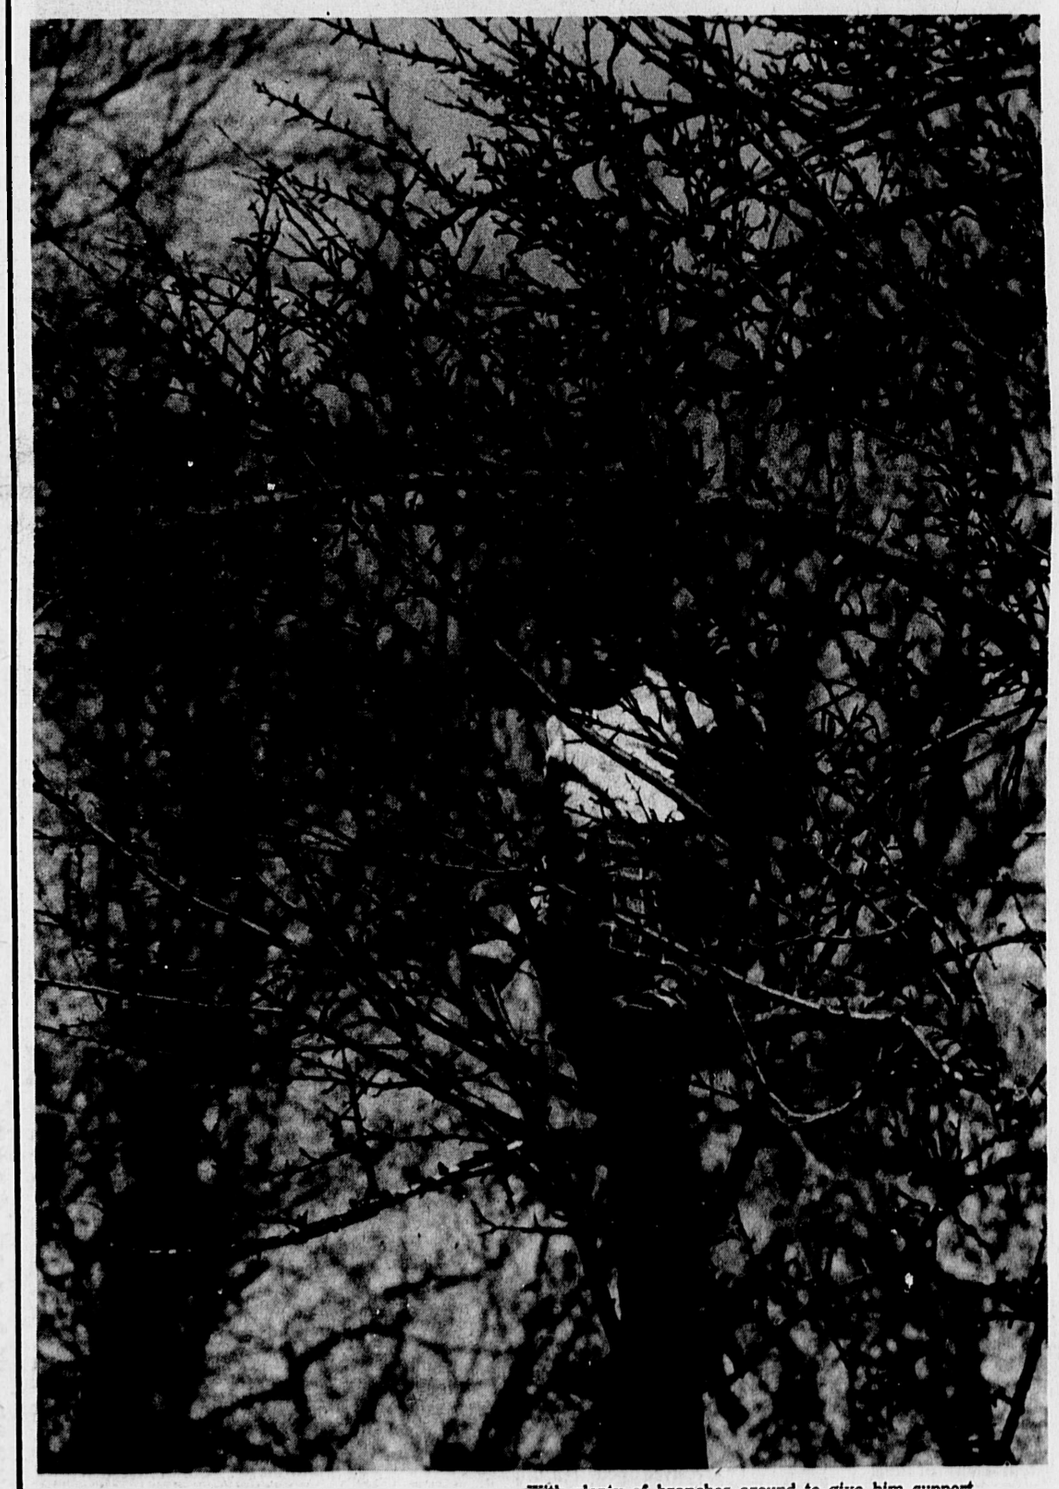

"How do we begin to wind down?", she wondered.

Ald. Ethel Sheehan has also been a Drinan supporter from the beginning 10 years ago.

"Sadness was my first reaction," she recalled, "and an inability to understand the pope's ruling because being a Christian 'witness' is caring for the poor and stopping violence, and I think that Congressman Drinan has been doing exactly that for 10 years!"

The sudden Drinan departure from the congressional race changed it

School Racism Report Unveiled

NEWTON — The Newton School Committee has released the first half of a report on school system response to racism, a 77-page compilation of educational material that fosters positive racial images.

Not included in the report is an assessment of material in the system that may foster negative racial images despite the fact the study was prompted in January by complaints on the use of a film called "The Hunters" at Newton North.

Norman Colb, assistant superintendent for program, said identifying obsolete educational material was not the purpose of the review.

Library Coordinator David Whiting said he did not doubt there is obsolete material on the shelves in the schools, but he said it is difficult to a obtain appropriate material.

Availability of material does not seem to be the problem, according to the report, but how it is used may be.

The second part of the report, due in October, will focus on materials, teaching techniques and activities in use that promote positive racial images.

Underlying the discussion in January was a jurisdictional dispute between Social Studies and Black Studies over the movie.

At a recent School Committee meeting, the dispute came up again with some committee members questioning whether school and individual teacher autonomy to select materials should be subservient to a citywide program to develop positive racial attitudes.

Race awareness has been fostered in some areas that have limited impact on curriculum, School Committeewoman Katherine Jones maintained.

Black Studies, she pointed out, were developed to "mesh with an existing curriculum."

Colb commented that there are two approaches to the problem: depict blacks day by day in a variety of roles and life situations as part of classwork, or teach in a way that deals head-on with racism.

"The first solution is preferable," Colb said.

Mayor mulling country club purchase

NEWTON — A resolution asking Mayor Theodore Mann to authorize a $700,000 bond issue to purchase the Chestnut Hill Country Club has been sent to the Planning Department for review, Mann said Tuesday.

The Board of Aldermen voted 22-0 Monday to ask the mayor to authorize the bond issue, and Mann said their act the action was a "disappointment."

"I'm disappointed because I thought we had this worked out to the point where sufficient housing units would be built to take care of the cost of acquisition of the golf course," Mann said.

"This (the resolution) is not as good a deal for the city as the one I negotiated, but it has to be considered—provided the abutters comply with the betterment district," Mann said.

More than 71 of the a 81-acre course could be purchased by the city for use as a public, 18-hole golf course at less than 75 cents per square foot.

The state Office of Environmental Affairs will reimburse the city $125,000 in federal funds toward the purchase of the land as open space.

The betterment assessment onsnearby properties would generate $200,000 over a 20-year period, but Mann wants the 50 abutters who would be assessed to agree to the additional assessment first.

The remaining 10 acres of land would go to Barkan Properties for development of luxury townhouses.

The townhouse development at a minimum sale price of $175,000 per unit is expected, in turn, to generate about $200,000 annually in taxes which would offset the initial capital outlay by the city. The city could also recover about $186,000 in back taxes due it from the Chestnut Hill Country Club.

The country club was sold at auction in April 1979 to a group of neighbors who put up a $50,000 downpayment. The failing Chestnut Hill Country Club had been a target for large-scale development proposals prior to its acquisition by the neighbors who want it preserved as open space.

At the time of purchase, there was to be no city money involved in saving the land.

Neighbors originally advanced a plan for city ownership of the public golf coursed that was to be paid for by state and federal funds.

The funding fell through.

Then came the proposal to sell 10 acres of the land for development of 60 townhouses to pay the price of acquisition.

Barkan Properties intended 40 townhouses off Algonquin Road and 20 off Kenrick Street. When Algonquin Road abutters objected en masse to 40 townhouses, this plan fell through.

The city's portion, at this point, rose from $0 to $475,000.

A plan to assess abutters and near-abutters for the proposed betterment district was pared down to abutters only, and the city's contribution rose again.

from a "ho-hum" election to a mad scramble.

Democrats who submitted nomination papers for certification include: John Kerry, Waltham Mayor Arthur Clark, State Rep. Barney Frank of Boston, Governor's Councillor Herbert Connolly of West Newton, Fitchburg Mayor David Gilmartin, Brookline Town Clerk John Kendrick, State Rep. David Mofenson of Newton, former state representative Jon Rotenberg of Brookline and Robert Shaffer, a Fitchburg businessman.

Mayor Theodore Mann and Richard Jones of Harvard, a retired Army dentist, are the Republicans who filed nomination papers.

Drinan's people voted Sunday that they will make no endorsement of a successor until "we see who's viable," Harry Crosby reported.

Crosby sees Kerry and Frank as the frontrunners in the race. Kerry is an "able campaigner," but Frank's position as a "carpetbagger" will be a negative he'd have to overcome in Newton.

Frank lives in Boston and represents the Back Bay, although he has said he'll move into this district.

Rotenberg ran against Drinan as an Independent a few years ago. "Drinan's people will rise up in wrath against him," Crosby said.

Crosby also said that Dave Mofenson's ties to Newton State Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci may give him some trouble in Newton liberal circles.

Crosby had no comment on Arthur Clark, the Waltham mayor.

Mayor Mann, he felt, will "waltz through the primary" because his opposition is a "Right-to-Life" candidate.

Newton firm against county tax

NEWTON—It appears that neither the mayor or the Board of Aldermean is about to pay the delinquent $1.8 million in Middlesex County assessments.

The aldermen held back this week the third consecutive assessment. Mayor Theodore D. Mann Thursday backed up the decision after the county failed to produce requested financial information.

The city has not paid an assessment for more than one year. Newton pays the county's largest assessment and aldermen have asked the three county commissioners to justify their request and to explain how the city benefits from county services.

Mann said Thursday a financial statement produced by the county does not comply with state law which requires a detailed report on an annual basis.

Except for a debt statement included in county Treasurer Rocco Antonelli's report, Mann is still waiting for reports on highway work, county building repairs, reservoir and dam inspection, salary information and an inventory of the county's fixed assessts. "In addition" Mann said, "county officials have indicated Newton would be paid for processing (parking ticket) summonses, a total of $25,572, but no check has been received by our treasurer."

Mann has filed legislation that would merge county functions with existing state agencies effectively abolishing county government with a vote of the constituent communities.

"Newton is assessed the largest sum of money of any community in Middlesex County and we find ourselves receiving virtually no services for an expenture of more than $1 million per year," Mann said.

"While the country treasurer is not responsible for that situation, consideration should be given to our reuest for information and to the payment of moenny we feel is justly due our community," Mann added.

Arts Center sets fund drive

NEWTONVILLE — The Newton Arts Center has launches a spring 1980 Capital Funds Drive to run from mid-April to mid-June. The campaign is intended to raise funds necessary to complete renovation of the center's historic Newtonville building. Funds are also needed to purchase additional equipment for the innovative teaching and performance center.

Members of the center, community leaders, residents, and Newton-based businesses are being asked to participate in the drive.

In operation for four years in a converted 19th century church, the center has emerged as an important community facility. With a membership that grown to 2,000, the center offers a diverse selection of courses in the fine and performing arts. It has also hosted several well-known performing groups, mounted critically acclaimed art shows, and participated in a variety of community projects involving groups from school children to the elderly.

The ultimate goal of the capital drive is to make available the center's offerings and facilities to an even larger segment of the Newton community.

The Arts Center operates with a volunteer board, a small full-time paid staff, and with several part-time instructors. In announcing the campaign earlier this month, board member and drive chairperson Joanne Guzzi commented: "The establishment of a truly creative and active center for the arts is a goal shared by many. In four short years, much progress has been made as thousands of community residents have demonstrated their interest and support of the Newton Arts Center."

Funds donated to the center through the Capital Funds Drive will be earmarked for several specific projects, including lighting and accoustical improvements in the facility's main performance auditorium and renovations and equipment for the dance, art and photography studios.

Those interested in learning more about the Spring 1980 Capital Funds Drive can visit the center at 61 Washington Park or phone 964-3424.

Submits budget

BOSTON — State Rep. David J. Mofenson (D-Newton) has inserted two amendments in the 1981 budget, both of which have been accepted by the House of Representatives.

The first of these amendments assures timely payments by the Department of Public Welfare to independent living centers for the provision of and payment for personal care attendant services.

The other amendment increases the financial eligibility limits for home care services by a percentage equal to the percentage increase in federal Social Security benefits for fiscal year 1981 not to exceed 14.4 percent.

"I have been trying over the past two months to increase public awareness of the fact that many disabled persons are suffering extreme hardship from delays in processing payments due them from the Welfare Department," Mofenson said. "At present, independent living centers which serve disabled persons are unable to pay personal care attendants (PCAs) on a regular schedule because they themselves are experiencing 10-to 17-week delays in receiving money due them. As dedicated as most PCAs are, they simply cannot remain in jobs in which they must go for months without pay. Loss of these PCAs threatens disabled persons who are presently productive, contributing members of society with the specter of re-institutionalization. I believe this would be tragic for both the handicapped individuals involved and for the society as a whole."

The homemaker amendment for which Rep. Mofenson received support in the House is, according to the Newton lawmaker,"just as urgently needed, because without it many elderly persons now provided with essential home care services will become ineligible for homecare programs when their Social Security benefits are increased in July."

Ed Asner, starGrant," of TV's "Lou will be featured at the Maimonides School annual spring auction on Sunday, May 11 at 7 p.m. at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel grand ballroom, announced Reva Gertel and Joan Solomont, co-chairmen of the event. South Track Team Beats Bedford

NEWTON — After two rain postponed meets and many serious injuries to key runners, the Newton South High School Boy's Track team, coached by Don Sutherland and Paul McCarthy, ran over Bedford High School, 88-57.

The 4x110 relay team consisting of Paul Miller, Louis Dakoyannis, Andy Ravech and Mark King blazed to victory, setting the pace for the entire meet. Members of this same strong relay team individually competed and dominated the sprints. Senior sprinter and Co-captain Ravech, returning from an ankle injury, clocked a quick 11.1 placing first in the 100-yard dash; Dakoyannis showed fine speed placing second. King, one of the Dual County League's top sprinters, burned a 24.14 in the 220-yard sprint placing first, while Miller ran a speedy 26.2 for second.

Senior Greg Walsh placed second in the 120 high hurdles with a time of 18.05 and sophmore Eric Kaplan placed third with 19.9. In the 330 low hurdles, Co-captain Jim Shulman placed first with a quick 44.2, and Co-captain Mevin Richardson, despite a fall, placed third with a 45.2.

South Harriers swept the 440-yard run. Shulman pulled out of pack placing first with a 57.2; sophmore George Groussis, placed second with a 59.0; and Michael Klugerman ran against the clock to capture third place.

After an extremely successful track career at Meadowbrook Jr. High, Scott Buffington has returned to track after a two season absence. Buffington, running in alpha, showed fine form and excellent speed, winning the 880 in a time of 2.16. This race also showed a most exciting finish as Matt Kelly raced stride for stride to the finish line with a Bedford competitor. He lost by mere inches, yet still placed third.

Truly the most exciting race turned out to be the 1-mile, where veteran cross-country and track runner, Bob Partridge, came back from behind in the final lap to steal victory with an excellent time of 5.04. Mark Konig placed third against two strong experienced Bedford runners, to place third in the 2-mile with a 11:56.

Jumping with a bandaged arm, Richardson has returned from a serious arm injury; still he placed first in a sweep of the long jump, and first in the triple jump. He jumped 19'0 in the long jump, and 39'8" in the triple jump; while Miller jumped 17'9" for second in the long jump and 35' ½" in the triple jump also for second. Returning letterman, John Koteen placed third in the triple jump.

Dave "Bubba" Smith placed first in both muscle events; in the shot-put with a heave of 38'7" and in the discus with a throw of 92'0". Ben Schwalb, out for his first season of track at South, placed second in the shot put with a heave of 32' 1 ½". Peter Davos, outdistanced everyone with a chuck of 152" in the javelin. Groussis threw an admirable 116" for third place.

The meet ended as it had started; a clean victory in a relay. The team of sophmore Peter Schlossman, Shulman, Buffington, and Klugerman, clocked an impressive time of 3:44 in the 4x440 relay.

The final score was 88-57. This places South with a 1-0 season. The next meet will be Thursday, May 8, at Acton-Boxborough.

Alex J. Castoldi, vice president of operations for Boston-based Redstone Theaters, was elected president of Theater Owners of New England (T.O.N.E.) at their annual meeting April 8. Castoldi is also vice president of the National Association of Consessionaires. He also serves on the board of directors of both the National Association of Theater Owners and the Variety Club of New England. Castoldi, who lives in Newton with his wife Mary' has been with Redstone Theaters since 1963. T.O.N.E., a motion picture exhibitor trade association, is the organization that spearheaded passage of the anti-blind bidding bill which is now a law in the state of Massachusetts.

Medical library established at NWH in honor of surgeon

LOWER FALLS — Newton-Wellesley Hospital surgeon Dr. James K. Vernon of Weston, who directed the hospital's Emergency Unit Service for five years until the recent reorganization, was honored recently by the hospital, the city of Newton, and the Newton Fire Department at a surprise reception.

Of the many tributes paid to Dr. Vernon, the most significant was Newton Fire Chief Edward B. Reilly's announcement of the establishment of the James K. Vernon, M.D. Emergency Medical Service Library at Newton-Wellesley Hospital "to further the knowledge, education, and expertise of all persons whose interests lie in emergency medical care." Some shelves in the NWH library have been designated to accommodate this collection of books.

Chief Reilly presented Dr. Vernon with a certificate of recognition citing him for his "unselfish gift of dedication, time and expertise" and for undertaking "the responsibility of training and certifying Emergency Medical Technicians of the Newton Fire Department in the administration of adrenalin in the management of anaphylactic reaction..." NWH Emergency Department nurse Marlene O'Keefe, R.N., was also instrumental in certifying the local EMT's for that medical procedure.

Those who participated in Dr. Vernon's reception represent the joining of forces among the city of Newton, the Newton Fire Department, and Newton-Wellesley Hospital to coordinate the further development of community emergency medical services. They included Newton Mayor Theodore D. Mann, Newton Fire Chief Edward B. Reilly, Jr., Lt. William Bailey, firefighters Harold Trainor and Byron Prescott, and the president of the Newton Firefighters' Association, Richard A. Ciccone. Representatives of N4wton-Wellesley Hospital administration were also present along with Emergency Department staff and Dr. and Mrs. Desmond P. Colohan of Wellesley. Dr. Colohan is the newly-appointed chief of the Emergency Department at NWH.

Dr. Vernon was presented with a badge by the Fire Department signifying his role as the first medical director for the department. As the new chief of Emergency at NWH, Dr. Colohan also received a badge recognizing him as the present medical director.

Dr. Colohan's initial responsibility will include the recruitment of a full-time complement of physicians specializing in emergency medicine, as well as the development of coordinated emergency medical services in the area.

Roger Curtis to be N.A.A. guest artist

AUBURNDALE — The final meeting of the season for the Newton Art Association will take place on Wednesday, May 7 at 7:30 p.m. at the Women's Workshop, 72 Columbus St., Newton Highlands.

The guest artist will be Roger Curtis, famous for his paintings of the sea. He will demonstrate his painting technique by doing a seascape in oils.

Curtis is represented in many private collections throughout New England, as well as in Maryland, Alabama, New York and Pennsylvania. His paintings are also in the collection of the Mellon Bank, Pittsburgh, Pa; the National Shawmut Bank of Boston; the Eastern Gas and Fuel in Boston; the Raytheon Corp., Massachusetts; Microwave, Burlington, Mass.

He is the founder and driving force behind the new Affiliated Art Associations of Massachusetts, of which Newton Art Association is a member. He is also director and founder of the New England Artists Group, founder of the Burlington Art Association, and the owner of the Riverview Gallery, Gloucester. He is painting instructor at the New England Artists Workshop, and former director and manager of the Ledgendsea Gallery (A. T. Hibbard) for 17 years.

He has exhibited in galleries throughout the United States, and has won many awards, including three Waters of the World awards, three Academic Artists Association awards, and awards and prizes from the Fresno Art League, the Cathalbe prize, Ogunquit, Maine, Seas of the World award, and North Shore Arts Association awards.

He is listed in Who's Who in America, Who's Who in the East, and Who's Who in American Art.

During this final meeting of the season the members of N.A.A. will present the Newton Art Association Scholarship Award and the second special Mary Holzwasser Award to the winners of this years scholarship competition. The award of $250.00 given by Mary Holzwasser is greatly appreciated.

At the conclusion of the meeting there will be a short social hour and refreshments will be served. The public is cordially invited to attend the demonstration to be given by this well-known artist, and to share in our pleasure at granting the scholarships. There is a snall guest fee of $1 to non-members.

Nursery school

NEWTONVILLE—The nursery school at Newton North High School,run for the past seven years as part of the Home Economics department's Child Development Program, is enrolling children for next year.

Children aged three and a quarter years to five years are eligible. Fee is $448 for the school year, which begins Sept. 22 and ends May 29. Sessions are held Tuesdays through Fridays from 9:15 to noon.

For information or registration call 552-7477.

Community Centers to start Davis campaign

WEST NEWTON — President John T. Eller, of the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc. has announced the start of the 1980 Sustaining Membership Davis for the agency.

The NCSC, Inc. began 73 years ago in West Newton. From its slender beginning in 1907, the agency has grown to a point where it serves over 5,500 people each year, from Newton's youngest to its oldest residents.

Currently NCSC's program and activities help the young and their families. Involvement spans infant-toddler care and preschool day care. The agency sponsors and staff a highly credited child center and two summer day camps.

NCSC reaches out to assist adolescents and their families. There are six youth centers in Newton's several villages held in conjunction with the city's recreation department, and the teenage Job Bank creates otherwise non-existant jobs for youth. The Job Bank operates with the help of the Department of Mental Health and the Newton Office of Human Services through the Youth Commission. The teenage athletic programs, theatre arts, Summer Scene are a sampling of the agencies' varied offerings.

Senior citizen participants through RSVP, the daily hot lunch program, and weekly club meetings are all included in the agencies listing of activity.

In his plea for support this year, Eller pointed out that the centers are taking every step to insure maximum quality service at lowest possible costs. The spiralling cost of living, however, is driving up costs while increasing the use of programs, deepening the need for financial help for others utilizing the service.

Individuals interested in receiving the appeal mailing should write the centers at 429 Cherry St., West Newton, 02165 to the attention of Mr. Eller.

Engagements

Sherman-Oriel

Judith Sherman

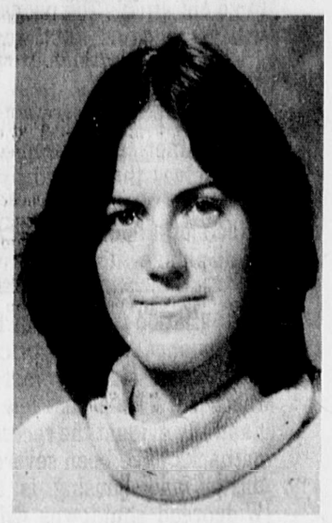

Mr. and Mrs. Saul A. Sherman of Newton Centre announce the engagement of their daughter, Judith Louise, to Robert Stephen Oriel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Oriel of Waban.

Miss Sherman is a graduate of Newton South High School and Lesley College. She is employed as an administrative executive in Chestnut Hill.

Mr. Oriel, a graduate of Newton South High School and Newton Junior College, is a sales representative in the New England area.

A fall wedding is planned.

Amy Pobst

Mr. and . Mrs. John J. Pobst of Newton Centre announce the engagement of their daughter, Amy Rice Pobst, to J. Gordon Scannell, Jr., of Brookline, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Scannell of Belmont.

Miss Pobst was graduated from Newton North High School in 1974 and will be a candidate for graduation from Boston University School of Nursing in 1981. She lettered in swimming at high school and plays hockey and softball for BU.

Mr. Scannell graduated from Belmont Hill School in 1971 and from Harvard College, cum laude, in 1975. He played hockey for both schools and coached hockey in Spain for a year. He will receive an MA in education from Boston University in May. He is a member of the Schussverein.

A June 28 wedding is planned.

Dr. Leon Remis and Deborah Shelkan

Shelkan-Remis

Cantor and Mrs. Gregor Shelkan of Newton announce the engagement of their daughter, Deborah Ruth, to Leon Lawrence Remis, M.D., son of Mr. and Mrs. David Remis of Peabody.

Miss Shelkan holds a BA degree with honors in sociology from Case Western Reserve University, and received a master's degree in public health from the University of Pittsburgh. She has worked in the health care field for three years and plans to attend the Human Services Management Program at the Florence Heller School of Brandeis University in June.

Dr. Remis received a BA degree in biology from Brandeis University and a doctor of medicine from Boston University School of Medicine. After finishing an internship at Mount Zion Hospital, San Francisco, he completed a residency program in ophthalmology at Wills Eye Hospital in Philadelphia. He is presently a practising eye physician in Marblehead.

An August wedding is planned.

Thornbury-Young

Mrs. Mary C. Thornbury of Annapolis, Md., announces the engagement of her daughter, Jennifer Jo, to John V. Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Young of Newton Lower Falls.

Miss Thornbury attended Anne Arundel Community College of Arnold, Md., and was graduated from Mount Ida Junior College.

Mr. Young holds a BS degree from Boston College and a JD degree from New England School of Law. He is presently employed by Corroon & Black Inc., of Boston.

A June wedding is planned.

Representatives from Bartlett Tree Experts and the Massachusetts Audobon Society gather with Mayor Theodore Mann and some city workers at a special tree planting held on Arbor Day at City Hall. The planting of the Japanese Katsura, which was donated by Seltzer's Garden City in Newton, was also held in commemoration of Earth Week.

Perspectives

Getting into recession

As in the Iranian hostage rescue mission, President Carter might suddenly decide the nation needs wage-price control. If he does, new controversry will boil over necessity versus political expediency.

Carter must be sorely tempted to preempt a position opponent Ted Kennedy is so stridently exploiting in his barnstorming. As he finally deserts the Rose Garden to go out among the people, the President will be anxious to test the national mood.

Inflation, more than the recurring foreign crises, is the principal concern of the American people. They find themselves threatened by constantly rising prices which shrink the dollar and the effects of a deepening recession they fear could plunge into depression.

Stagflation is what they have labeled the continuance of high prices in a period when recessionary factors are being recorded. These past few weeks made it painfully evident the recession is here. Job cutbacks have been severe in the auto industry and housing is at a new low. Widepread shutdowns will take place in other industries as the market contracts. That the economy is in reverse gear could be seen from the gradual reduction, at last, of the prime rate from its 20 per cent peak.

Declining interest rates are on the bright side certainly. A real question to middle America is whether an 18 per cent annual inflation surge can be halted and a steady reduction in the consumer prices take place.

While administration spokesmen talk wishfully of a mild, short-lived recession, financial analysts who look for a deep, long period of readjustment are said by the Wall St. Journal to be in the majority.

Nevertheless, can there be any justification for wage-price controls apart from the desire on Mr. Carter's part to salvage a beleaguered campaign for re-election?

He has only to look back within a decade when Richard Nixon did so in 1971 and extended the controls later to brighten the economic outlook in advance of the 1972 election. Not all economists disagreed with the action.

The later judgment was that it had been so badly managed it sowed seeds for the deepest recession since World War II. More than this, it proved only a temporary check on inflation and set the stage for the overblown economy now engulfing Jimmy Carter and the rest of us.

Nothing the Carter administration has done so far in its wage-price restraint effort is encouraging enough to convince us it would carry out the procedures and discipline needed to make controls work.

Its inability to achieve anything substantial in voluntary compliance with established guidelines has to be a reason why we're in so much trouble. It might try beefing up this activity before taking the big plunge.

My Turn

Newton as it was in 1884

By CYNTHIA BLACK

J. Wesley Kimball has just begun his first term as mayor of Newton. Henry M. and Frank H. Burt are the editors of the Newton Graphic, located in the "Post Office Block" on Centre Street in Newton Centre.

The names Hyde, Carter, Mason, Rice, Pomroy, Cousens, Farlow, Kingsbury, Pulsifer, Burr figure prominently in the week's news.

Welcome to Newton, Mass., as it was in 1884' described in the pages of this newspaper.

I've always enjoyed the infrequent opportunities I've had to see issues of the Graphic from years ago. The newspaper as chronicle of everyday life provides insights no history book can match.

Each name you see and location mentioned leads you to try and visualize what Newton looked like at the time.

Recently, City Archivist Priscilla Ritter rescued bound copies of the Newton Graphic from the library trash heap (the library's got them all on microfilm) and took them to City Hall for storage.

Presented with this golden opportunity, and with the help of City Clerk Edward English, I found the oldest volume I could. It turned out to be 1884, almost 100 years ago.

The Pomroy House, Cousens Fund, Farlow Park, Mason-Rice School, Hyde School and Burr Park all come alive in the pages of the 1884 Newton Graphic.

It was a time when journalism tended to be blunt ("he dropped dead") and prejudicial ("James Smith, the defaulter") in its coverage of day-to-day events.

The Newton Graphic was already 12 years old in 1884. It cost 5 cents on the newsstand and $2 for a year's subscription.

Its ornate, hand-drawn nameplate proclaimed it the repository for "news, literature and opinion."

News was divided by villages with "Newton" being the most prolific. Items ran the gamut from who was giving a tea to who was run over by a train.

Page 2 was devoted to "literature," and featured essays, short stories and "translations from the French."

Sermons were popular, along with an accounting of births, deaths, marriages, and real estate transactions.

One I don't quite understand was a weekly list of unclaimed letters at the post office. Did everyone go to the post office to get their mail or was it delivered?

Here is Newton as told in the pages of the May 3, 1884 Graphic:

Newton

The horse of W.H. Brackett's delivery wagon left its driver behind at Mrs. Hart's boarding house Tuesday morning and ran down Washington Street, bringing up at Center Street crossing where it was stopped. No damage was done. C.A. Biscotti has opened his fruit store at the corner of Center and Washington Streets. S.F. Barker, watchmaker, has removed to Biscotti's old place in Howes' Block. Base ball: Thursday, Wide Awakes 44, Hawthornes of West Newton, 16. (I'm not quite sure they'd gotten the hang of baseball at this point since most of the scores are like this one.)

West Newton

Fire caught in Nickersons's block Saturday night from an upset kerosene lamp. Damage was slight. The May Day Festival furnished a pleasant entertainment to young and old on Tuesday. A May pole dance, flower chorus and an exhibition by a ventrilolquist were the afternoon attractions, and a large company danced to the music of Behr's orchestra in the evening.

Newtonville

The attempt of Shaw Bros. to compromise with their creditors is likely to be a failure and the estate will probably be settled by Assignee Wyman. A.T. Ring has sold his house and lot on Chesley place to a Mr. Shayler of New York for $4500.

Newton Center

The trustees of the estate of the late Gardner Colby have signified to Judge Bonney, treasurer of the Colby university, their readiness to pay over to the college the $120,000 provided for in the will of Mr. Colby.

Newton Highlands

C.C. Potter is building a small and tasty Queen Anne house on Hyde Street. Lyman Ross is building a Queen Anne house, which will be an ornament to the village, on Hartford Street. J.M. Pevear is erecting two houses on Floral Avenue.

Newton Upper Falls

The mystery surrounding the death of F.A. Mathey was cleared up on Saturday by the findimg of his watch in the Charles River near the abutment of the railroad bridge. The watch and chain were found by a boy named J.W.C. Easterbrook, who recovered them by diving. The finding of the watch disposes of the theory of robbery and murder, and it is evident that the unfortunate man fell from the bridge and was drowned..

And, finally, this:

City Government

The common council transacted concurrent business on Monday evening and received petitions for repairing sidewalks on Grove Street, for improving sidewalk at the corner of Grove and Auburn streets, for regrading Lexington Street and raising the grade, and for a stone crosswalk on Washington Street at Elm Street. Orders were passed for the laying of watermain in Claremont Street, to cost $423, and in Hyde Street, to cost $60; authorizing the printing of 1000 copies of the auditor's report and 400 of the city engineer's; appropirating $100 for expenses of Memorial Day and directing the military committee to make the necessary arrangements.

A Nightmare Begins Again-Drinan

By ROBERT DRINAN

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Vietnam War era was a nightmare for all Americans, but for some the nightmare continues even today.

A recent study shows that 60 percent of all Vietnam veterans experienced emotional, psychological, drug, alcohol, or physical problems when they returned home. Even more disturbing is the fact that two-thirds of this group, 40 percent of all Vietnam veterans, continues to experience these problems.

To address the needs of these Vietnam veterans, I have joined a number of other members of Congress in sponsoring the Vietnam Veterans Comprehensive Readjustment and Rehabilitation Act. This bill would establish a new program for career development, advancement, and training for veterans, and would permit an extension of the cutoff date for educational benefits.

We cannot end the trama or heal the wounds of the Vietnam War until these veterans, who served in good faith, are given an opportunity to enter the mainstream of American society.

Social Security Proposal

I recently wrote to HEW Secretary Patricia Harris to ask her not to implement a proposal under which government representatives would prosecute cases against disabled individuals applying for Social Security or SSI benefits. Under the proposed experiment, each time a disabled person applied for benefits a well-prepared professional would tip the scales against disabled persons, and force them to hire attorneys that they can ill-afford.

This week Secretary Harris responded to my letter. She has assured me that the proposal has been dropped, and that "we are exploring alternate means for improving the overall adjudicatory process." I commend the secretary for abandoning this ill-advised proposal which would have placed an inequitable burden on disabled Americans.

Preserving Wilderness

The U.S. Forest Service has for years been developing a comprehensive system for America's wilderness areas, a system that would leave some areas untouched, while opening others to commercial development.

This carefully considered approach is now coming under fire by lumber, oil and other special interests who want large tracts of this land opened up immediately for large scale development.

These heavily financed groups are pressuring congressmen to sponsor a bill that would open up for permanent development any forest area not specifically designated as "wilderness" by Congress before January 1, 1984. Their bill would also in effect repeal provisions of the 1964 Wilderness Act which protect "primative" areas of national forests.

The strong opposition of environmental groups such as the Sierra Club, and the growing concern of members of Congress makes me confident that we can stop this measure if it does reach the full House.

One third of the nation's energy is used in its buildings, and much of that energy is wasted. The Department . of Energy (DOE) is now in the process of defining minimally acceptable levels of energy efficiency in new buildings. These so-called Building Energy Performance Standards (or BEPS), should serve to introduce changes in building design and technology faster than market forces alone could bring them.

Unfortunately, all change is met with resistance. The building trades and utilities are fighting BEPS, but DOE's analysis show that energy efficient changes in building would be beneficial not only to the nation, but to individual business owners.

DOE is currently holding nationwide hearings on BEPS, and most of what it hears is criticism from the building trades. If you are concerned about our energy situation, I urge you to contact DOE and voice your support for improved energy efficiency in new buildings.

..Congressman Drinan represents the Fourth Congressional which includes Newton.

Opinions

Davis as court space

To the Editor:

Recent front page news items have publicized the fact that the Davis School and the Carr School are to be closed. The Board of Aldermen is rushing headlong to sell Davis School to the Community Service Centers for the price of $75,000 to $100,000, and several times the statement has been made that no citizen has objected to this proposed transaction.

Please let the record show that the undersigned vehemently objects.

This is in no way intended to be an attack on or to in any way deprecate the work of the Community Service Centers; but before the die is cast, the Community Service Centers should make public a complete and full disclosure of exactly how it is going to occupy the three stories and gymnasium involved, whom it is going to serve, its exact budget for maintenance, staffing, heat and light, and above all, security.

Who is the money coming from for such a vast project? What percentage of people served will be from Newton?

Recent headlines have also decried the fact that the Police Department does not have enough room. A $1.3 million addition is proposed, and it has been stated that the proposed addition will not meet the needs in the near future, but that it is the maximum structure which can be erected in the physical space available.

Banner leads have also confirmed that the courthouse is extremely overcrowded. It is impossible for personnel to keep up with the work because of a shortage of help. Nonetheless, because of the physical space available, if [illegible] more help, there would be no [illegible] put them.

Let any [illegible] of the City of Newton take a walk down behind the courthouse and police station complex, and it can be easily seen that there is simply no place for police officers and court personnel to park. The public is practically excluded because of lack of space. In most municipalities these needs, because they serve every citizen, become first priority.

The Davis School would make an ideal courthouse. Newton built a $1 million gymnasium on to it three years ago which it proposes to give away for $75,000 to $100,000 and still pay the balance of approximately $650,000 which it owes on the bonded indebtedness specifically for that building. . The gym could be converted into two courtrooms at minimal expense. There is room for at least 50 automobiles to be parked on the grounds. At the existing courthouse, there is a present need for the type of space that is available immediately.

Conferences between clients and attorneys must be held on a stand-up basis in the public lobby or on the front steps, except for one small conference room. The clerk's office hasn't got room for one more desk or one more person, although many more of both are needed.

In the Probation Department each probation officer should have a private office to interview families in. There is no place where antagonistic parties can be sequestered and no place where persons who are giving their histories can be interviewed privately.

There is enough room in the Davis School to comfortably house the District Court of Newton for many years to come.

The existing courthouse would make an ideal addition to the Police Station resulting in over three times the space being made available that the $1.3 million will buy. The two buildings are already connected by a tunnel, and in future years, as expansion is needed, it could be erected between the two existing edifices.

We are talking about spending $2 million in times when we are being asked to tighten our belts and when the city budget is pared to the bone.

The foregoing proposal would take legislation in order to put it into effect. It would take some money, but just think of what it would accomplish for everybody's benefit.

As far as community recreation is concerned, we would like to see published sometime the exact number of hours the Warren Junior High, the Franklin School, the Davis School and the Burr School have been open in the last five years in non-school hours for community recreation. At the same time, it would be helpful to know how many citizens took advantage or cared whether these schools were open for community recreation or not.

Where is the Taxpayers Association now?

Doing research

To the Editor:

I am a graduate student in counseling psychology at the Boston College School of Arts and Sciences.

For the past 10 years my major interest has been the psychology of women and working therapeutically with women.

Currently, I am working on a project which involves separated or divorced women who either have voluntarily relinquished the care of children under 13 to their ex-husbands or have joint custody of children who are living with their father. Any women part of this small growing group who wishes to contact me for an interview can do so.

I can usually be reached at 244-4239 any time after 8 p.m. During the day I can be reached at 288-3230. If I am busy, a secretary will take your name and number so that I can call you back.

I look forward to hearing from anyone who would like to talk with me in order to make a small contribution to improving our understanding of the changing roles of women in today's society.

Trust the people

To the Editor:

Abraham Lincoln once remarked that we the common people could be depended upon to do the right thing.

Mr. Lincoln, did you misjudge us or were you living in a time when character, integrity and decency were very common?

The movies in Newton and, of course, all over our sorry country, have degenerated to a revolting level in immorality and violence while our people, parents and clergy have even dropped the halfhearted, hand wringing bit and now keep a spineless and inscrutable silence.

The incomparable Bette Davis perhaps puts it best in a quote in the Boston Herald American of 4-27-80—"First there were silent pictures, then talkies and now most of them smell."

Was Miss Davis hinting that we are really seeing ourselves on the and that in the arts, as well as elsewhere in life, we usually get what we deserve?

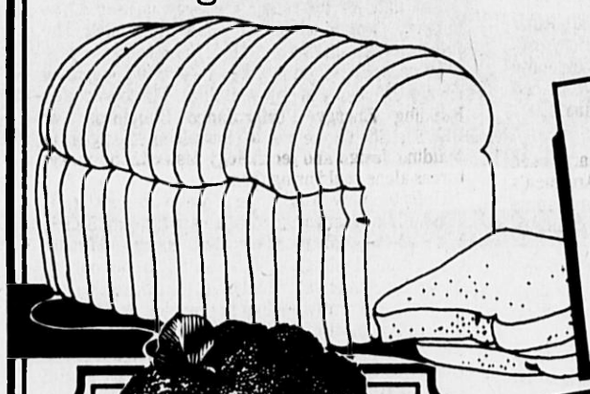

America achieved greatness because it was good but now we are declining in greatness because we are losing our goodness.

Obituaries

Robert Ficken

NEWTON— Robert W. Ficken, 63, of Waban, a retired trust division officer of the First National Bank of Boston, died April 18 at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Mr. Ficken served as an assistant vice-president, secretary, and investment officer at the Old Colony Bank, a division of the First National Bank of Boston.

He is credited with having developed the first common trust fund in New England, which enabled banks to administer personal trusts on a large scale by investing them collectively.,

After his bank retirement, he served as a member of the investment committee of the Harbor Advisory Corp.

Born in Ann Arbor, Mich., he was a graduate of Williams College and the Harvard Business School and attended the New England Conservatory of Music as a part-time student. He was a member of the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity.

He served in the Navy during World War II.

Mr. Ficken also was a trustee of Lasell Junior College for several years and a member of its executive board and academic affairs committee.

He leaves his wife, Sheila (Hand); three sons, Frederick A. of Boston and James R. and Robert E., both of Waban; and four grandchildren.

Ambrose Buckley

Funeral services were held recently for Ambrose F. Buckley, who died unexpectedly April 22.

Born in Newton, Mr. Buckley was one of 25 children in his family. He was a carpenter in the Watertown area where he lived for many years. He was a member of the Carpenters Union, Local 275, Newton.

He leaves his wife, Marguerite M. "Honey" (Scully); two sons, Kenneth A. of Arizona and John W. of Florida; three grandchildren; four sisters and two brothers.

Arrangements were by the Donald J. MacDonald and Son Funeral Home. Interment was in St. Patrick's Cemetery, Watertown.

Most keep nukes we have now

WORCESTER, Mass. (UPI) — Nearly 60 percent of Massachusetts residents oppose the construction of new nuclear power plants, but few would shut down plants already in operation, a poll shows.

The survey by Clark University's Public Affairs Research Center said 34 percent of the 1,005 adults questioned favored construction of more nuclear power plants and 6 percent had no opinion.

The survey was conducted in March.

Highlands liquor store to appeal suspension

NEWTON — The Highlands Beverage Co., 9 Woodward St., Newton Highlands, has appealed a two-week suspension handed down two weeks ago by the Newton Board of License Commissioners.

The suspension, originally scheduled to close the store April 28 to May 12, will be postponed until after the decision of the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission, to which the appeal is directed. An ABCC hearing will be held in June.

Lewis Sassoon of Newton, lawyer for the Pearlman brothers who operate the store, said the appeal is based on the severity of the penalty issued by the licensing board.

The two-week suspension was accompanied by a warning that the store's license would be revoked upon the finding of another violation.

The Pearlmans said at the License Commissioners' hearing that they check all IDs and suggested that the license shown must have been false in the case in question.

Police testimony revealed that the 18-year-old who allegedly bought beer was searched but not his two companions.

Corporal punishment rejected

BOSTON (UPI) — A bill to allow Massachusetts communities to permit corporal punishment in public schools has been virtually killed for this year by a legislative committee.

The Joint Legislative Committee on Education overwhelmingly rejected the measure Monday following a Statehouse hearing at which all but two witnesses voiced opposition to corporal punishment as a means of discipling students.

Massachusetts is one of only three states that forbid the use of corporal punishment in schools.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Robert M. Hunt, D-New Bedford, would permit the school board in each of the state's 351 cities and towns to decide if schools could use corporal punishment.

Hunt told the committee some educators feel corporal punishment would help bring discipline back to the classrooms. He also said students "should have the right to go into a classroom without being harassed."

But Sen. Gerard D'Amico, D-Worcester, co-chairman of the committee, argued the use of corporal punishment is a "simplistic" approach to maintaining discipline in the classroom and that other methods can be applied.

But Michele Merolla, a second-term member of the New Bedford School Committee and the only other witness in favor of the measure, said it was not a simplistic method but a return to an old and effective way of maintaining discipline.

"The men who put our space ship on the moon were rapped on the knuckles in their schools," he said.

Newell resigns

WELLESLEY, Mass. (UPI) — Wellesley College President Barbara W. Newell, appointed last June as U. S. ambassador to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, has announced her resignation.

Dr. Newell, who served as Wellesley president since 1972, last summer was granted a leave of absence to enable her to assume President Carter's appointment as ambassasor to UNESCO.

The school's board of trustees will form a search committee to choose a successsor.

Boston man held on bogus money charge

BOSTON (UPI) — A Boston man was being held in lieu of $100,000 bail today on charges of possessing more than $223,000 in bogus money which authorities believe may have been printed by a nationwide counterfeiting ring.

Authorities said they expected more arrests in the near future.

Thomas Vincent Donaldson, 50, was arraigned in Boston Municipal Court Monday on a charge of possessing counterfeit money and ordered held for a hearing May 13.

Donaldson was arrested Sunday after passing a bogus $20 bill in a motel, police said.

When officers searched his apartment in the city's Back Bay, police said they found $223,600 in $20 and $100 bills, and 173 counterfeit checks.

Waban merit scholarship

NEWTON — David B. Albert of 19 Wyman St., Waban, a senior at the Commonwealth School, Boston, has been awarded a University of Chicago Merit Scholarship, renewable for four years. The announcement was made by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation of Evanston, Ill.

David is the son of Martin and Phyllis Albert. During his years at the Commonwealth School he has received a "Youthgrant in the Humanities" from the National Endowment for the Humanities; has served as a volunteer in the Education Department of the Boston Museum of Science and as a day-care-center volunteer; and has sung in the school chorus.

Although he has not made a decision about his future work, he has a strong interest in mathematics. He worked one summer at the Harvard Computer Center and continues to work with the computer at school.

The college-sponsored Merit Scholarship announcement is the third and last of the major announcements of Merit Scholars to be made in 1980. Winners numbered about 1,900. Previous announcements were made of 2,500 winners of other types of Merit Scholarships.

Alligators and Appleseed's.

The common alligator may prefer the Everglades of Florida. But the Lacoste alligator favors a different habitat. The Appleseed's of Massachusetts. Four sites north and west of Boston where the species arrives faithfully each spring. Braving the Northeast storms and the handbag manufacturers of Brockton and Lynn en route. This year, they're here in record numbers.

Small, medium and large alligators. Even extra large alligators. In every conceivable spring color.

You'll find alligators on tops, jackets, jumpers, skirts and shorts by Haymaker. On David Crystal dresses. On Lacoste knits and pullovers. And alligators all over the men's department, on sportswear by Izod.

Come see the alligators and all the other spring creations. Including gifts for every room in the house. You're going to enjoy the good taste of Appleseed's.

Boston's birthday, what to see

By BETTY STEIN

BOSTON (UPI) — City Hall here looks like an illustration from "Chariots of the Gods," an immense, inverted Mayan temple made out of white concrete blocksthat appears to stand only by divine grace.

Yet in the building's angular shadow stands Faneuil Hall, a classic New England meeting hall under whose proper dome and weathervane the American Revolution was first planned by John Adams, Paul Revere and others.

Boston is a city where it somehow seems appropriate to raucously cheer the Red Sox at Fenway Park then wander through a hushed exhibit of Renaissance paintings a few blocks away at the Museum of Fine Arts. It is a city that for exactly 350 years has thrived on juxtapositions of the new and old.

Fittingly, City Hall will be the reception center for millions of tourists and natives expected to help celebrate the city's summer-long 350th birthday.

The grabbag of events scheduled for "Jubilee 350" reflect the range of choice which has been Boston. There will be a return visit of the tall-masted sailing ships that entranced the nation during the Bicentennial, an elaborate re-creation of colonial Boston and a huge birthday party.

On May 30 a fleet of some 50 tall-masted "Op-Sail" ships, with an escort of modern warships, will sail into Boston Harbor and dock. They will remain tied up for public tours for three days. A fireworks display will close the floating show and the Tall Ships will leave Boston June 4.

Boston boasts numerous firsts: it was the first capital city founded in the United States and it established the first public park, the first public school and the first subway system. In adjoining Cambridge, now the home of the "Harvard Lampoon," colonists operated the first printing press in the English-speaking New World.

Jubilee organizers are not nearly as irreverant as students who publish the humor magazine, but they will go beyond the traditional Old North Church-Boston Tea Party to present some offbeat stories.

Like the notion that John Adams was the Jerry Rubin of his day, — that is, according to the organizers of "Boston's First Light," a light-and-sound show slated for two free presentations each night from May 26 through the fall at City Hall Plaza.

The privately sponsored outdoor show will answer such seldom-asked questions as: Why was Sam Adams such a popular tax collector? Was the Battle of Bunker Hill fought on Bunker Hill? And if Paul Revere's signals were, "One if by land and two if by sea," how would he know if the British came both ways?

The most complete presentation of Boston history, however, will be in a recreated 17th-century village on Boston Common, which was first used by early colonists as a pasture for various types of livestock.

The July 19-25 fair on the Common will offer a week of time-machine fantasy, complete with stocks and pillory, shed-like stalls and animal pens, all of this in the shadow of Bullfinch's proper, gold-domed Statehouse.

A bit of history that may make modern-day homebuyers forget the prime interest rate and be thankful they don't have to build from scratch will be the Fairbanks House exhibit.

The original structure — still standing in Dedham after nearly 350 years of wear and alterations — is considered the oldest standing frame house in North America. The house will be "reconstructed" as part of opening celebrations for the village.

Builders will actually cheat a little, constructing a pre-fabricated replica from plans put together by the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities. The parts will be raised and put together in a demonstration of colonial craft.

While the festival runs Sept. 12-21, historians say the Puritans bestowed the name Boston on Sept. 7, 1630.

But those who show up 14 days late will be rewarded anyway with a parade, an outdoor concert by the Boston Symphony on the banks of the Charles River, and free birthday cake on the Common, where a mass picnic is planned.

Visitors can stop in at the reception center at City Hall seven days a week, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. for free birthday cake, information and gifts from official greeters.

Also available at the center will be Jubilee passport booklets containing discount tickets for restaurants, shops and events in Boston.

Those looking for advance information about the city's inns and eateries can pick up the Official Guide and Chronicle for $2.50 at newsstands throughout New England.

Travel agents will be offering a special Jubilee 350 package covering four days and three nights of accomodations, tours, discount coupons and sight seeing information. Double occupancy rates for the package range from $137 to $169 per person.

Further information on bed and board can be obtained from the Greater Boston Convention and Tourist Bureau, 15 State St., Boston, Mass. 02109. The bureau also distributes the Jubilee 350 calendar of events, state roadmaps and other general visitor information.

The bureau recommends making plans as far ahead as possible, particularly for Op Sail. No inventory of hotel space has been made yet, but the bureau indicates reservations for the summer are already being made.

Portraits secretly transferred

BOSTON (UPI) — Original portraits of George and Martha Washington, painted by American master Gilbert Stuart and valued at $5 million, have been secretly moved from the Boston Museum of Fine Arts to the Smithsonian Institution's National Portrait Gallery in Washington.

A spokesman for the museum disclosed Monday that the portraits were flown by chartered jet to Washington last Thursday for security reasons.

"It would not do to have George and Martha held for ransom," said Larry Taylor.

The paintings, done in 1796, will be unveiled July 4th and hang in Washington for three years under an agreement reached earlier this year between the gallery and the portraits' owner, the Boston Athenaeum, a private library of rare books and art, which has owned them since 1831.

The portraits, which Stuart used to paint numerous others of the nation's first president and his wife, have hung in the Museum of Fine Arts since 1876.

The athenaeum had planned to set the portraits to the National Portrait Gallery last year for $5 million, saying it needed the money to keep operating. But the deal was cancelled after the state and the city of Boston threatened legal action to block the sale.

Under the compromise agreement, the portraits will hang in Washington and Boston for alternating three-year periods.

No suspects in exec. slaying

TOPSFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — Police say they still have "no motives and no suspects" in the slaying of New England Telephone Co. executive James Christiansen.

Christiansen, 39, was found shot to death on the kitchen floor of his Topsfield home just before noon Saturday. His wife and two daughters found his body when they returned from an out-of-town visit with relatives, police said.

The victim was "shot several times sometime after 8 p.m. Friday but before midnight," said Police Chief Harold Moore. An utopsy was completed Monday and officials are "reasonably sure" the weapon was a small caliber gun, he said.

Moore said he suspects Christiansen may have responded to the doorbell and met his killer, since there were no signs of forceful entry.

"It was strictly execution, as far a I'm concerned," said Moore. "Not necessarily gangland, but definitely an execution." But he added, "We still have no motives and no suspects."

Gloria Stevens...
the exercise and weight loss program that pleases "hard to please women."

Terry Brown (left)
"I did some serious checking with other salons and weight control groups. There were many to choose from, but only a few of them are still around.
I wanted convenience, service (not just promises) and results. Seven years ago, I found Gloria Stevens. I've never been dissappointed. Gloria Stevens just keeps getting better and better.
And so do I!!"

Ann LeCamera (right)
"I tried a diet program—It wasn't enough. Oh, I took off some weight, but, I quickly put it back. Then, I joined Gloria Stevens.
The MED method really works—not only do I lose pounds, but also inches. Most important, I feel better.
For me, it's Gloria Stevens!"

ALWAYS UNDERFOOT — 'CAUSE WE'RE NEVER UNDERSOLD

Smart money. Interest-only loans.

Harbor Equity Funds introduces an innovative second mortgage arrangement with unique advantages for you, the borrower.

Interest-Only Payments.

A very practical idea in inflationary times – but one which is usually not available. Your monthly payment during the term of the loan is of interest only – the full amount of the principal is due only at the end of the term of the loan. As a practical matter, this means your monthly payment will be lower than alternative lending arrangements, and each payment is totally tax deductible.

And with continuing inflation, just as your property has increased in value, the value of the principal owed at the end of the term will be substantially reduced.

Through Harbor Equity Funds, Inc., you can convert the equity in your home to cash now

The combination of your low-interest first mortgage and an interest-only Harbor Equity Loan may be the smartest way to finance your home today.

To find out how smart, call Mr. Schaub at 542-6600, or complete and return the coupon below.

Please provide additional information about your interest-only loans plan.

New furniture for mayor questioned by aldermen

NEWTONVILLE — The Newton Arts Center will sponsor a lecture series on the theme Modernism in Arts and Literature to be given by four professors from Brandeis University beginning Sunday, May 4, at 2 p.m.

The public is invited to attend a lecture by Professor Richard Onorato on the subject: The Contemporary Scene: The Novel & the Film on that day.

People read contemporary fiction at random, asking "what should I read?" and taking recommendations from reviewers or friends. Often enough they discover their own experience of this or that book to be disappointing. Prof. Onorato will discuss a way of reading and talking about authors and books based on explicit considerations of one's own subjective experience of literature, and will discuss the courses he hopes to teach at Perennial next year.

His talk will touch Joyce, Lawrence, Woolf, Hemingway, Mailer, Saul Bellow, Doris Lessing, Jayce Oates, Judith Rossner, Becket, Barth, Updike, Marge Percy, Marilyn French, Joan Didion, John Irving, Philip Roth, and others.

Thursday, May 8 at 7:30 p.m. Professor Gerald Bernstein will lecture on the topic: Art & Architecture of the '80's.

The decade of the 80's will be a crucial one for the arts. In both architecture and painting new and innovative are about to emerge. In this period of "Post— Modernism" some of the leading figures of the 70's, such as the architect I. M. Pei and realist painter Philip Pearlstein, will continue to contribute, but a new generation of artists are in the process of creating an expressive vocabulary for our time.

These lectures are open to the public with a $1.50 admission charge to non-members. This Perennial Lecture Series will continue in the following weeks with lectures on Sunday, May 11 at 2 p.m. by Professor Alan Levitan on the topic: The Modern Dramatist: Reworking Shakespeare and His Themes. Professor Karen Klein will be lecturing Thursday, May 15 at 7:30 p.m. on the topic: Contemporary Women Writers: Fiction & Poetry.

For more information contact the Arts Center at 964-3424. The Arts Center is located at 61 Washington Park, one block east of the Newtonville Public Library off Walnut St.

Town meetings ended forever as Watertown changes over

WATERTOWN, Mass. (UPI) — The community that held this country's first town meeting nearly 350 years ago, making it the oldest continuous municipal government in the nation, voted Monday to abolish that form of governance.

By a 4-3 margin, citizens decided to replace the Board of Selectmen and annual town meeting with a full-time government composed of a town manager and nine-member council.

The town has been running its affairs with meetings since 1634, but a $30 million budget has made things a little more complicated than they were in the 17th century.

"We made history tonight," Charter Commissioner John Airasian said following the vote. "For the first time in 350 years, we gave people a choice in their government and they spoke."

Proponents claim the new government will improve efficiency because of its centralized nature. They say they hope it will reduce the town's tax rate, currently the 12th highest in the commonwealth.

"The campaign is old blood versus new blood," said Jane Argento, chairwoman of the "Vote Yes" publicity campaign.

"People who've never been involved in Watertown's politics got involved in the charter," she said. "They were dissatisfied and had a lot of energy to fight the old-time politicians."

Louis Andres, chairman of the charter commission that spent 35 weeks drafting the new government, said only half the job was done.

"We're looking for excellence in government. Voters have put their trust in us and have accepted a radical change," he said. "We can't let them down. Our next step is to make sure the council election draws excellent candidates."

The town's approximately 20,000 registered voters will cast ballots next March in their first council election.

About 46 percent of the voters participated in Monday's referendum — nearly double that of an average municipal election turnout.

Brattle Book reopens Friday

BOSTON (UPI) — The historic Brattle Book Shop, ravaged by fire three months ago, will reopen Friday thanks to donations from book lovers and friends from across the country, owner George Gloss said Monday.

The Boston landmark has been relocated at 25 West St., not far from the original address at 5 West St.

Mayor Kevin White will lead a group of authors, journalists, librarians and public officials in welcome back ceremonies for America's oldest continuously operating antiquarian bookstore.

Gloss vowed to "rise out of the ashes like the Phoenix" when fire leveled the original bookshop Feb. 2. More than 40,000 books were destroyed, including an original set of Charles Dickens' Christmas stories, Gloss said.

Within hours of the fire, Gloss was deluged with offers of help from hundreds of book lovers from all over the nation.

"All over the country there seem to be people popping up who want to contribute to the store," he said. "They love the store and want to keep it going."

Printers on strike

DEDHAM –Printers at the main plant of Transcript Newspapers, Inc. walked out on strike Tuesday, April 29.

Transcript publishes daily and weekly newspapers including The News-Tribune, The Daily Transcript, The Newton Graphic, The West Roxbury Transcript, The Needham Chronicle and the Family Shopper.

Publication of the newspapers continued with supervisory personnel.

Transcript General Manager Paul J. Massey said, in a statement, "The company has recently had a serious problem with production. Efforts by management to remedy the problem have met with resistance from the union and some employees."

The printers belong to Boston Typographical Union 13. Some news writers also joined the strike as did union pressmen and mailers.

Initially some of the newspapers were delivered late. Massey said: "We ask our subscribers not to blame their carriers. The carriers were in no way responsible for the late papers."

No hurry to pay county assessments

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore Mann has responded to the county ultimatum to pay up on past-due county assessments by saying he will find out what the "pleasure" of the Board of Aldermen is in regard to paying.

Last week City Treasurer Theodore Scafidi and the mayor received letters from Middlesex County Treasurer Rocco Antonelli demanding payment of the $1.2 million owed by Newton for 1978 and 1979 payments.

Antonelli said if he does not receive payment by May 2, he will go immediately to court. His case is all ready, he said.

Mayor Mann, who at one time agreed with the Board of Aldermen that the money should be withheld from the county, said he had asked Scafidi to communicate with Ald. Mark White on the recent development. White has been the principal antagonist of the county government. He has been out of town.

The mayor said he had not received the last missing statement on expenses and income from Antonelli, on the absence of which he was basing his approval of the nonpayment. At one point the county was several years behind in providing the annual fiscal reports.

"If the report is not in," Mann said, "they (the county) are still in violation of the general laws."

Scafidi is also to find out whether the financial report is ready.

Then, the mayor said, "I will find out from the Board of Aldermen what is their pleasure."

Antonelli said last week that whatever difference there is between the amount of interest earned by investing the money withheld from the county and the interest charged for delinquency by the county will be sought by Middlesex County District Attorney John Droney. Newton has been boasting that it is making a profit by withholding the money. Such a profit is illegal, according to Antonelli.

Legion convention

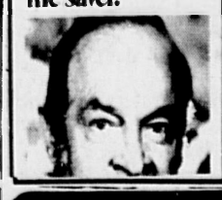

BOSTON (UPI) — About 20,000 members of the American Legion, their families and friends are expected in Boston for the Legion's 62nd annual convention Aug. 15-21.

The legion also held its convention in Boston in 1930, 1940 and 1967.

State takeover of country parole system proposed

BOSTON — "Governor King's proposal to provide for a state takeover of the county parole system would rectify the inefficiency caused by the existence of two separate parole systems in the Commonwealth," State Rep. David J. Mofenson, chairman of the Legislature's Human Services Committee, and sponsor of a similar proposal (H. 4320) which recently passed the House, said this week.

"Under the current law," according to Mofenson, "the Massachusetts Parole Board has jurisdiction over all prisoners in state correctional institutions, as well as all prisoners in county jails and houses of correction who have been sentenced by the Superior Court or who have sentences of one year or more. The parole of all other inmates of jails and houses of correction is the responsibility of the county commissioners."

"The governor's parole proposal," said Mofenson, "is a fair one and represents a positive step forward in our attempts to construct a more equitable and effective criminal justice system.

Suspended sentences for high-speed chase

NEWTON — A Charlestown man who led police on a chase through Brookline, West Roxbury, Needham and Newton at speeds of up to 95 miles per hour was given two concurrent suspended sentences in Newton District Court Friday after he was found guilty of a host of motor vehicle charges.

Edward Kelly, 18, admitted sufficient facts for guilty findings on charges of operating to endanger, using a car without authority, failure to stop for a police officer, speeding, driving on sidewalks, failure to keep right, failure to conform to traffic signals, damaging property and possession of burglarious tools. A charge of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, a car, was dismissed by the prosecution.

State Trooper Kenneth MacGregor testified Friday that Kelly admitted stealing the Cadillac he was driving on the high-speed chase, which took place in the early morning hours of March 27.

He said Kelly struck two state police cruisers, ran stop signs, drove on sidewalks, forced other vehicles off the road and drove around Mt. Ida Junior College at speeds up to 70 miles and hour, running over lawns and shrubs. MacGregor said Kelly was finally stopped at the intersection of Dedham and Parker Streets and arrested.

On the driving to endanger and using without authority charges, Judge Monte Basbas gave Kelly two concurrent six-month sentences, to be suspended for two years. Kelly was also fined a total of $250 on the other charges.

600 attend Newton Prayer Breakfast

NEWTON—Seiji Ozawa, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and resident of Newton, received a Newton Centennial medallion at the Sixth Annual Newton Mayor's Prayer Breakfast on Friday, April 25. More than 600 guests, representing the religious and cultural organizations of Newton, watched Mayor Theodore D. Mann place the medal around Ozawa's neck and embrace him.

Theme of the breakfast in McElroy Commons of Boston College, was "Religion and Music." Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, in his commentary, and Rabbi Richard Yellin of Temple Mishkan Tefila, in his invocation, desribed the common threads between religion and music.

Music, Silverstein said, had a creator (composer), intermediary (performer) and audience; so has the divine creator his ministers and congregations. The words "commitment," "harmony," "universality" and "spirit" apply to both religion and music.

Silverstein, who regards music as "one of God's proudest achievements" gave as examples of its universality the fact that the same printed music taken by the BSO on its China tour was used and understood by the Chinese orchestra. When Ozawa conducted the Bach "St. Matthew Passion" in Japan, it touched people of all religions.

Mayor Mann, stating that he hoped Newton would be remembered for its harmony, felt that a high point in the city's achievement was in 1860 when Newton citizens gave sanctuary to runaway slaves.

"Once again we open our homes and hearts," he said, gesturing to two refugee families who have been settled in Newton by church groups and were guests at the breakfast.

"We can all communicate in the language of music," the mayor said, presenting Silverstein with a gift for the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Seiji Ozawa, acknowledging his medal, remarked that he is the son of the Buddhist father and a Christian mother, and "the last person to talk about religion." Nevertheless, he feels that when music is performed especially well, there must be "someone up there" inspiring it.

Three musical selections were given by the Newton Choral Society, directed by David Carrier. More than 70 children, of the all-Newton Elementary School Chorus, sang a spirited group of songs under the direction of Elaine Ropi and John C. Harper. They concluded with "It's a Small World" in Chinese, in honor of a sister school in Peiking, which has learned the song in Englis.

Greetings were given by Rev. Paul A. FitzGerald, S.J., secretary of the University, Boston College, and Arthur Clark, mayor of Waltham. Martin Dropkin of Temple Shalom and Eleanor Bornemann of St. Ignatius Church, gave prayer readings. Rev. Bonnie Scott Allen of Newton Highlands Congregational Church, offered the benediction.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

REALTORS in 17 cities and towns in southwestern Norfolk County have launched an anti-vandalism campaign as this year's "Make America Better" project, enlisting the support of fifth and sixth grade students in their area.

As part of the program, the REALTORS are showing a film on vandalism at the more than 40 schools participating in the project. After viewing the film, distributed by the National Association of Realtors, the fifth and sixth graders are asked to create anti-vandalism posters, expressing their feelings on the subject.

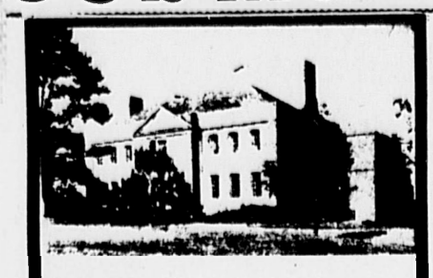

A winning poster will be selected at each school to be displayed in a public place, and the winning students will be presented awards during the REALTORS' "Private Property Week", April 15-21.

The program is being conducted by members of Council I & M, a regional organization of the Brokers Institute, a division of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board.

Edward F. Smith of the Audrey C. Fields office and Karen Glaser of the Florence Kates office in Canton are coordinating the project as co-chairpersons of the council's Make America Better Committee.

Council I & M represents REALTORS in Bellingham, Canton, Dedham, East Milton, Foxboro, Franklin, Mansfield, Medfield, Medway, Millis, Milton, Norfolk, Norwood, Sharon, Walpole, Westwood, and Wrentham.

Analog Devices is one of the fastest growing electronics manufacturers in the industry. Our tremendous growth means tremendous opportunities for you:

DIRECT EXPORT CUSTOMER AND LICENSE SPECIALIST

In this challenging position, you will be responsible for the preparation of direct foreign orders for order entry personnel within necessary guidelines and requirements, with a working knowledge of international specific differences as related to direct foreign sales. You will also establish and monitor a Letter of Credit referral system to guard against expirations and initiate timely changes/extensions as necessary. Other duties include approval prior to shipment of typed special license orders; applying, monitoring and follow-up of Special Licenses; and communicating as necessary with the Department of Commerce to clarify license requirements and receipts.

If you're a highly motivated professional with business experience, preferably in an international environment, drop by the Personnel Department to fill out an application, or send your resume to the attention of Monroe A. Mosley, Human Resources Representative, Analog Devices, Inc., One Industrial Center, P.O. Box 280, Norwood, MA 02062

JOURNEY TO SUCCESS!!

A career in life insurance sales offers the opportunity to help people solve a wide variety of financial problems. In addition, the earning potential of a successful life insurance representative is higher than in practically any other profession.

"Journey To Success," a slide presentation about the opportunities available as a Guardian Field Representative with our agency, can help you decide if life insurance sales is the profession for you. This audio-visual show examines the benefits and rewards of the Field Representative's career, and provides a number of eye-opening insights into the dynamics of the insurance industry itself.

If you would like to attend the next showing of "Journey To Success," just clip and mail the coupon, or give us a call, and we'll contact you with the time and place. This remarkably informative presentation could turn out to be the first step in your journey to success as a Guardian Field Representative.

Police report store owner fired at thief

NEWTON — The owner of Powers Package Store in Newton Centre reportedly fired three rounds at a man who had stolen a bottle of wine from the store about 3:35 p.m. Saturday.

Police said Nabil Sidholm, of Norwood, owner of the store at 1191 Centre St., pursued the thief on foot to the intersection of Pleasant and Centre Streets where he fired three shots at a car the man had entered.

Police found three live rounds in the clip of the 9mm.-handgun and three spent rounds in the gutter and sidewalk in front of Newton Centre Opticians.

A witness told police she saw a man run to a four-wheel-drive vehicle and get behind the wheel. She heard loud noises and saw a man with a handgun standing in the middle of the street pointing a gun at the car.

No injuries were reported in the shooting incident, and police took the handgun after talking to the owner.

A half-gallon of Chablis was taken from the store by a man police described as a white male; age 22; 200 pounds; with a light beard; wearing blue jeans and a white shirt.

The suspect reportedly fled on foot to a vehicle, described at one point as a brown van, that escaped on Pleasant Street heading in the wron.q direction , police said. There were others in the van. One witness believed there were four passengers.

In other reports, jewelry and silverware was taken from a Sylvan Avenue home late Saturday or early Sunday, police said. The house was ransacked and two televisions were found near the front door. The home was entered by slipping a hook on a porch door then forcing wooden storm doors.

A Regina Road home was ransacked about 9:30 p.m. Saturday and $350 is missing from a bedroom. Jewelry may also have been taken, police said. Three youths were chased from the house by a Newton man.

Nine irons and a golf bag were taken from the Newton Commonwealth Golf Course building Saturday. There was no sign of forced entry, police said.

Two diamond rings were taken from Ware Jewelers, 311 Centre St., about 4:40 p.m. Saturday, and later recovered after an employee chased the alleged thief on Pearl Street.

The suspect dropped both rings, police said. The suspect was described as a white male, 5-ft., 6-in.; age 40, mustache, wearing a blue jacket; with "love" tattooed across the knuckles of his left hand.

A television was taken from a Sargent Street home in a break discovered about 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Police said the house was ransacked.

Two oriental rugs were taken from a Commonwealth Avenue home late Thursday or early Friday, police said. The home was entered by breaking glass in a rear door. Bedrooms were ransacked.

Franklin School, 125 Derby St., was entered late Thursday or early Friday, police said. Two storage lockers were kicked in, and cereal was strewn on the floor. Lockers were found in the auditorium.

The put up job.

When you're planning a wedding, Bar Mitzvah, or any big family event, you plan for a few interruptions. But sometimes it's easier to put on a party if the party puts up somewhere else. So we suggest you let our professional "put uppers" handle the family accommodations. Then your job will be relatively easy.

All you have to do is call Susan in our sales office at (617)969-3010. She'll explain our special way of handling your special guests.

Sgraffito pottery on display at store here

WEST NEWTON — A wide range of colors and exquisite detail are combined in the exciting sgraffito pottery of Nancy Mahoney.

Working out of her studio in the renovated Northampton Armory Building, Nancy's pottery and ceramic tile pieces are decorated with designs and landscape images inspired by her extensive travels throughout Europe and the United States. Her style of glaze painting on clay is reminiscent of the early Italian Renaissance artists.

A selection of Nancy Mahoney's work is exhibited through May 12 at the Limited Editions Gallery, 1176 Walnut Street in Newton Highlands.

"The style I'm working in now is a culmination of various techniques I've been developing for a number of years," Mahoney said. "It combines painting with sgraffito, an etching technique found in the work of many Italian potters.

"The material I use is middle temperature, electric fired whiteware. This allows for very vivid colors and excellent durability."

Nancy's pottery has been featured in many shows and galleries, including the Jorgenson Gallery at the University of Connecticut. In addition to her teaching and lecturing work at that University, she is cofounder and ceramics instructor at the City Art Guild, Inc., Northampton, Mass.

Nancy Mahoney's work can be seen at Limited Editions, 10 a.m. - 5:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and 10 a.m. — 8 p.m. on Thursdays.

Grossman Camp now registering

BROOKLINE — The Jacob and Rose Grossman Camp, a branch of the Jewish Community Center of Greater Boston, has opened registration for the summer of 1980. The season is June 30 through August 22 with two, four, and eight week sessions available.

The day camp offers an exciting informal Jewish educational program, for ages 5 through 13, with emphasis placed on crafts, music, dance and drama. A full complement of athletics and Red Cross swimming instruction are also an integral part of the camp experience.

Grossman spreads over 75 wooded acres of the Hale Reservation in Westwood, just two miles from the intersection of Routes 128 and 109. There is a lakefront swimming area and a landing for canoes and rowboats. Large playing fields, modern shelter buildings and a spacious year-round heated lodge are among the facilities.

Transportation by bus is provided from most communities in the greater Boston area.

A counselor-in training program is available for ninth through eleventh graders.

The campgrounds are open for viewing on Sunday afternoons in May and daily in June, weather permitting.

For further information contact the Grossman Camp office at 734-7404.

The sentiment's the same. But the results can be a lot more spectacular this Mother's Day.
Because this year, you can give her flowers in one of the most exquisite vases we've ever found.
"Optic" vases have distinctive bubble shapes and elegant faceted sides. They come either 8", 10", or 12" tall.
For Mother's Day, "Optic" vases are being sold at The Crate and Barrel for 20% off. Which means, for instance, that the 10" size costs only $19.95 instead of $24.95.
And these vases are just some of the gift suggestions that we've specially priced for Mother's Day.
Others include Heller bakeware at 50% off, beach tote bags from Finland for $23.95, Copco salad spinners for $9.95, Chinese oval baskets for $15.95, and outdoor hurricane lamps for just $3.50.
The Mother's Day Specials at The Crate and Barrel.
We hope they can do this year what dandelions and pop bottles did a few years before.

$82.5 million budget approved

NEWTON — An $82.5 million budget for the next fiscal year was approved by the Board of Aldermen Thursday after almost $84,000 was cut from the mayor's request.

Of the amount approved, $1.6 million is placed in budget reserve which means the money can't be expended without aldermanic approval.

The figure voted by the board represents the amount of money to be raised through a tax levy; the gross budget for the year is $83.9 million.

The budget is about $500,000 below the state mandated budget cap of 104 percent of the prior year's expenditures.

Comptroller Lawrence Marino said the the city's actual leeway under the tax cap will not be known until end of the year's calculation on June 30. He said the increase over this year's expenditures maybe about 3.2 percent.

But some aldermen believe the board this year, for the first time, will have to vote by a two-thirds margin to exceed the budget cap.

The final figure was approved on a 20-1 vote with aldermen Terry Morris, Paul Daley and Ernest Dietz absent.

Lone dissenter Mark White said he voted against the budget because it is underfunded, and does not present a valid representation of the city's financial position for the coming year. He singled out salary and fuel accounts

The criticism White leveled at Mayor Theodore Mann's appropriation requests is the same criticism Mann made of the school budget which was included in the board's vote.

It is not known what kind of arrangement the mayor and school officials have made for salary increases

It appears municipal calculations may have set aside an amount for raises of three or four percent. Some city unions have been offered 4 percent.

If raises of five to seven percent are finally negotiated a supplemental budget request will be necessary and a vote to exceed the budget cap is a possibility.

Unlike salary accounts setting money aside is clearly a guessing game. In recent years the cost of fuel has far outpaced the most generous budget estimates. This year the school department and major municipal departments have required supplemental appropriations and transfers to cover fuel costs.

Springfest!

NEWTON — This year, Springfest, the annual festival of arts and crafts sponsored by the Newton Cultural Affairs Commission joins Boston in its 350 Jubilee.

On Sunday, May 18, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the grounds at Newton City Hall, the public will find fresh elements added to the wide array of crafts, foods, music, drama and dance, with special activities for children, including games and races.

Co-chairmen Charlotte Fine and Voni Weaver announced a sailing of "Small Ships" on the pond, and a visit from the MDC Traveling Zoo, thanks to the Newton Recreation Department; and contests, which will be conducted after Mayor Theodore Mann extends his welcome at noon.

Contests include: The Great Hair-Splitting-Nit-Picking test of who knows what about history and the movies, with emphasis on Newton and Boston, sponsored by local cinemas and bookstores. French Fry Arranging, sponsored by MacDonald's, should challenge artists of all ages, and we empect The Dramatic Reading From the Phone Book to bring out our best readers.

Energetic types can Find the Noodle In The Haystack (for fun and profit), sponsored by Cantin' Abruzzi, while dancers who are looking beyond disco can win prizes in the Tacky Tango Contest, sponsored by Paulette's Dance Studio of Newton.

Best Recipe For Fried Perrier Water should set some taste buds on edge—the sponsor is Star Market. These contests will be judged by experts. Prizes will be awarded on the basis of skill, aptness of thought, and-or appropriate effort. Remember: neatness counts (but we're not sure how much).

Springfest '80 committee chairmen are: Fine and JoAnn Isaacson, food and craft booths; Linda Plaut of Arts in the Parks, music and recreation; Mikki Krassin and Sandy Deming, drama; Phyllis Stewart, dance; Marcia Massimo, Frances Shrand, Josepha Wrangham and Teresa Weaver, contests; Adrienne Lowenthal, Kathryn Miles and Wendy Weaver, posters; Yvonne Pepe and Jordan Kraus, decorations; and Slave Labor (Voni Weaver), publicity.

The Newton Recreation Department, Russell Holloran, Commissioner; the Auxillary Police, under Jay Moskow; the Explorers, directed by Bob Braceland; Alan Fraser, of the Building Department; Charles Thomas, of Public Works, Charles Quirk, City Hall staff, Robert Keyho, American Red Cross, all deserve praise and thanks for the effort and support they give to make Springfest a great day for one and all.

Admission to Springfest '80 is free and proceeds benefit cultural activities in Newton. No rain date.

For more information, call 332-8092.

Pizzeria for Polcari depends on parking

NEWTON—Upper Falls residents sought assurances at a public hearing Tuesday that a proposed Pettee Square restaurant will have adequate parking.

Boston restauranteur John Polcari Jr. hopes to open a "pizzeria" in the long vacant building on southwest corner of the Chestnut-Oak St. intrsection.

The plan is closely tied to redevlopment efforts in the square, and Polcari has entered an agreement with developer Jack Anteramian who has built town houses nearby and who plans a four-story office building on an adjacent parcel.

The city's community development program has targeted some $270,000 for traffic and parking improvements in the area. Restoration of the historic Depot building in the square is nearing completion and there are plans to develop land west of Oak Street for parking though a lease with the MBTA.

Polcari plans to provide parking for the restaurant at the rear of the nearby Anteramian office building. A 70-seat restraunt would be allowed by right, but Polcari is seeking a special permit waving the parking requirement for a 92 seat restuarurant.

Atty. Peter Harrington, representing Antermian and Polcari said 31 parking spaces for the restaurant would be available behind the office building. He did not pinpoint the location of the spaces.

MBTA tracks separate the proposed restaurant from its parking area and some residents at the hearing said the length of the walk, particularly in inclement weather, will determine if the spaces will actually be used.

Harrington said the MBTA is willing to lease space along the tracks for public parking and Antermanian is willing to blacktop the lot.

Nicholas Vlahos, owner of Nick's Pizza, across the street from the proposed resturant believes Polcari's customers will use the large lot infornt of his shop for parking.

The city Planning Department has recommended approval of the special permit with some conditionsl including a ban on take out or drive in businesses within the retail block.

State officials want City Hall vault first

NEWTON—The state's supervisor of public records has decided there should be a new vault in City Hall before construction of an archival vault at the Jackson Homestead on Washington Street.

The Board of Aldermen has appropriated $77,000 for a vault at the historic Homestead for storage of dated municipal records.

The Friends of the Jackson Hoemestead, a non-profit support group for the museum, have agreed to raise matching funds to construct an addition to the Homestead that will house private historic material.

Deputy Sec. of State Renee M. Landers, supervisor of public records, has endorsed the inventory of muciciapl records underway but said, "the considration of a municipal archives vault at the Jackson Homestead is impractical in the light of the deficiencies in record storage in city hall."

Only records dated prior to 1870 may be considered for transfer to the Homestead.

"Considering the less than optimal storage conditions in City Hall, Landers said, "proper steps must be taken to improve the security of records which would conceivably remain at City Hall before this office can consider the transfer of records to an off-site location."

None of the vault doors at City Hall carry the required fire rating, and dated records stored in the basement are inadequately protected from fire and theft, Landers said.

State audits Newton special ed

NEWTON — The Massachusetts Department of Education is conducting a program audit of the Newton Public Schools to measure its compliance with Chapter 766, according to Superintendent Aaron Fink.

Under the law, the state must evaluate the special education programs and services of each school system at least every five years.

Chapter 766 is a Massachusetts law requiring every city and town to provide a free public and appropriate education for all children regardless of handicap.

The first phase of this audit, which is currently being completed, involves the collection of data documenting in detail how the Newton schools are meeting the regulations in providing required programs and services.

Self-evaluation questionnaires have been distributed to all teachers, specialists and administrators. Results will be tallied by the state and published as part of the report of the audit.

Another source of data is a study of pupil records. Staff from the state will examine a sample of 50 student records to measure compliance with required procedures used in student evaluation, education plan development and service delivery. Parent permission will be obtained in every case, and parents of students involved in the case study process will be invited to participate through questionnaires and personal interview.

In October, after the audit team has reviewed the data that have been collected, phase two, an evaluation visit, will be conducted.

The team members will interview all special education staff together with a sample of regular education staff and as many parents and school administrators as possible during the five-day inspection visit in Newton.

They will visit every school and special education class. When the audit has been completed, the team will submit a preliminary report which identifies areas for commendation, areas where there are problems, and areas where the system is not in compliance.

The final report as submitted to the School Committee, superintendent and director of special education will be made available to the public for review.

Chapter 766 and the regulations require that any child suspected of having special needs be referred for evaluation.

With parental approval, the child is given various tests and assessments which measure his educational, social, emotional, intellectual and physical development, including assessments by his teachers, a school administrator, psychologist, social worker, physician and specialists.

Parents meet with school staff after the evaluations and participate in the writing of an individualized educational plan, (IEP). Parents can accept or reject the plan, and have rights of review and appeal when they reject the plan.

The state mandates that the local public schools provide a range of services for children with special needs, including nursing, occupational therapy, physical therapy, speech and language therapy, social and psychological services, as well as services of any other expert which the Chapter 766 evaluation team requires.

Davis school okay for service center

WEST NEWTON — The former Davis School in West Newton is about to be recycled.

The Board of Aldermen last week approved a plan that would see the vacant elementary school sold to Newton Community Service Centers Inc. for $225,000. The Service Centers (NCSC) will pay an initial $100,000 under the plan and make payments of $5000 a year for the next 25 years.

All the details of the sale rest with Mayor Theodore Mann. By ordinance, aldermanic committees only choose a future use for the building and set a miniumum sale price.

The agreement between the Finance Committee and the NCSC calls for the sale of NCSC property on Cherry Street, where the center is now located, and the Pomroy House in Newton Corner,which it also owns, within three years for an aggregate sale price of not less than $350,000.

If the sale price exceeds that figure, the city would be paid the first $60,000 over it.

The city will retain 1600 square feet in the school now occupied by Community Schools without paying rent, although utility and maintenance costs will be shared.

The building will also continue to be used as a polling place. It currently serves two West Newton precincts.

The Police Department would also be allowed to use the gym at the school at no charge.

NCSC has agreed to sell the Cherry Street building and the Pomroy House to buyers who will pay property taxes to the city and has agreed to a facade easement and open space and demolition restrictions on Pomroy House.

According to the agreement, the city will have the right of first refusal if the school is sold or leased, and NCSC has agreed to pay to the city a windfall profit from sale of the school.

NCSC has also agreed to permit the city to impose zoning controls in the event the school is sold to a non-profit purchaser.

Space in the building not needed by NCSC will be offered to the city for rental at commercial rates.

YMCA annual meeting May 21

NEWTON CORNER — The Family YMCA of Newton will hold its 130th annual meeting Wednesday, May 21, 6:30 p.m. at the Y, 276 Church St., Newton Corner.

As the Y enters the 80's, its staff, committees and board invite members and friends to join them to remember the past,. and more importantly, look to the future.

This year's program will be in the form of an interim report from the Y's Long Range Planning Committee. The presentation will be made by the Planning Committee Chairman W. Frederick Uehlein and members of that committee.

It will focus upon where the Y hopes to be in 1985 and its response over the next five years to the need to meet financial responsibilities, upgrade program and facilities, and meet the challenge of changing community needs.

The business meeting will be brief, highlighted by service awards, presentations, and a buffet style dinner. For more information about the evening's events or tickets, call 244-6050.

Jury finds woman guilty of robberies

CAMBRIDGE — A Middlesex County jury found Lee Kaye of New York guilty of robbing a Newton Corner bank twice in March 1978 Tuesday.

Attorneys for Kaye said they would wait until after the defendant is sentenced May 20 to decide whether or not to appeal the case.

Kaye, 59, was accused of being the "Bomb Lady" who robbed the Newton Corner Baybank on March 17 by giving a note to a teller saying she had a bomb in a shopping bag.

On March 28, 1978, the woman returned to the same teller in the same bank and handed her another note saying she was "the Bomb Lady" and demanding more money.

The robberies went unsolved for 10 months until the teller, Jean Gardiner, identified Kaye as the "Bomb Lady" after she was arrested on unrelated charges in Waltham.

Bank cameras also photographed the "Bomb Lady" while the robberies were in progress.

Gardiner testified last week that Kaye and the "Bomb Lady" were one in the same person.

Kaye denied she committed the crime, testifying that she was in New York when the robberies occurred.

Kaye, a former drug addict, said she was at a New York methadone clinic on March 17 and at a New York hospital while her father was having an operation on March 28.

A handwriting expert also testified that the notes written by the "Bomb Lady" and Mrs. Kaye's handwriting were dissimilar.

Lt. Sherman Wallen, Newton South class of '74, recently acted as a tour guide for a group of students from South who visited the Electronics System Division at Hanscom Air Force Base. The lieutenant shows how a printout is fed from the computer in the data processing center. His mother, Mrs. Marcia Wallen, lives in Newton Corner.

CPPAX sets caucus

NEWTON — The organization which launched Father Robert Drinan's career in politics 10 years ago will meet Wednesday, May 28, to consider endorsing his successor.

Citizens for Participation in Political Action (CPPAX) will gather in Waltham to hear and question candidates and vote on an endorsement.

"Right now there are several candidates whose views are consistent with those of CCPAX," said board member Archie Lyon. "We cannot afford a situation in which our political allies fight each other for votes and knock each other out. Nor does it make sense to give up four legislative seats to produce one candidate for congress. We have decided to meet May 28 to give candidates who do not win our support a chance to withdraw."

A CPPAX endorsement requires a two-thirds affirmative vote of the members in attendance. Both Democrats and Republicans have been invited to attend the caucus.

More than 2000 well-wishers were at McElroy Commons at Boston College Saturday night for a party . in honor of Congressman Drinan.

The party, originally intended to mark his 10th year in Congress campaign for a sixth term, became a tribute to the congressman after he was ordered not to seek reelection to Congress by Pope John Paul II last week.

Donna Calderone weds Edward Joseph Galotta

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Galotta

In an afternoon ceremony April 13 at Our Lady Help of Christians Church, Donna Elizabeth Calderone wed Edward Joseph Galotta.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Calderone of Waban and the groom is the son of Mrs. Edward J. Galotta of Lowell.

Linda and Lisa Calderone were bridesmaids and Jennifer Brogan was the flower girl.

Daniel Scanlon was the best man and ushers were Richard Habib and Kenny Larautore. Nicholas Calderone Jr. was a junior usher.

After a reception at Post 440 in Newton, the couple honeymooned in the Pocono Mountains.

The bride is a graduate of Boston Bouve College of Physical Therapy at Northeastern University. Her husband is a teacher.

The couple will live in Dunstable.

Marsha Jackson bride of John J. Savilonis

Mr. and Mrs. John Savilonis

Marsha Lee Jackson, daugther of Mr. and Mrs. G. Warren Jackson of West Newton, became the bride of John Joseph Savilonis Jr. April 19 in St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Cambridge.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Savilonis of Natick.

The bride's sisters, Judith Jackson of Newton and Deborah Jackson-May of Flushing, N.Y., were the maid and matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Ann Nichols of Framingham, Diane Savilonis of Chicago, Beverly Milley of Newton, Rosemary MacDonald of Framingham and Deborah Morley of Ft. Worth, Tex.

Edward Savilonis, the groom's brother, served as best man. Ushers were Anthony Giorgio of Natick, Richard Nichols of Framingham, Lester May of Flushing, N.Y., Craig Milley of Newton, James Maude of Natick and Daniel MacDonald of Framingham.

The wedding was followed by a reception at the Chateau De Ville in Framingham.

The newlyweds live in Framingham.

Kingston's photographs evoke the urban American scene

By ELINOR PERSKY

NEWTON CORNER — Waterworks, storefronts, street scenes; the details of manmade America are recorded in Rodger P. Kingston's one-man photography show "American Color: 1973-1980" in the Newton Free Library Gallery, 414 Centre Newton Corner, through June 1.

Kingston photographs the urban American scene, presenting the viewer with sharply focused, richly colored images that are packed with information, and reveal the American people through their artifacts.

From a photograph of the "Brattle Florists" to one of two men coming out of the "Donut Shop," Kingston's people are part of the design for Kingston records scenes as people pass through or reside within.

Kingston is not doing studies of urban blight or the plight of the urban poor. Rather, he wants the viewer to look at what's around; the objects, the people, the colors, the shapes. The wealth of detail, the finely shaded tonality in the photographs demonstrate Kingston's overall sensibility to sights, . especially color, that most of us ignore or don't even see.

In a street scene that includes a pole by the curb, this viewer was caught by the sight of the pole covered with signs, "No Stopping," "Loading Zone," "No Left Turn," "Pedestrian Crosswalk." There are two women — one chunky, one slim — both wearing the same jeans. These are documents. No judgment is implied. But the strength of the photographs compels the viewer to reflect on the conflicting messages with which he is constantly confronted.

Kingston, a photographer who is also a photographic historian, teacher and author, was born in Seattle, Wash., grew up in Montana, and now lives in Belmont. He received his Ed.M. from Harvard in 1978 and has taught at the Art Institute of Boston. He has guest curated several photography exhibitions including the works of Alvin Langdon Coburn and William Henry Jackson.

Main Library hours are Monday - Thursday 9-9; Friday 9-6; Saturday 9-5; and Sunday 1-5. The Library will be closed Sunday and Monday, May 25 and 26, for Memorial Day.

Newton to contest electric rate

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore D. Mann has instructed the law department to contest proposed electric rate increases.

In recent months, the city has faced unexpected rate increases, as has the average consumer, and the mayor believes the state is unable to protect consumer interests.

Boston Edison has requested $69 million in rate relief. If the rate setting commission approves the increase, it will mean a jump of 19 percent in base rate bills for all customers, or about a 12 percent increase in total bills, assuming fuel charges do not increase.

City lawyers have met with representatives of Mass. Law Reform Institute, and Mann has authorized the law department to enter the case.

"I was appalled to learn," Mann said, "that the state department of utilities and state attorney general claim they don't have the resources to represent the consumer."

State legislators have been contacted. as has the governor, and Mann has called for investigation of "the inability of our state officers to represent or our interests."

"Those most affected by the failure of the Commonwealth to provide expert consumer protection services will those who are least able to meet the demand of this economic cycle of inflation and recesssion," Mann said.

"This matter is clearly in the hands of our legislature," Mann said. "(but) it is my intent to authorize our law department to join with other communities to pick up the representation of the people of the Commonwealth should the state fail to exercise its responsibility."

County may sue Newton for funds

NEWTON — The chairman of the Aldermanic Subcommittee on Middlesex County believes the city is about to be sued for withholding more than $1.8 million in county assessments.

Mark White, a vocal critic of county government, hopes the Board of Aldermen will not release the three overdue assessments because of a lawsuit, or because the county produces records the city has requested.

Legal action has threatened since the city withheld the first assessment more than one year ago. White said Sunday he has been warned by county Treasurer Rocco Antonelli a suit is imminent.

Although the withholding of the assessments started with a general criticism of county government, in recent months the withholding has been justified by the county's failure to produce records required by state law.

The county has provided a debt statement but other documents outlining highway work, building repairs, inspections, salaries and fixed assets are still missing, according to city officials.

Production of the records required by law is not enough, White said. "I don't want to (pay) until we get the information we are looking for — things that aren't covered by the records — until we get some accountability on the part of the commissioners and the state legislature."

Asked if the receipt of all the records would make a difference to the city law department, White said "yes, it probably would."

As for the Board of Aldermen, "A lot of the board are very squeamish about this," White said. "You can justify it with the records, but if you can't they don't really have the enthusiasm for holding back."

White believes the county will sue to make the city pay the assessments, as well as the interest on the $1.8 million, as well as any money the city made by investing the overdue payments.

"The interesting part of the suit will be when they sue us for the interest," White said. "Because we are going to say 'we are not going to pay it; that we had every right to withhold that money."

"You've got to remember something,"White said, "we started this even before we knew about the records. That was not the initial thing that caused us to do this. It was our approach to what we thought was going on in county government.

A fresh look at nursing homes

By Fay Bronstein

NEWTON — One member of the nursing profession has taken a fresh look at the treatment of the elderly in nursing homes, and debunked some of the most popular myths about them.

Jan Gibeau, a psychiatric nurse who is a clinical supervisor of a geriatric unit at McLean Hospital, perceives the elderly residents of nursing homes as individuals with distinct life histories and lifestyles rather than as sick, dependent patients — the traditional view held by most medical professionals.

Speaking before an audience of Newton nursing home care providers, Ms. Gibeau called for a change in perceptions of the elderly and in the quality of life in nursing homes.

"Get to know the elderly as people," she urged. "Give them human rather than medical care."

Ms. Gibeau described the life of an elderly resident in a nursing home as sterile and impersonal. Because architects design nursing homes like institutions, residents live in cubicle-sized rooms sparsely furnished and devoid of the usual hodgepodge of furniture and prized personal possessions which convert a house into a home.

Residents live by rigid rules and schedules. Everyone goes to bed at the same time, eats at the same time, sits in assigned chairs, and takes medication at the same time without regard for personal preferences.

To regain some control over their own lives, Ms. Gibeau suggested that residents come together at community meetings to explore their feelings about their lives, weigh options, and make decisions about what goes on in the nursing home.

Ms. Gibeau's seminar was part of a series on the elderly for nursing home care providers sponsored by the local area office of the Department of Mental Health and the Newton Public Health Department. These programs are being held every Tuesday at 12:30 p.m. Newton City Hall.

Expanding scope of Social Security

Over the past week, the President's Commission on Pensions held what could be a fruitful conference in Boston. What the 10 panel members were drafting in the way of policy recommendations won't be implemented for many years, but the seeds have been planted for improvements in Social Security and government pensions.

This is not related to the private sector, where increasingly pensions are being regarded as a supplement to existing Social Security coverage for adequacy of retirement subsistance.

This has the dual benefit of safeguarding interests of both parties.

In the public employee sector, however, the situation is different. Here is where "double dipping" comes in. By taking advantage of fairly lucrative federal, state, county and local pensions while at the same time having the foresight to moonlight on the side for a job with Social Security coverage the government worker invariably winds up doing far better than his counterpart in private industry.

Social Security, therefore, is weighted heavily on the side of the government pensioner and the taxpayer carries the extra load.

This advantage isn't about to be given up willingly. No built-in advantage is ever surrendered without resistance.

The Commission accepted the notion that Social Security benefits would comprise the "floor level" of retirement income, which could then be supplemented by other retirement programs.

Makes a lot of sense, doesn't it? The great flaw in the 1935 preliminary planning for Social Security, which came into being in 1937, was that government employees were exempted by option. Everybody should have been brought under the umbrella, as one Commission member pointed out.

One anticipated recommendation is that state and local governments would be given the option of requiring Social Security coverage on all existing employees or mandating that only new employees be covered. The option now rests with employees, with the result that few are SS affiliated for obvious reasons.

The best way to resolve this probably would be to set an arbitrary future date, say in 1985 or 1986, when Social Security should be extended on a must basis to all new government employees at all levels.

Grandfather protection would be extended to all current employees, thereby cushioning the effect.

Those federal, state, municipal and county jurisdictions which elected to provide modest pension supplements as in the case of private industry, would be encouraged to do so.

Here, perhaps, is the way to strengthen a Social Security system some believed to be inadequately funded and at the same time to provide solutions for public pension funds which are actuarily problems because of deficient reserves.

Flags flying on the Green Line

By ERNEST LOEWENSTEIN

Those red trolley cars flying the maple leaf flags that you may have noticed on the Riverside or Commonwealth Avenue lines are possible successors to the ill-fated Boeing L's.

Under the agreenent reached last fall between Boeing and the MBTA a sum of $40 million was returned to the T, which is to be used to buy new trolleys that, hopefully, will not be plagued with the problems of the present ones.

Shorter than the Boeing cars, lighter, and with a different suspension system, the Canadian cars have performed well in the three months they have been in service, and have met with considerable user acceptance.

A user survey was conducted in April, which determined that only the leg room and the comfort of standing passengers were subjects of widespread criticism.

Other trolley manufacturers in Europe have been asked to submit cars for trial here, but to date no invitation has been accepted. If the MBTA adopts the Canadian LRV, at least one major modification will be necessary; a door on the left side of the car.

In the meantime, availability of the Boeing LRV's for service has improved over recent months. The improvement is attributable in part to an aggressive maintenance program, in part to a relatively mild winter that minimized the strains on the cars.

Shirley DiLibero, superintendent of Green Line Maintenance, told the last meeting of the Green Line Committee that a consultant has been hired to train in-house personnel in maintenance and repair of the air conditioning system of the LRV's.

This system has been a major weak point in the design of the Boeing cars, and certain major modifications have been recommended by the consultant, Koton-Allen Associates. Two LRV's are being modified, to serve as prototypes for testing the modifications, while certain less drastic modifications are being incorporated in all cars, for completion in August.

If the summer weather is as kind as the winter's was, we can expect that the LRV availability will hold up reasonably well.

The Commonwealth Avenue line (Boston College Branch) is to be closed in June for a period of six months to permit major track realignment and repair work. Thus two of the four branches of the Green Line system (the other being Arborway) are closed, and availability of cars for the remaining two ought to be fairly good for the balance of the year.

DiLibero also reported to the committee that the PCC rebuilding project (PCC's are the old trolley cars) is continuing under a supplemental grant that has been approved by the federal Urban Mass Transportation Administration (UMTA).

Productivity has increased as the crew has gained experience, from two cars every 13 ½ weeks to two every eight weeks.

The major cost in the project has been found to be in the replacement of large structural parts such as the support beams and the sheet metal of stairwells and front ends. Thus cars for the rebuild program are being selected from among those with the soundest structural elements to minimize costs in the program which is eventually to produce a total of 50 "new" 1937 trolley cars at a total cost in the vicinity of $20 million.

Shcharansky subject of emergency tribunal

By ROBERT DRINAN

WASHINGTON, D.C. — This week, I will be in Europe serving on an emergency tribunal examining the case of Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky.

Shcharansky, who served as my translator and guide during a 1975 human rights mission to Moscow, was sentenced to 13 years in a labor camp on a charge of alleged spying. His real crime, in the eyes of the KGB, was helping Jews emigrate to the west. While his case is symbolic of the plight of thousands of political prisoners everywhere, it has special significance for me because of the bond of friendship I developed with Anatoly and his wife Avital.

In Amsterdam I serve on an international jury along with Coretta King, Andrew Young, Ramsey Clark, and distinguished jurists from around the world. We have seen in the past that Soviet authorities are sensitive to public actions in the democratic world. Our purpose is to draw world attention to the injustice of Shcharansky's imprisonment, and the continued persecution of other Soviet Jews and dissidents.

This tribunal, sponsored by the "Friends of Anatoly Shcharansky," will let the Soviets know we have not forgotten about Anatoly — nor shall we ever forget about him and those like him in prisons throughout the world.

FTC Authorization

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) is the agency charged with protecting consumers from fraud, and ensuring free competition in the marketplace. The FTC has been the consumer's best friend in recent years, but because of its aggressive pro-consumer stance, it has come under attack from conservatives and the friends of big business.

These special interest groups have been so successful, that the Congress has been unable for several years to pass normal authorization bills to fund the FTC. Instead, we have been forced to pass emergency appropriations to fund the FTC from month to month.

This week, the House is scheduled to consider a bill to fund the FTC through fiscal 1982. I am not happy with many provisions of this legislation. It would severely limit the FTC's power to do its job and protect consumers from monopolies, price fixing, and false advertising. However, I am afraid that with the current mood of the Congress, this is the best compromise we can get. I will almost certainly be voting in favor of this flawed bill, in the belief that even a weakened FTC is urgently needed.

Infant Formula

In Third World countries the use of infant formula has become a major cause of malnutrition and death in infants. American and European baby formula manufacturers carry on aggressive campaigns to convince Third World mothers that their product is better and "more modern" than breastfeeding. However, the cost of the formula is beyond the reach of most such families, and so the mother dilutes it more and more, often with contaminated water. The result is malnutrition, permanent disabilities, and often death for the child.

Months ago I cosponsored legislation to combat this tragedy by regulating American exports of infant formula. This week, I wrote to Secretary of State Muskie and HEW Secretary Harris urging them to adopt a firm American policy in favor of an international code of marketing and promotion of infant formula products. The United States must take a strong stand at next month's World Health Organization assembly, and that stand must reflect America's concern about this deadly situtation in the Third World.

Senior Citizen Intern

This week hundreds of older Americans arrived in Washington to participate in the 1980 Congressional Senior Citizen Intern Program. These active seniors, each sponsored by a member of the House or Senate, will get a firsthand look at how the federal government operates, and will have input in areas affecting the elderly.

Col. Paul J. Leahy of Sudbury is assisting me in my office. Col. Leahy is well known for his active leadership as chairman of the Sudbury Council on Aging. He has been attending conferences, meeting with government officials, and advising me on problems faced by senior citizens.

I welcome Col. Leahy to my staff. His advice will be particularly helpful to me in my work on the House Select Committee on Aging.

Watchdogs won't rock the boat

Commentary
by Loring Swaim

For some reason the Office of Campaign and Political Finance, set up four years ago to improve the filing and monitoring of political spending and fundraising, is afraid to rock the boat.

It has never mounted a serious investigation of any reports filed by any of the hundreds of incumbents and challengers whose records have poured into the Office and lodge in a roomful of file cabinets. Minor discrepancies have been corrected, but never a major probe of a report based either on suspicions or on a random basis.

Committee Chairman Charles Dohert says he's fearful that too much inquiry into the accuracy of filings might turn off contributors even more than they are these days. Contributors might resent being hassled by nosey investigators and the flow of campaign dollars might dry up even more.

But it is well known in political circles that some contributors don't want their name to appear. So it sometimes happens that other names are listed for contributions they didn't in fact make.

The hairraising stories of fraudulent cash contributions to certain officeholders, state and county, disclosed through the hearings of the blue ribbon Ward corruption commission suggest however that what appears on campaign filings may tell only part of the truth. In recent testimony, it was revealed that some names listed as contributing didn't contribute what they were described as giving.

The idea of instituting a simple random sampling of campaign reports– just to keep evryone honest, like the IRS does– seems anathema to the Campaign Finance Office, at least at the moment.

The hyper-active Dave Flynn is back doing what he does best in state government–trouble-shooting.

Flynn was deputy commissioner of administration and finance for Gov. Michael Dukakis, working under A&F Secretary John Buckley. But unofficially he was constantly being consulted by Gov. Dukakis for additional ramrodding of problems related to his work. He acted as sensitive go-between in dealings with certain legislative leaders.

When Gov. King got elected, Flynn moved over to be executive director of the state college system. But before long, Pres. Jimmy Carter tapped him to run his primary campaign in Massachusetts.

Now, with the agreement of state colleges, Flynn is on leave for six weeks to wqork with A&F Secretary Ed Hanley, troubleshooting in various agencies to try to unclog the pipelines and get some roadblocks removed.

One hears it said increasingly around the State House , in private of course, that the imposing presence of a corruption-busting Inspector General would not really be necessary in Massachusetts if the existing law enforcement officials–U.S. Attorney, Organized Crime Task Force, Attorney General ,district attorneys, state auditor and state comptroller–were all doing their jobs to the hilt.

On the subject of corruption, a veteran at the State House with a long memory says that if you're really interested in getting to the bottom of abuse, look to the areas where REALLY BIG BUCKS were being played with, not just the small-time stuff involved in ripping off state contracts.

For starters, he mentions the intentional fake balancing of the annual state budget that took place for re-election purposes by administrations of the past. The technique, laughed about at the time, was to hide bills in drawers till a new fiscal year rolled around so the old year looked good fiscally– and deliberately to underfund open-ended accounts like welfare and Medicaid till the election was over.

Gov. Michael Dukakis, for instance, found to his dismay he had inherited from outgoing Gov. Francis Sargent unpaid bills that would throw his budget far out of balance, despite his best efforts at belt-tightening. The fancy bookkeeping of his predecessor forced him to raise almost $1 billion in taxes, the largest hike in Massachusetts history, and to bond some of his first deficit to book.

Sources say there may be some second-echelon resignations from the departments under Secretary of Public Safety George Luciano. A former state police officer and aide to Gov. John Volpe, then commissioner for state buildings till Gov. King named him Public Safety Secretary, Luciano's grasp of the scope of the new assignment is said by sources to be causing considerable internal consternation.

Japan is under pressure to ease auto exports

Commentary
by Don Graff

It is not true that Japan exports its entire auto production.

With three million cars on the streets, Tokyo is not only the world's largest city but the perfect locale for some of its more massive traffic jams. Elsewhere in intensely urbanized Japan, the situation is similar only on a smaller scale.

The Japanese, in short, are as auto-obsessed as any people in the industrial world, which gives them a lot in common with Americans.

Too much, in fact, in the opinion some Americans. For all their frantic mobility at home, the Japanese still do export a very high percentage of a large and growing auto output, predicted to pass the American this year to take over world leadership. And a very high percentage of those exports are to the United States.

Americans who are in the business of producing and selling automobiles are understandably not happy that so many other Americans prefer the Japanese products. Hence the issue that, refusing to remain one of apolitical economics, is straining relations between the two nations that are each other's indispensable allies in the Pacific.

Japan has been under intense pressure from federal Washington and organized labor to cushion the impact of its massive sales in the U.S. market by shifting some production to American facilities. Two firms are doing so — Honda, the smaller but scrappiest of the major Japanese carmakers, with apparent enthusiasm and leader Nissan, reluctantly and in limitation. It will turn out small trucks only in U.S. plants to be set up, not its popular Datsun autos.

The new facilities should have some beneficial effect on employment, absorbing some of the 200,000 currently laid-off American auto workers. Not, however, as many as their union leaders might hope. The super-efficient and automation-conscious Japanese operate at a much higher vehicle output per worker ratio than does ponderous Detroit.

And as for Detroit, the Japanese plants will not solve its problems but may well compound them — unless this consolidation of foreign competition on its own turf speeds the U.S. industry's conversion to the smaller, fuel-efficient vehicles that are the reason for the mushrooming Japanese sales.

Conversion is now under way, but it is belated and has been grudging. Detroit long preferred complaining about Japanese trading practices to modifying its own operations in any significant way to meet the challenge.

The Japanese have as long disclaimed taking unfair advantage of their major trading partner, rampaging through the American market while closing their own to U.S., and other, producers. They claim they have only been doing business where there was business to be done.

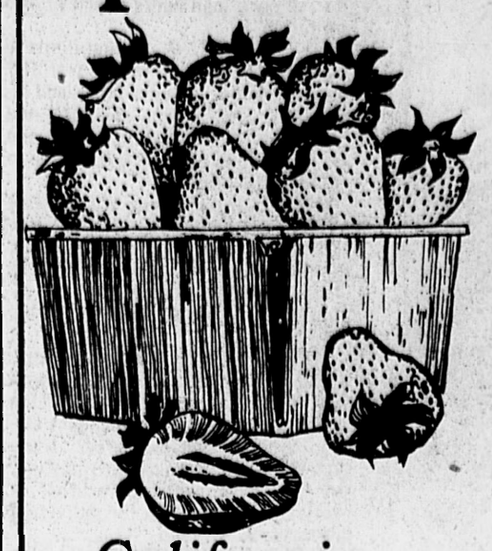

On that subject, a recent report makes some interesting points. It finds that even total elimination of existing Japanese barriers to imports would not have "a dramatic effect" on bilateral trade. The steps that must be taken to reduce the trade imbalance — expected to be more than $9 billion this year in Japan's favor, up from $8.7 billion in 1979 — are more fundamental, "particularly on the side of the U.S."

Specifically, they require taking a few leaves from Japan's own book — developing a better understanding of the Japanese market, tailoring of products to its requirements and energetically pushing sales.

Of particular interest, the advice is not another lecture from Japanese exporting experts, although it does reflect considerable Japanese input, but is the view of Americans who know the situation best, the American business community in Tokyo participating with several Japanese government and private organizations in the U.S.-Japan Trade Study Group.

The point the group's report makes should be kept in mind in evaluating the launching of U.S. operations by Japan's automakers. In regearing to meet changed economic conditions and market demands, the shifting must be done by American industry, not for it.

INSULATION CONTRACTOR: A specialist in the installation of insulation. Do not confuse with a building or roofing contractor. Such contractors are listed in the Yellow Pages under "Insulation Contractors - Cold and Heat."

KILOWATT HOUR (KWHR): A measure of the use of electric energy equal to 1,000 watts of electricity used steadily for one hour. One KWHR will power a 100-watt bulb for 10 hours.

LANDSCAPING: The planting design of shade trees, shrubs and bushes. It not only can beautify the home but also can help lower fuel bills. According to the climate, strategically placed evergreen trees and shrubs can act as wind, rain and snow breaks in winter and provide shade in summer.

Backside Restaurant

If you're looking for a way to beat the high cost of going out to dine, you'll have to look nofurther. Morrell Builders Supply Co.

Morrell Builders Supply Co., conveniently located just outside of Cleary Square at 391 Hyde Park Avenue, Hyde Park, is an exciting place to visit when you are planning a home improvement project. In 1948, this family owned and operated business began as a lumber yard and has grown over the years to a full-fledged Home Center. Morrell Builders Supply is different from any other store of this type because they never have a sale. Their everyday prices are lower than others who do advertise special sales. Morrell caters to the customer and bends over more than backward to assist their clientele who consist of homeowners, tradespeople and commercial accounts. They fully understand what they sell and give knowledgeable answers to insure professional results. They presently occupy over two acres of land and are finishing a new warehouse which will allow them to offer quality, dry lumber and building materials all year round. Unlike other lumber yards, they do not charge for cutting plywood and lumber to your specifications. Delivery is free and their prices are kept low through volume purchasing, which is passed on to the customer. At Morrell, they can help you save money by suggesting the proper product for your job while assuring you of long lasting quality.

Perhaps you're interested in remodeling your kitchen into something more efficient and better suited to your life-style. A wide selection of kitchen cabinets can create instant magic and transform your present kitchen into a room that you will enjoy and be proud of. Bathrooms too!

WEATHERSTRIPPING: Strips of metal, plastic, rubber or felt applied around the perimeter of all exterior doors and windows to stop air leaks. Like caulking, weatherstripping is easily applied and normally not too expensive.

For more information and advice on all areas of energy conservation contact your local utility, or write: J.H. Meeks, Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corporation, Fiberglas Tower, Toledo, Ohio 43659 for a free brochure titled "How To Bring Your Fuel Bill Under Control."

CRAWL SPACE: The area between the bottom of the house and the ground. Usually two to four feet high, crawl spaces are usually found in homes without a basement or a concrete slab base. Installing insulation on the underside of the first floor (the top of the crawl space) retards the loss of heat through the floor. Piping and heating ducts are often found in crawl spaces. Be sure to insulate ducts to prevent loss of heat; wrap pipes with insulation to prevent them from freezing.

NAHB RESEARCH FOUNDATION, INC. LABEL: When this label appears on a package of insulation, it means samples of the material have been tested by independent experts of the National Association of Home Builders Research Foundation, Inc.

PEAK LOAD PERIOD: The time when the demand for energy is the greatest. Summer days and winter nights are termed "peak load" periods in many utility service areas. And, in some cases, energy consumed during peak load hours is priced at a premium.

RETROFITTING: Adding items to existing homes. A typical "retrofit" package might include: increased attic insulation, storm windows and caulking around windows, doors and all accessible construction joints to cut air infiltration.

R-VALUE: A measure of insulating ability - applied to materials of construction, windows, doors, framing members, concrete, etc., as well as insulation itself. The higher the R-value, the greater the insulating power.

THERMOSTAT: The temperature regulating dial or sliding gauge with which you can control the temperature of the heating and air-conditioning system. With some systems, such as baseboard heating, you can controltemperatures in every room, if you ask for individual thermostats.

VAPOR BARRIERS: Shields that resist the flow of water vapor through the ceiling, walls and floors of a structure. Most blanket type insulation is available with a kraft paper or foil facing, that acts as a vapor barrier. Unfaced insulation may require the addition of a vapor barrier, such as foil backed gypsum board or polyethylene sheeting, to the warm-in-winter side of the structure.

VENTILATION: The circulation of air into and out of a house so fresh air replaces stale. In winter, if your attic and crawl space (if you have one) are not ventilated properly, water vapor or moisture can build up unnecessarily and may cause condensation problems. When insulating your attic, care should be taken so you do not lay batts over vents.

AIR INFILTRATION: This is the leakage into your home, through cracks and crevices, of hot - or cold - air. It causes winter "heat loss" or summer "heat gain" and a waste of your energy dollars.

BTU: Literally, British Thermal Unit. A measure of heat flow. One Btu of heat is required to raise the temperature of 1 lb. of water one degree Fahrenheit (e.g., from 59 degrees to 60 degrees).

it pays for itself!

Let us show you how easy it is to replace your wooden basement door with one that will add beauty and value to your home. A modern, all-steel Bilco Door will keep serving you well for years to come — paying for itself many times over by saving you repair and replacement costs.

If your house was built without the convenience and safety of a direct basement door ask us for a copy of Bilco's "How to" booklet for adding one.

Stop in and see our display. We'll give you free literature on how to do it. Or, we can suggest a contractor to install it for you.

INTRODUCING THE 72-DAY -- $95 SUMMER VACATION FOR THE ENTIRE FAMILY

You don't have to be told that your dollar doesn't go too far today. You have to cut corners, make sacrifices just to make ends meet. Many times those sacrifices include summer activities or vacations. Well, at the Family Y of Newton we know how important recreation, relaxation and especially family involvement can be. That's the reason for our Family Outing Club. We believe in the "family" vacation and a low-cost one at that.

Located in Wayland, Mass. the Family Outing Club has something for everyone. For the swimmers, a 75 foot outdoor pool (plus a kiddie pool) set in the pines; Tennis bums can take advantage of our two hardtop courts; if you're a ballplayer there are areas for softball, soccer, volleyball, football, floor hockey, just about any sport; nature lovers can delight in 20 acres of woods, a frog-filled brook and a small pond; picnicers have use of fireplaces and picnic tables; and for those who just want to relax, there are lounge chairs by the pool and shady willows by the pond.

It's a bit of splendor for a splendid price. The membership fee is just $95 per family for the season and guests of the family just have to pay $2.00 per person/per visit. The F.O.C. hours are: May 24 - Sept. 1, weekends 12 p.m. - 8 p.m. and June 30 - Aug. 29, weekdays 4 p.m. - 8 p.m. It is closed on Thursdays. For more info or brochure call or write The Family Y of Newton, 276 Church St., Newton, Ma. 02158 (244-6050).

"I did some serious checking with other salons and weight control groups. There were many to choose from, but only a few of them are still around.
I wanted convenience, service (not just promises) and results. Seven years ago, I found Gloria Stevens. I've never been dissappointed. Gloria Stevens just keeps getting better and better.
And so do I!!"
Ann LeCamera (right)
"I tried a diet program—It wasn't enough. Oh, I took off some weight, but, I quickly put it back. Then, I joined Gloria Stevens.

'Princess' was boring to many

By ANTHONY R. WOOD
United Press International

Bomb threats, court suits and protests reaching halfway around the world failed to deter the majority of Public Broadcasting Service affiliates from airing "Death of a Princess" — the controversial program about life in Saudi Arabia, the nation's largest oil supplier.

The show went on Monday night despite official complaints and callers who lit up station switchboards voicing concerns ranging from the program's content to its effect on U.S.-Saudi relations. Only seven of the 240 PBS affiliates did not air the two-hour film.

KTCA-TV in Minneapolis received two telephoned bomb threats just before the show was aired. KLRN in Austin, Texas, also received a bomb threat. At the PBS affiliate in Des Moines, Iowa, off-duty police officers were hired for security during the showing.

Many who called stations after the showing, however, said they wondered what all the fuss was about. Some even said they found it boring.

"We received a lot of unpleasant and abusive cals before it was shown," said KTCA receptionist Gwen Lewis. "Afterwards, the calls were very positive. Now they seem to be all for it and the callers didn't think it was all that controversial."

In New York, WNET said that it received more than 1,000 "discussion-type" telephone calls over the weekend from people concerned with the politics vs. the First Amendment, but only a "trickle" came in Monday night. "There's not much of a reaction now that the show is on the air," WNET program director Harold Holzer said.

The controversy surrounding the British-made film — telling of the executions of a 19-year-old Saudi princess and her commoner lover — began weeks ago and intensified in the last few days before the showing.

Mobil Oil Corp. took out full-page newspaper ads saying that airing the film would be contrary to the national interest. The Saudi government and the U.S. State Department asked PBS not to show it.

Petitions — later denied — were filed in Atlanta and San Francisco to stop the broadcast.

Ex-wife of Wrigley wins $20,000

CHICAGO (UPI) — The ex-wife of chewing gum heir William Wrigley is entitled to a $20,000 inheritance the Wrigley family tried to write out of the will, a Probate Court jury decided Monday.

The seven-man, five-woman jury deliberated about two hours before determining the amendment to the will of Helen A. Wrigley, William's mother, was not a valid document.

The verdict was a victory for Joan Wrigley, whose six-year marriage to William Wrigley — owner of the Chicago Cubs baseball team — was annuled last fail by a Wisconsin court. After it was read, she hugged her attorney and said: "To have all that power and money. To think that a real person can win."

Joan Wrigley brought suit charging the amendment to the will was engineered by Wrigley family attorneys without Helen's knowledge.

Her attorney, Michael J. Rovell, said during closing arguments Helen was incapable of understanding an amendment that wrote her daughter-in-law out of her inheritance. Rovell said a stroke Helen suffered in 1975, which left her unable to speak and partially paralyzed, affected her reading ability and comprehension.

WORTH MILLIONS—A Tokyo museum paid $3 million for a Picasso painting titled "Saltimbanque Seated With Arms Crossed." The painting was auctioned off in New York and set a world record price for a 20th century paintinng.

Newton Y sets annual meeting

NEWTON—The Family Y of Newton will hold its 130th annual meeting on Wednesday, May 21, at 6:30 p.m. at the Y building, 276 Church St., Newton Corner with a presentation of a five-year plan.

Highlights of Supreme Court's decisions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Highlights of Supreme Court actions Monday:

Criminal law

In a 6-3 ruling, established a new guideline for police interrogation of suspects in custody.

Over two dissents, held that to get a conviction overturned, a defendant must show his right to effective counsel was violated by an actual — not merely potential — conflict of interest.

Refused to review the complaint by the California public defender that a 17-year-old was convicted of the adult crime of murder without a jury and without an avenue for appeal.

Let stand, over three dissents, the obscenity conviction of an Ohio adult book store manager who had argued that a jury was not qualified to determine whether materials meant for a deviant sex group were obscene.

Let stand the mail fraud convictions of two Georgia men who claimed their right to a jury trial was violated when they did not give written consent to a trial by 11 jurors — instead of the usual 12.

Dismissed a challenge to Indiana's public indecency statute which provides criminal penalties for nude dancing in a public place.

Turned down an appeal by John Duff Abercrobie, convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment in Louisiana for murdering a priest.

Refused to review the case of Nikolai Wischnewski, convicted and sentenced to 20 years in jail for attempting to hijack an Eastern Airlines plane en oute from Jacksonville, Fla. to At lanta on Dec. 25. 1977.

Educati

Upheld 5-3 a ruling that the racial disparities in Atlanta's schools may not be remedied by interdistrict busing.

Let stand a ruling by Kentucky's top court that the state is restricted in its efforts to regulate the curriculum and instruction in private and parochial schools.

Let stand a ruling that a public bus authority is barred from using federally funded equipment for transporting school children.

Individual rights

Ruled 5-4 an employer must contribute toward retirement benefits for vested workers whose pension fund terminated with insufficient assets after a federal pension protection law went into effect in 1974.

Decided 6-3 that the wife of a harbor worker injured on a ship may sue the vessel owner in state court for the loss of her husband's familial presence.

Alligators and Appleseed's.

The common alligator may prefer the Everglades of Florida. But the Lacoste alligator favors a different habitat. The Appleseed's of Massachusetts. Four sites north and west of Boston where the species arrives faithfully each spring. Braving the Northeast storms and the handbag manufacturers of Brockton and Lynn en route. This year, they're here in record numbers.

Small, medium and large alligators. Even extra large alligators. In every conceivable spring color.

You'll find alligators on tops, jackets, jumpers, skirts and shorts by Haymaker. On David Crystal dresses. On Lacoste knits and pullovers. And alligators all over the men's department, on sportswear by Izod.

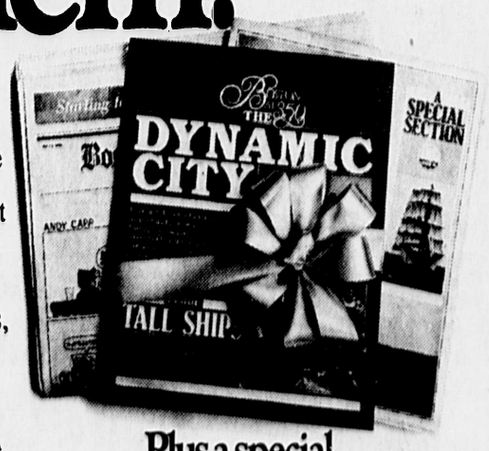

Come see the alligators and all the other spring creations. Including gifts for every room in the house. You're going to enjoy the good taste of Appleseed's.

Red Cross gives tornado safety tips

NEWTONVILLE — May brings with it the peak of the tornado season in this country. During the month, the center of maximum frequency lies over the southern plains states as a warm, moist air from the Gulf meets cool, dry air surging in from the North, the American Red Cross says.

While tornadoes occur in all seasons and in all 50 states, the period of greatest danger lies in April, May and June. With this in mind, the American Red Cross issues the following safety tips:

When a tornado threatens, your immediate action can save your life.

Stay away from windows, doors and outside walls. Protect your head.

In schools, nursing homes, hospitals, factories, offices and shopping centers, go to pre-designated shelter areas. Interior hallways on the lowest floors are considered safest.

In high-rise buildings, go to interior small rooms or hallways.

In mobile homes or vehicles, leave them and go to a substantial structure. If there is no shelter nearby, lie flat in the nearest ditch, ravine or culvert with your hands shielding your head.

Remember: Tornado watch means tornadoes and severe thunderstorms are possible. Tornado warning means tornado detected, take shelter immediately.

The Newton Branch, West Suburban Red Cross Chapter has a flyer listing Tornado Safety Rules, which is available at the Chapter headquarters, 21 Foster Street, Newtonville; or call 527-6000 and a copy will be mailed to you.

Tennant fools Heart Fund handicappers

NEWTON—Looks can be deceiving so when aldermen Robert Tennant went swimming last Saturday, some other aldermen took a bath.

Tennant volunteered for the Heart Fund Swim-a-thon at Boston College and his fellow board members pledged donations for every length of the pool he completed.

Some insiders spotted Tennant as sleeper and pledged conservative donations of 10 cents or 25 cents

Rare violin stolen

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Someone has stolen concert violinist Roman Totenberg's rare, $200,000, adopted "child."

Police Wednesday said Totenberg's Stradivarius violin was stolen Tuesday night at the Longy School of Music.

"It's one of only 400 Stradivarius violins known to be in existence," said J. Bradley Taylor, a stringed instrument expert.

The instrument, made in 1734 in Italy and bearing the label of master violin maker Antonio Stradivari, was owned for 40 years by Totenberg, the director of the music school.

"I don't quite believe it. It's like my child or wife is gone," Totenberg said. "A violin is like a child you adopt and over the years you shape it and mold it. You buy special bows and strings for it and that influences the sound."

Totenberg, 69, had played the violin at a concert of Mozart's music at the Longy School Tuesday night. Police said the theft took place between 9:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. during a reception following the program.

Police said that representatives of Totenberg's New York insurance company were flying to Boston to post a reward for the return of the instrument.

Big money for fall fashions

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fall 1980 will be a season of fashion choices for American women — especially if they have money.

Top U.S. designers have proved through the fall-winter collections they've unveiled over the last few weeks that they are a much gutsier breed than the nation's stockbrokers who have panicked at every new and gloomier report on the current recession.

The country's finest in the rag trade have hung in there, undaunted by economic forecasts, and produced their most expensive fall collections ever.

From Ralph Lauren's practical, preppy blazer-and-grey-flannel ensembles, through Hanae Mori's geometric chiffons with asymmetrical hemlines, to Kansai Yamamoto's gold breast plates with glittering gold pants, prices are high.

43 elderly units lost at Paul St.

NEWTON—A post-mortem on the loss of the Paul Street Housing project Wednesday did little more than confirm the death of the proposal.

Planning Director Barry Canner told the Administration and Planning Committee the federal department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has officially withdrawn $800,000 in funding that was to be used to construct 43 units of elderly housing.

But there were no clear cut answers as to why the four-year-old project failed, as some aldermen predicted it would more than a year ago.

The housing was to have been built on the site of an oil storage depot if the depot could be relocated.

Owner Frank A. Donato had picked out a likely relocation site on Washington Street near West Newton Square, but the Board of Aldermen rejected that plan.

Apparently an alternate location could not be found and at one point Donato would have agreed to the housing if the city agreed to a car wash on the Washington Street site, something that came as news to some aldermen at Wednesday's meeting.

Canner said HUD finally gave the city 30 days to close the deal. It would have taken more than 30 days to get special permits thrugh the board.

The land could have been taken by eminent domain, but Canner said HUD was reluctant to get involved in litigation that might raise project costs.

Alderman Mark White, who asked for a discussion of the failed housing project, said land takings usually result in law suits.

Canner said the project cost wasn't the real issue. He said HUD wanted a negotiated settlement.

White said the board could not have relocated the the depot to West Newton because it would have been an industrial use in a business district.

Jackpots are getting bigger

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — It took five hours, $5,000 and hundreds of pulls on the handle before the four reels lined up the world's largest slot machine jackpot.

It was $314,741, paid by Harolds Club to Clark Petrochilos and Bill Ragland of Fresno, Calif.

"I saw two reels line up, then the third and I yelled at Bill," said Petrochilos. "Then the fourth came in and I screamed. I couldn't believe it. Isn't that something?"

It really is. The giant jackpots have moved slot machines ahead of dice — though still well behind blackjack — as the biggest revenue producers in Nevada casinos.

Slot machines traditionally have been the province of "little old ladies" or tourists who know little about the card and dice games. They could "watch the wheels go 'round" for an investment of only a few coins and might even win a jackpot ranging from $5 for a nickel to $100 for a dollar.

But the new breed of one-armed bandit tempts even the veteran gambler with a variety of electronically controlled games, some offering jackpots that grow progressively larger as more money is fed into them. The previous record jackpot was $305,000 at the Flamingo Hilton in Las Vegas. Harolds Club posted an earlier record of $236,756.

The amount of the possible jackpot flashes on a panel atop the "progressive" machines. Players attract a crowd when the total reaches the heights. Frequently, several people will pool their resources in an informal corporation and play a machine they think is ready to pay off. They are not always as lucky as Petrochilos and Ragland.

"When we saw the jackpot go over $300,000, he said, 'They're going to beat Las Vegas. It's ready to pay. Let's play it and stick with it,'" Ragland recalled.

They had to drop five coins for each pull of the handle to be eligible for the super jackpot. Had they played one, two, three or four coins, the same lineup would have paid much less.

The slot business began to grow dramatically in 1978, when there were 7,800 $1 denomination machines that raked in $312.6 million. In 1979, the total grew to 11,600, a 48 percent jump in one year. Gross revenue was $417 million, an increase of 29 percent.

Stuart Curtiss of the state Gaming Control Board's Research Bureau thinks inflation is a main reason for the sharp increase in the play of dollar slots.

"The dollar doesn't mean as much to people as it used to," he said, "and casinos are putting more effort into marketing by using carousels and other gimmicks."

Church may drop Holy Day

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Roman Catholic Church is considering whether to drop one of the six Holy Days of Obligation upon which the nation's 50 million Catholics are required to attend mass, church officials said Wednesday.

The church is surveying its bishops for their views on the proposal, the officials said.

The church observes six Holy Days of Obligation.

Merit Stands Alone.

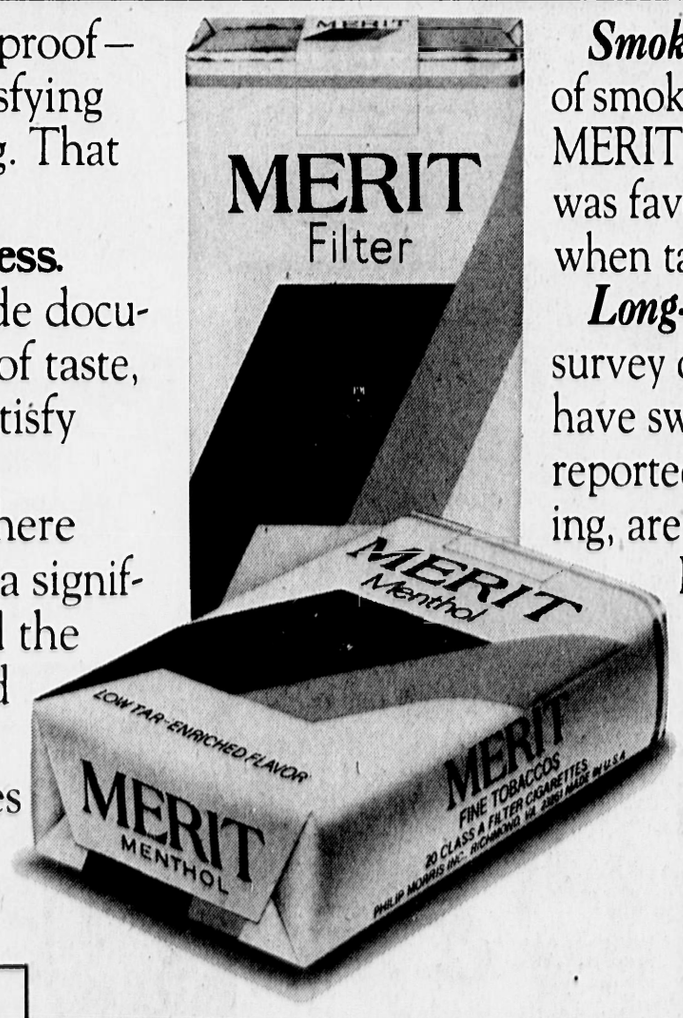

Research underscores MERIT as proven taste alternative to high tar smoking.

One low tar cigarette offers proof—not claims—that there is a satisfying alternative to high tar smoking. That alternative: MERIT.

MERIT Taste Key To Success.

Latest smoker studies provide documented evidence in key areas of taste, ease of switch and ability to satisfy long term.

Blind Taste Tests: In tests where brand identity was concealed, a significant majority of smokers rated the taste of low tar MERIT as good as—or better than—leading high tar brands. Even cigarettes having twice the tar!

Smoker Preference: Among the 95% of smokers stating a preference, the MERIT low tar/good taste combination was favored 3 to 1 over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed!

Long-Term Satisfaction: In the latest survey of former high tar smokers who have switched to MERIT, 9 out of 10 reported they continue to enjoy smoking, are glad they switched, and report MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried!

MERIT is the proven alternative to high tar smoking. And you can taste it.

Sports medicine seminar May 27

BRIGHTON — Local residents interested in the prevention and treatment of sports injuries are invited to attend St. Elizabeth's Hospital's Sports Medicine Seminar Tuesday, May 27, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the hospital's Keith Auditorium.

The seminar will focus on acute and chronic neck and shoulder injuries in athletics.

Orthopedic surgeons on the hospital staff will be available to answer questions on the prevention, management and rehabilitation of neck and shoulder injuries as well as other common athletic injuries.

A buffet luncheon will be provided and free parking is available. Free blood pressure screenings will also be offered as part of St. Elizabeth's "May is Hypertension Month" program.

Continuing Education credits are available for Registered Emergency Medical Technicians and Certified Athletic Trainers.

To register, send a check for $7 with your name and address to: James Bucciarelli, Trainer-Coordinator, Sports Medicine Center, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, 736 Cambridge St., Brighton, Mass., 02135.

North girls' tennis team keeps winning

By Karen Fisher
& Julie Colliton

NEWTON — The Newton North Girls' Varsity Tennis Team, undefeated in the last two years of Suburban League play, began their season with a scrimmage against powerful Lincoln-Sudbury.

The Lincoln-Sudbury squad provided both good players and a challenging match for the Newton girls. They were not powerful enough, however, to overtake the devasting strength of Newton who won the match 3-2.

Since that scrimmage, no other team has even come close to threatening the Newton North girls' unmarred record. With 5-0 wins against Cambridge, Brockton, Weymouth North and Quincy and a 4-1 win against Brookline already recorded, the girls look ahead to another exceptional season.

This year's team combines old and new talent to provide both great singles players and unbeatable doubles combinations.

The roster consists of senior co-captains Judy Hinchey and Jill Busny, seniors Julie Colliton and Karen Fisher and juniors and sophomores June Ferestien, Debbie Kaufman, Ronit Schwarz, Mira Schwarz, Allison McCarthy, Tamah Solomon and Jenna Lammers.

When Coach Harriet Roossin was asked about the team's strength, she said, "The marvelous thing about this year's team is that we have the versatility and depth to allow many players the opportunity to play varsity tennis. It is unusual to have a team that has strength from the first singles player to the second doubles team. This year every spot is a potential match winner."

Jackie first again

BOSTON (UPI) — Jacqueline Gareau, the petite Canadian declared the 1980 Boston Marathon women's winner two weeks after she finished the race, crossed the finish line again Wednesday — twice.

Gareau, 27, remained the quiet eye of a controversial storm over the apparent women's finisher, Cuba-born New York office worker Rosie Ruiz who was stripped of the title after race sponsors determined she had not run the entire 26.2 mile course.

Boston Athletic Association director Will Cloney crowned Gareau Wednesday, three weeks after the April 21 race, this time with four-time men's winner Bill Rodgers at her side.

Some 200 lunchtime spectators crowded near the Prudential Center finish line in the city's Back Bay section as Cloney present Gareau a traditional laurel wreath, her gold medal and an untraditional bouquet of roses.

"I think tradition was broken this year," Gareau said of the gesture.

For the sake of ceremony, two race officials held a blue finish tape aloft as Gareau jogged the final 15-yard stretch and, arms raised above her head, broke through the "victory" tape.

When photographers crowded behind the line asked for an instant replay — for the sake of pictures — Gareau obliged, enjoying her second finish as much as the first.

The Montreal hospital worker who has run in eight marathons and won six said she didn't mind the delay in being crowned winner, but was just as glad the experience was over.

Gareau said she bore no ill feelings toward the 26-year-old Ruiz.

Chestnut Hill School holds benefit road race

CHESTNUT HILL — A field of 425 men and women assembled May 4 to compete in the first annual "Speed of Light" 5.5 mile Road Race to benefit the Scholarship Fund of the Chestnut Hill School.

Among the 380 who completed the distance were many Newton residents, including the top male and female finishers.

Peter Stanton took the lead within the first half mile and held it to cross the finish line in 28:20 minutes. First among the women was Nancy Cuthbertson of the Highlands, stopping the clock at 35:15.

The second, third, and fourth women to finish were also from Newton.

Dorothy Lilien was timed at 35:18, Patricia Gilligan at 36:43, and B.U. Freshman Laurie Shillito of Chestnut Hill at 36:44.

Dorothy and Laurie each won First Place in their age divisions. Also placing first in his age category was Sargent Walter Haywood of the Newton Police Department, a resident of Newtonville, coming through at 35:50.

On hand to present trophies to these and other winners were Don Chaney of the Boston Celtics, accompanied by daughter Kara, Dr. Rob Roy McGregor of Sports Medicine Resource and "Evening Magazine," and Charlie Rodgers, brother of Bill and a runner in his own right, who announced that the money raised this year and by future CHS road races would be designated as the "Bill Rodgers Scholarship Fund for Chestnut Hill School."

The awards were donated by Fayva Shoe Stores, as were T-shirts and gift certificates.

Helping race officials at the finish and congratulating all who participated, were Morse Shoe representatives Charles Tieuli and Dale Jacubec. Both invited everyone to return next year.

Race organizers Headmaster Joseph Allison and Merle Schreiber, a parent, praised and thanked everyone who cooperated to make the run a spectacular and enjoyable event.

"For many becane a family outing with a new meaning," commented Mrs. Schreiber. "This very special afternoon would not have been possible without the assistance of the Newton Police and the Explorer Scouts, the Brookline Police and Auxiliary, the State Police, and the West Suburban Red Cross Chapter's volunteer disaster unit."

Allison also noted that donations from the Chestnut Hill Rotarians and the Stop & Shop Supermarkets contributed substantially to the day's success.

Tennis Now has olympics

WALTHAM — On Sunday, May 18, the annual Tennis-Now Junior Olympics will be held at the Tennis-Now Outdoor Playing Center, 60 Angleside Rd., Waltham (adjoining Brandeis University).

There will be two programs: one for juniors 14 and younger from 2 to 4 p.m., and one from 3:30 to 5:30 for juniors 14 and older (born after Oct. 1, 1965).

The Tennis Olympics feature skill contests for players at all levels above beginner, as well as drill games and informal team competition; they are conducted under the direction of Michael Deming. If weather permits, the Playing Center pool will be open to participants; and refreshments will be served.

All juniors (and their parents) are invited. There is no charge. Please call the Playing Center at 891-6030 before noon on Sunday to reserve a place.

Braves trounce White Sox

NEWTON — Braves pitcher Josh Carpenter struck out six while no-hitting the White Sox in Sunday action at Lyons Field.

A walk, stolen base and two passed balls resulted in the only run the White Sox could muster in their losing effort.

Chris Higgins, pressed into last-minute action as catcher, contributed a superb defensive game as well as two base hits, two RBI's and a run scored.

Shortstop Mike Ryan, while held hitless, kept the bases clear for the Braves with four sparkling defensive plays. This was the third win in a row for the Braves after two disappointing losses. Final 8-1.

On Thursday, May 7, Bobby Blouin won his first of the year by pitching a four hitter against the Orioles, the game was decided by Blouins' solo homer in the fourth inning. Final 3-2.

Earlier in the week the Braves had broken the winning streak of the Red Legs, who had gone three in a row, by a score of 5-2.

Filibuster on draft expected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Appropriations Committee has passed the money bill needed to pay for President Carter's draft registration, but a promised filibuster clouds its future.

The measure — already passed by the House — now goes to the Senate floor, but is not expected to be taken up until late this month.

Just before the committee took final action on the bill Tuesday, Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., renewed his pledge to filibuster the bill on the floor and to try to undermine the bill with amendments.

"You're going to hear much of this over again — ad nauseum — on the floor," Hatfield told the committee.

By offering several amendments in committee, Hatfield already has managed to delay the bill for more than a week.

Ways of updating the older home

You've looked around and come to the conclusion that you're better off staying in your old, but affordable home. How can you bring it up to date and make it more comfortable?

Research indicates that the greatest need for remodeling older homes is in the kitchen and the bathroom and in providing storage space.

Experts point out that the kitchen is now no longer simply a work area, but a social center as well. Here are suggestions for bringing that presently drab kitchen into the Seventies:

•Is there a porch adjacent to your kitchen? Why not enclose it for additional eating space. Or, you may want to eliminate a wall between your kitchen and breakfast nook to create one large family room.

•New appliances such as range with separate wall ovens, hi-lo double ovens, dishwashers, waste disposers, and trash compactors can be built into new counter units for great time-saving convenience.

•A dark kitchen can become bright and sunny with new windows or even a skylight or greenhouse window.

•Extending a wall of the kitchen can give your family the breakfast nook it needs, or provide space for a laundry area.

Outmoded bathrooms are not only unstylish, they're inefficient. Here are some ways to bring that bathroom up to date:

•A tiny bathroom can gain added space from an adjoining spacious bedroom. Just a few feet can give a bathroom more breathing room and provide needed storage space, without affecting the bedroom space to any great degree.

•Extending a bathroom wall be cantilevering the added floor space (thus avoiding having to add a foundation) can give you more room as well.

•New fixtures such as whirlpool tubs, saunas or cabinet lavatories can make any bathroom more luxurious.

•You can give a bathroom the semblance of spaciousness and vastly increase its eye-appeal by replacing one wall with glass and fencing off the area around it, for a charming, private, little garden.

•An over-worked bathroom calls for added bathroom facilities! Scrutinize your home for areas that can be converted into an extra powder room or shower stall. A hallway, a closet, or even the space under a stairway offer possibilities.

•You may be able to make better use of existing bathroom space by compartmentalizing; partitioning off areas can allow more than one person to use the facilities and still have privacy for instance.

•If space allows, a double-vanity will speed up that morning bottleneck in the bathroom.

—Adding a small powder room off the basement recreation room can help keep other bathrooms neat, particularly if there are youngsters in the family.

•Many older bathrooms have only one small window. A skylight can create the sunny, open effect you want, is ideal for decorating with plants.

•If the den has a closet that's just used for collecting odds and ends, consider installing a lavatory in that space; it will take pressure off your bathroom during the morning rush, will be handy for guests.

Nothing is so inconvenient as lack of storage space, and providing new room for storing out-of-season equipment or seldom-used items can be a real bonus.

Here are some ways you can add storage space to your home:

•Install wall-storage systems where you now have pictures hanging; art objects can add the decorative touches, while the shelves perform useful storage duty.

•Turn that utilitarian basement-laundry into a thing of beauty, as well as function, with handy floor-to-ceiling shelving, encasing both washer and dryer.

•Install cabinets in the "dead" space over your shower or tub for storing extra linens, little-used items.

•If there's wasted space under that stairway, now's the time to convert it into a handy storage area.

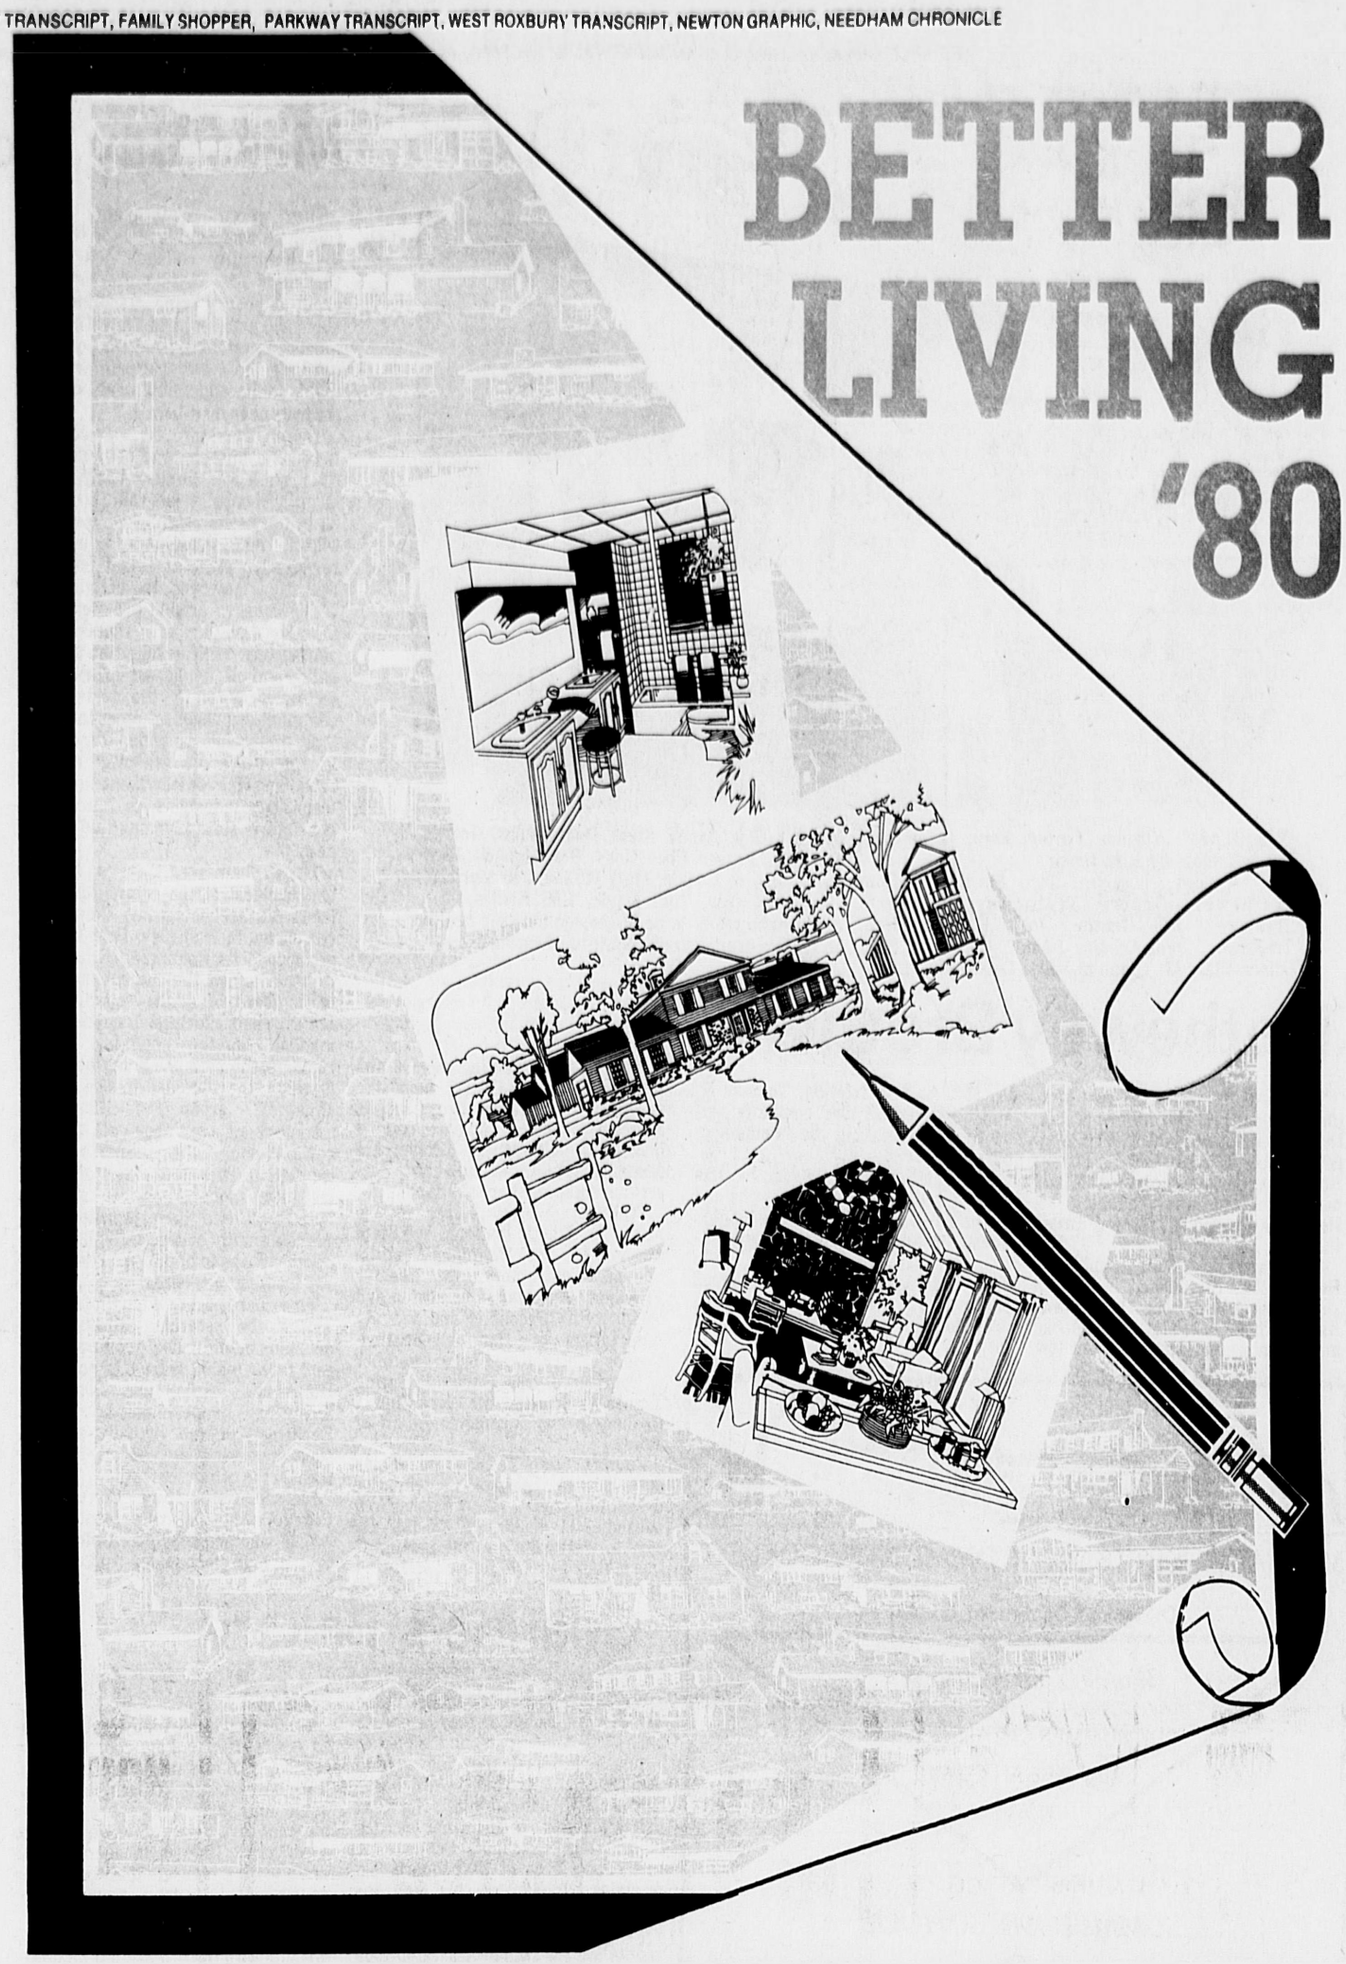

•Turn one wall of the den into a floor-to-ceiling storage unit to house the TV, stereo, books, what-have-you.

•Often space is wasted in the area above kitchen windows — install shallow cabinets for storing little-used housewares.

•If you occasionally have need for guest facilities, yet don't want to give up your den or sewing room, consider installing a pull-down bed that goes into the wall when not needed.

•That old-fashioned wash-basin is sitting on wasted space! Now's the time to remodel with a new vanity that can house many bath supplies, give your bathroom a more modern look.

Remodeling projects can be as ambitious as completely renovating a room or as simple as installing a few shelves.

Trethewey Brothers

Thomas H. Matthews of T.A. Matthews & Son Inc., 1157 Adams Street, Dorchester and Ronald K. Trethwey Bros., Inc., 4280 Washington Street, Roslindale merged as of April 30, 1979 making Matthews Plumbing & Heating a division of Trethwey Bros., Inc.

T.A. Matthews & Sons Plumbing & Heating was established in 1898 in Dorchester. With one horse and wagon, Thomas A. Matthews opened and operated the company from 1898 to 1951. In 1949 his son, Thomas H. Matthews joined the company and continued operating the business to the present day.

Since 1902, Trethwey Bros., Inc. has offered quality plumbing, heating and gasfitted work at 4280 Washington Street, Roslindale. This four generation company now services, with radio dispatched fully equipped trucks, all of Boston including suburbs, north, south and west of the city.

Plumbing and heating repairs and remodeling have always been the specialty of Trethewey Bros., Inc. In addition, a supplies and parts department, air conditioning, Kitchen Aid products, appliances and energy conserving equipment are available.

Trethwey Bros. are active members of both National and State Associations of Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Contractors, the Master Plumbers' Association of Boston and Vicinity, the Brookline and Vicinity Association of Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Contractors, Boston Chamber of Commerce, New England Heating Trades Association, the Lions Club of Roslindale and Roslindale Board of Trade.

Mass Bay Community College

They weren't clairvoyant, those educators who established the first of the community colleges nearly 20 years ago. They had no premonitions about an energy crisis; gasoline was about 25c a gallon, and the establishment of a system of two-year colleges covering the state was primarily to make public education accessible to students near their homes.

Tuition rates were low, as well, and it became immediately obvious that the system was filling a need, since day school enrollments rapidly climbed to the limits established for each school, and continuing education registration grew at a fast pace as well. Now, however, the distribution of the colleges around the state and the low tuition are doubly advantageous. With gasoline at $1.25 a gallon and climbing, and inflation affecting every family, the existence of community colleges becomes increasingly important. An added dimension is the need for training and/or retraining for employment in high technology industries, so much emphasized in state planning and in the news.

The Dedham area is served by one of the oldest of the community colleges, Massachusetts Bay Community College, in Wellesley. Both its day school and its Continuing Education Division reflect the current increase in numbers of adults returning to school. Their educational needs are a function of the changing social customs, the increase in ingle parent families, the increase in the newly emerging group of displaced homemakers, - but above all, the important factor in their return to school is inflation. They need extra jobs, better jobs, more money to support themselves and their families, and the community college is the least expensive place to obtain the education and training they need.

There are several main groups among the returning adults. The declining public school population has sent many teachers back to school to learn new skills, and computer technology superimposed on a Bachelor's degree virtually assures such reentering students of employment in the computer field.

Massachusetts Bay Community College is strategically located for people who are seeking employment in the high technology fields. For many people, computers are synonymous with high technology, and Massachusetts Bay can offer a number of courses in this rapidly growing area.

Another group of returning students consists of office and clerical workers who are seeking careers with upward mobility. Business courses such as accounting, management, mrketing, retailing, and sales administration make it possible for experienced office workers to capitalize on their office experience and their additional courses to make themselves eligible for a wider variety of openings in industries that interest them.

Yet another group of returning students has been little mentioned in feature stories documenting the problems faced by single parents, displaced homemakers, etc. They are not a tremendous group, but they are an appreciable minority in the over-18 group which has steady but not very lucrative jobs and takes one or two courses in the evening. This is the group which says "My parents wanted me to go to college but I didn't really want to," or "All my friends were going so I went too, but I didn't do well at all, but now I know what I need and I want toiome back." Adn they come, and they do well, and they go out and get better jobs with more future promise. They too, are the ones for which the community colleges exist.

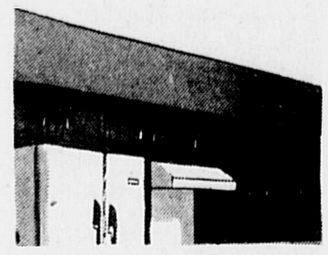

Summer school begins in early June. There is no better time to embark on a new course, a new carer, a whole new life.

Home Improvement Specialists

L. Jack Giandomenico, President of Home improvement Specialists, Inc., located at 120 South Street, Walpole, has the best of all home improvement worlds under one roof. Staffed by twenty-two craftsmen, this firm can do anything in the way of complete kitchens, baths, additions and other home improvements you may have in mind, be they big or small projects.

Their showroom boasts of many different styles of kitchen cabinets which they custom build. A complete line of major appliances is also available, as well as tile, linoleum or vinyl coverings, handmade leaded glass light fixtures and, if you wish, handmade leaded glass cabinet doors,. Guarino's Bakery

1980 has a special meaning for Joe and Gloria Guarino as they celebrate their Fifth Anniversary in the baking business. In April, they moved into their large, modern bakery which was built at 865 Washington St., Norwood just across from their former location in the Rama Shopping Center. The new shop's area of 2000 square feet provides more space for the Guarino's to serve their customers.

The Guarino's have an excellent reputation for Italian-American baked products and have not been surpassed by competitors. They serve the geographic area which starts around Attleboro and continues up Rte. 128 to Newton. Quality is their first and foremost ingredient in everything they bake. Their specialities include many Italian baked goods, rum cakes, cookie trays, breads, rolls and miniature pastries. Busy hostesses find Guarino's dependable and their guests are always pleased to be served such a nice assortment. Cookies in every shape are always a pleasant addition to the cookie jar where they never last too long.

Wedding cakes, which are made in keeping with the bridal color scheme, are custom decorated and prepared [illegible] the choice of special keepsake tops in almost endless.

Special orders are always appreciated in advance.

How to Choose a Reputable Remodeler

When you find that your house is too small for your growing family, or you need extra space for work or hobbies, and you don't want to move, remodeling may be the answer. But how do you find a reputable remodeler who will give you thye most for your money?

Walking your fingers through the Yellow Pages won't tell you who is reliable. However, chances are that your area has a builders association affiliated with the National Association of Home Builders. They can give you a lisat of reliable remodelers.

But don't stop there. Most problems in the remodelking business occur when consumers fail to investigate remodelers properly before hiring them. Try to speak to someone who has used the remodeler you are considering. Comments and recommendations from previous customers will give you an insight into tyhe remodeler's capabilities. Moist competent remodelers obtain the majority of their business from referrals.

Ask to see the remodeling jobs done for others. Find out how long the work took, how much the remodeler charged, and whether he was amenable to change. Reputable remodelers have a permanent business location, a good reputation with banks and suppliers, adequate trucks and equipment, an efficient front office, and signs of activity.

Avoid any firm that: offers goods and services at ridiculously low prices; tells you that you are entitled to a discount because our home has been selected as a "model home" for a neighborhood demonstration project, engages in hard sell by phone; or uses uninvited door-to-door salesmen.

If you do not know of anyone who has worked with a remodeler, ask the local chamber of comkmerce or local lending institutions for suggestions. Then check their recommendations with the local Better Business bureau and consumer affairs offices. Never make a random selection.

You may be tempted to bypass a general contractor remodeler and hair the subcontractors yourself. but hiring an NAHB remodeler member gives you certain advantages that may well offset the extra cost:

- One person is responsible for all phases of the job from start to finish—the supplies, the labor, and material, along with scheduling, and coordinating the work of various trades. Usually the general contractor will hire subcontractors to do part of the job.
- An NAHB remodeler member assures that the work will be done according to specifications. He has experience in obtaining qualified workers and subcontractors.
- He can often get better prices from subcontractors and suppliers than you can.
- He is familiar with local and state regulations concerning home improvements, obtains all permits, is responsible for arranging the inspections required by law and pays all the bills.

Once you have selected a contractor, be sure to obtain a well-written contract that covers the quality and quantity of materials to be used as well as styles and brand names. Descriptions of job divisions and clear payment schedules should also be included. Read every word before signing the contract so that you will have no surprises later. Some remodelers insert a "negative clause" in a contract, stating clearly what will not be done on the job, such as painting new new rooms or installing light fixtures.

Avoid changes in the original contract after the job is underway, if at all possible. Last minute changes are the most frequent cause of misunderstandings and other difficulties in home remodeling.

Painting tips

"It's amazing what a little paint can do!"

It's true...nothing can effect a change so quickly and inexpensively as a fresh coat of paint. So if you like to redecorate but are limited as to funds, pick up your paint brush and give your home a new look.

The trick to redecorating with paint, say experts, is the creative use of colors. Don't paint that tired-looking breakfast nook in the same neutral shade it is now - a bright, sunny color can do wonders to liven it up.

Don't be afraid to use different colors than you've been accustomed to - if you're unsure as to which colors harmonize with others, get a color wheel from your local art supplies store for guidance.

Colors can be divided into two grops, warm tones and cool ones. Colors containing red are warm ones, while colors with blue are cool. The judicious use of colors can create the desired effect for any room.

Bedrooms benefit from a restful atmosphere, for instance, which can be obtained with cool colors such as blue or green, while kitchens, the hub of family activity, may need warm shades such as a sunny yellow.

Use colors to reflect your personality or the type of atmosphere you prefer. If you don't have any strong preference in choosing the color of a room, get a little inspiration by choosing a painting or a piece of fabric that you especially like.

C & T Paint & Wallpaper

Spring is the perfect season to visit C & T Paint and Wallpaper Inc. showrooms which are located in Dedham, Natick and Wellesley. Their collection of wallpaper patterns which are displayed throughout the store, as well as their large selection of wallpaper books give you ample opportunity to select the wallpaper of your choice to suit your style of decorating.

C & T Paint and Wallpaper was founded by Frances Gattozzi in 1934. Their first showroom was located in Hyde Park and after several years, this showroom was moved to Dedham at the Rotary. Frances' expertise in the home decorating field was acknowledged by the kaith her clientele had in her expertise and she expanded her business to Wellesley where it is now located at 28 Linden Street. Framingham Shoppers World was her next venture and after being there for several years, she re-located that shop to the junction of Routes 9 and 27 in Natick for the convenience of her many, loyal customers.

Almost all personnel employed at the three showrooms are members of her family. They have a very unusual flair for decorating and are able to communicate their expertise to thei customers and truly assist them with their decorating problems and ideas. Their endless supply of wallpaper samples gives customers wallpaper and wall coverings at a discount price without sacrificing quality of product. The newest trends and ideas are most visible at all of their showrooms and it is worth a trip to see some new ideas and trends. Do you know that there are crewel patterns available to match the floral patterned wallpapers of one majcr wallpaper company? Another trend is the method of pasting the wall instead of the paper. You can have your wallpaper any way it is easiest to hand for you.

The generous discount prices which apply to wallpaper and wall coverings also apply to their paint department and tools utilized in decorating. C & T will cheerfully custom match your wallpaper paint for you. They enjoy an excellent reputation in the wallpaper field and represent about 50 well known names in this area.

Francis Gattozzi and Laura Jones represent the Dedham location and are anxious to meet and serve clientele from the surrounding suburbs and Dedham. Robert Fox and William Antonucci represent the Wellesley studio and Joseph Gattozzi and Janet Woodward are located in Natick. They all look forward to meeting you and helping you select quality wallpaper at a low discount price to please you.

Lawn experts checklist

Seven recommendations for making spring lawne thicker, greener and healthier looking are cited by researchers in the forthcoming issue of LAWN CARE, a seasonal publication put out by O.M. Scott & Sons, the lawn and garden people.

1. Fertilize lawns as soon as possible. Lawns that were fed earlier should be fertilized a second time during the next few weeks to maintain a desirable nutrient level.

2. Spread a crabgrass preventer to eliminate the problem this year, if there was any crabgrass in the lawn last year.

3. Clear out dandelions as soon as the yellow blossoms appear by spreading a weed control, with or without fertilizer included.

4. Seed a new lawn or re-seed thin or bare areas as soon as possible, so the seed will have more time to develop before summer weeds and temperatures rise.

5. Spread an insect control if sections of the lawn turn tan and pull up easily. It will eliminate grubs that feed on the grass roots.

6. Start mowing before grass blades grow so tall they flop over. Use a spring cutting height of 1-1½ inches for bluegrass and fine-leaf fescue lawns, and an inch or less for bentgrass. Cut off no more than a third of the grass at a time.

7. Water the lawn at any concenient time of day or night, if three or four days have gone by without rain. Grass need about an inch of water a week.

The spring issue of LAWN CARE also details correct procedures for seeding, for applying 'crabgrass preventer and for using weed controls. Other sections include more spring lawn tips, planting tips for vegetable gardens, flowers, shrubs and trees, and suggestions for summer lawn care.

Lawnowners who wish a free two-year subscription to LAWNCARE may obtain it by writing to Scotts Subscriptions, Marysville, Ohio 43040.

Save Energy Around House

Cooking: Don't use a high flame when a low one will do. Don't pre-heat the oven too long. Don't use the oven to warm the room. Cover saucepans while cooking.

Washers, dishwashers: Save hot water (and the fuel that heats it) by running full loads only. The same holds true for clothes dryers.

House heating: In cool weather turn the thermostat down when you go to bed. Draw the drapes at night; that cuts loss of heat through the glass. Close fireplace flues, air vents, etc., when not in use. Keep thermostat down to approximately 68 degrees when you're away all day.

Make sure all appliances are operating efficiently. Don't overwork your furnace making it struggle to blow air through an old, clogged filter. Check to see if your gas range produces a pure blue flame. (A yellow flame indicates improper combustion, which means waste. Have the range adjusted.)

Reduce taxes by keeping improvement records

With a little help from the Federal government and an assortment of energy conserving options available, homeowners are finding it easier and less costly to make retrofit home improvements that will effectively reduce their mothly energy costs.

"Recent research reports have shown that the nation's 70 million existing homes generally experience energy loss problems of which the average homeowner is unaware," related Michael Box, remodeling market manager for The Dow Chemical Company, developers of a retrofit siding-insulation system. "Retrofitting can correct home energy loss. With the existing technology and incentives, homeowners are experiencing the 'best of times' for upgrading home energy efficiency."

Many of the retrofit improvements that can be made to an existing home not only will conserve energy and help increase the comfort factor in a home, but they also qualify for a tax credit under the Federal Energy Act of 1978.

More than one full year has passed since the tax credit was made available. Much of the initial confusion has passed about which products qualify and which ones do not.

Those home improvements not qualifying for a tax credit include carpeting and drapes, wood paneling, heat pumps, and siding. Materials which do qualify include insulation, caulking and weatherstripping, storm windows and doors, and solar, geothermal and wind energy equipment.

"The traditicnal measures of caulking, weatherstripping, installing thermal windows and adding insulation are gaining new favor with people across the country," says Box.

Other industry principals agree with Box's observation. According to the National Home Improvement Council, the amount of money Americans will spend on home improvements is expected to double in the next five years. The Federal Energy Act tax credit is expected to be a factor in the decision on how to spend that money.

The tax credit can total up to $300 and is deducted directly from the annual income tax bill. After figuring his income tax for the past year, the homeowner simply subtracts 15 percent of the first $2,000 spent on qualifying energy-saving products from the total income tax he must pay. A special form (No. 6595) is used in addition to the regular income tax form. The form and information about which products qualify for tax credit can be obtained from the local IRS office.

"The energy tax form is probably the least complex of all tax forms," says an IRS spokesman. "It only takes a minute to compute the energy tax credit and subtract it from the total amount of taxes due. If the credit exceeds the tax bill, the unused credit amount may be applied to a future tax year."

With the various energy efficiency incentives being offered and with an increased conservation consciousness among Americans across the country, it stands to reason that owners of existing homes are looking for qualified spokesmen who can answer their energy questions.

"In many cases, homeowners will contact professionals who are involved in some way with energy matters. These are the local 'energy experts'," stated Box at Dow.

"It may be the local utility where the fuel bills are paid, or the savings and loan where financing is secured for the planned home improvement work. Often the remodeling contractor himself is put in the position of energy counselor, and for good reason.

Don Briggs & Sons

Don Briggs is announcing the opening of his new showroom located at 27 Bird St., Foxboro. His specialty is custom designed kitchens which are built so that all available space may be fully utilized. One of the outstanding features of these custom designed kitchens is the provision of vast cabinet space. Briggs also excels in bathroom remodeling and tries to create an interior design that will permit maximized space use. Another service he provides is construction of additions to the present structure which gives extra living space and will also increase the value of a home.

With 18 years experience in the home improvement field, Don Briggs has many satisfied customers in several towns including such distant towns as Waltham and Weston.

Home Security

Homeowners concerned with rising crime rates will be glad to know that many new security devices on the market are easy to install and relatively inexpensive. Among the newer "electronic watchdogs" are units that answer the phone after three rings and record messages. This kind of device will discourage burglaries on your evenings "out", and will help fool burglars looking for unattended homes during the vacation months to come.

Save energy around your home

Using a dimmer on a light will save on electricity, unless you have a very old style dimmer. It's true that dimmers once saved little or no energy because they worked on a resistance principle, but the new solid-state dimmers commonly sold to home owners are close to 100 percent efficient. Technically known as silican control rectifiers, the solid-state dimmers work by knocking down the voltage so that little, if any, electricity is drawn beyond that needed for the fixture.

By using dimmers it is estimated that a fifty percent reduction in light might save twenty-five percent in power, so dimmers are worth considering as an energy ssving device.

Dimmers work only with incandescent bulbs and will extend the life of the bulb since the bulb isn't burning at maximum capacity.

The Homeowner's Glossary Of Energy Defines the 'Buzz Words'

If you're a homeowner and think KWHR is a West Coast radio station, it's time to learn otherwise.

KWHR, or kilowatt hours, is one of many "buzz words" in the growing energy conservation field.

To help the energy-conscious homeowner know more about this field, Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corporation has put together this glossary of some of the most frequently used energy-linked terms:

COUBLE-GLAZING: A specially made window consisting of two panes of glass with an air-space between to serve as an insulating medium. Or it can be a storm sash installed over existing windows. Either way, the addition of a second (or even third) layer of glass helps plug an important area of heat loss. Also, tinted or reflective glass may aid in reducing heat gain in summer.

South Shore Plaza

The South Shore Plaza, once an open air shopping center with less than twenty stores, has dramatically evolved into one of the largest regional shopping centers on the East Coast. In eighteen years, The Plaza now consists of over ninety stores, with fifteen new stores scheduled to open during the next year. Now totally enclosed and beautifully designed, The Plaza offers the finest variety of major department stores with Filens's and their new Men's Store and Pub, Jordan Marsh, Lord & Taylor, who opened one year ago this month and the scheduled arrival of Sears Roebuck for this October.

In addition, the wide variety of retail specialty and apparel stores offer our shoppers the greatest variety for the best price.

1979 was a year of tremendous visual growth for the mall. Lord & Taylor opened in April, as did a variety of small shops along the corridor leading to it. The South Shore Plaza also completed a multi-level parking facility adjacent to Jordan Marsh with direct access to all mall stores. The garage has a parking capacity of 1525 cars and is available free of charge to all Plaza customers.

In addition, Filene's expanded their operations to include the former R. H. Stearns building, which has now become the new Filene's Mens Store and Filene's Pub. At the present time, Finene's is undergoing major renovations throughout the rest of the store as well.

With the arrival of Sears in the Fall, The Plaza looks forward to the addition of ten retail shops located next to Sears. The South Shore Plaza will also be adding five new stores to the area left vacant by the closing of Kresge's in January.

Starting this past March, South Shore Plaza also became more easily accessible by way of the brand new MBTA Red Line in Braintree.

The Shape of The Eighties, that's where we're going. And Growing.

Jumper still unknown

BOSTON (UPI) — Police and FBI agents, unable to identify the man who jumped to his death last week from the Prudential tower building in the city's Back Bay neighborhood, are asking the public for clues in the investigation.

The man, described as a white male in his 20s, tossed a brick through a 50th floor window on Sunday, May 4, and fell 48 floors to a cement overhand.

Friends of McLean host benefit Tall Ships cruise

BELMONT — A benefit Sunset Cruise to see the tall ships is being sponsored by the Friends of McLean Hospital Friday, May 30, from 5 to 8 p.m.

The public is invited.

A narrator, dance band, and hor d'oeuvres will be part of the evening's planned festivities and are included in the $35 per-person ticket price. There will be a cash bar.

Bus transportation from Belmont High School to Commonwealth Pier will also be available for $3 per person, round trip.

For tickets or more information, call Mrs. James P. Borland, 547-3015.

The Friends of McLean, founded in 1961 as the McLean Hospital Auxiliary, is a nonprofit organization which works to promote understanding of mental illness and its treatment through a variety of activities linking the hospital and the community. Over 500 area men and women are members of the Friends of McLean.

Solar Heat Can Save You Money
An ELBART SOLAR HEATING SYSTEM FOR DOMESTIC HOT WATER Can provide one half to three quarters of the energy needed to heat the water for your faucets. It will cost about $2400 (less if you install it yourself). Tax credits reduce this to under $1000. It connects to your plumbing leaving your present hot water heater intact for "standby" service. If you have a roof where you can put 75 square feet of solar collectors with a good view of the sun facing anywhere between southeast and southwest come on over to our factory store and see how you can put the sun to work. Or send the coupon for details.

"Mutual Bank's puttin' Newtonville on the map."
"Sooner the better. My end's gettin' a mite heavy."
NEWTONVILLE
Add one more location to Mutual Bank's map of convenience, because PLUS/24 'round-the-clock banking has come to Newtonville. Now with PLUS/24 you can make deposits and loan payments, get cash or transfer funds between REDi-NOW checking or statement savings accounts.
It's the seventh convenient PLUS/24 location from Mutual Bank For Savings, designed to meet your banking needs every day of the year. If you haven't tried PLUS/24 before, now's the time, and here are two good reasons why:
FREE MAPS: Just for trying PLUS/24 at our Newtonville office, you'll receive a free, detailed driver's map of the Boston area. That's something we all can use.*
ENERGY SAVING GIFTS: When you apply for a free REDi-CASH Card (the heart and soul of PLUS/24), we'll give you an energy saving gift, free. It's just our way of saying thanks.
Stop by our Newtonville office soon and ask for a demonstration of PLUS/24. It's conveniently yours, from Mutual Bank For Savings.

It's an uphill fight

Mowing the lawn this spring is literally an up hill fight for Frank Dobek of Bristol, Connecticut who finds it takes a lot of muscle along with a power mower to cut his lawn which has been growing fast with May showers.

Not really serious

While the sign looks ominous, in fact Alexander Martinez, 3, shown with his mother, Rerta, only has a cold. Both were flown from Florida to Fort Smith in Arkansas for processing as one family in the tens of thousands of Cuban refugees who sought asylum in the United States.

CAN YOUR SAVINGS PLAN STACK UP TO BAYBANKS NEW 2½ YEAR CERTIFICATE?

We call them "Two and One-Half Year Certificates" but, in fact, you can let them mature for up to eight years. And when you do that, big things can happen: you more than double your money!

Up until recently, only large investments could earn you this kind of interest, but now you can open a BayBanks Two and One-Half Year Certificate with as little as $500.

Your rate is guaranteed for whatever term you specify—two and one-half, three, four, five, six, seven, or even eight years. And, we'll compound your interest continuously. New rates are set monthly for certificates issued the following month. Just call 1-800-342-8888 (toll-free) any time for rate information. We'll tell you about a better way to save.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

REALTORS in 17 cities and towns in southwestern Norfolk County have launched an anti-vandalism campaign as this year's "Make America Better" project, enlisting the support of fifth and sixth grade students in their area.

As part of the program, the REALTORS are showing a film on vandalism at the more than 40 schools participating in the project. After viewing the film, distributed by the National Association of Realtors, the fifth and sixth graders are asked to create anti-vandalism posters, expressing their feelings on the subject.

A winning poster will be selected at each school to be displayed in a public place, and the winning students will be presented awards during the REALTORS' "Private Property Week", April 15-21.

The program is being conducted by members of Council I & M, a regional organization of the Brokers Institute, a division of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board.

Edward F. Smith of the Audrey C. Fields office and Karen Glaser of the Florence Kates office in Canton are coordinating the project as co-chairpersons of the council's Make America Better Committee.

Council I & M represents REALTORS in Bellingham, Canton, Dedham, East Milton, Foxboro, Franklin, Mansfield, Medfield, Medway, Millis, Milton, Norfolk, Norwood, Sharon, Walpole, Westwood, and Wrentham.

CAMELOT(S)
DON'T HAVE TO COST A LOT
Make your winter dreams come true this summer by building your summer home on the finest location on the "Gateway to the Cape".
There's a lot of Camelot on this 30,300 sq ft of prime waterfront land in Wareham. It's on a beautiful, breath-taking knoll overlooking the sparkling Weweanic & Marion shore.
Yet it's only a 50 minute drive from the Greater Boston area even on the busiest of traffic weekends since you don't have to go over either of the clogged Cape Cod Canal bridges.
This Camelot is the nicest area left on the Upper Cape. A one minute walk to a private sandy ocean beach on one side while there's just a saltmarsh between you and the river on the other.
You can build your own private dock riverside or just stroll across the road to an Atlantic inlet and a spectacular view of Buzzards Bay.
Land has 165 feet fronting on water with 200 feet bordering on rustic road. Asking $30,000 and at that price it's the last bargain left on the Upper Cape. Shown by appt. only by ROD MERRILL, Realtor, Wareham. 1-295-4443.

Spring clean-up time

NEWTON — Chief Edward B. Reilly Jr., of the Newton Fire Department, reminds resident of the importance of spring clean-up of property.

"As we look around, we see the results of the winter months in broken branches, leaves, and other combustible material trapped against fences, foundation walls, etc., and realize the fire potential created by these conditions," Reilly noted.

In the interest of public safety and protection, Chief Reilly suggests the following areas should be given special attention to remove hazardous conditions: garage, under porches, attics, and basements.

Chief Reilly also reminds everyone that no outside burning is allowed in Newton. All debris should be tied in bundles or placed in plastic bags or containers and put out for pick-up on rubbish collection day.

Tennant fools handicappers

NEWTON—Looks can be deceiving so when aldermen Robert Tennant went swimming last Saturday, some other aldermen took a bath.

Tennant volunteered for the Heart Fund Swim-a-thon at Boston College and his fellow board members pledged donations for every length of the pool he completed.

Some insiders spotted Tennant as sleeper and pledged conservative donations of 10 cents or 25 cents per pool length. Others didn't think Tennant had great stamina. They pledged $1 or $2 per pool length. Tennant did not identify who pledged what.

Tennant swam 56 laps or 100 lengths of the B.C. pool.

Tennant said he didn't get to see who pledged what until after his swim.

What some aldermen may have neglected to find out was that Tennant has been swimming almost daily for the past two and a half years.

Drinan coalition endorses Frank

NEWTON — Cong. Robert F. Drinan's political machine picked State Rep. Barney Frank as heir apparent during a closed door screening of five candidates Sunday night.

Thirty-five Democrats at the home of Drinan District staff coordinator Dorothy Reichard reportedly chose Frank overwhelmingly on the first ballot.

Other candidates interviewed at the meeting, and rejected, were Waltham Mayor Arthur Clark, Brookline State Rep. John Businger, Governor's Councillor Herbert Connolly of Newton, and Newton State Rep. David Mofenson.

Drinan, a Catholic priest, will not run for re-election in the Fourth District after five terms because of a Papal order.

But his organization is in place, "a cannon ready to go off," as one worker described it, and the choice of Frank by the congressman's district advisory committee and community coordinators will kick off the fundraising.

Newton coordinator Harry Crosby said the organization is ready to "rally behind someone with a Drinan philosophy" and Frank was picked because "he's got all the tickets."

Crosby said the choice of Frank doesn't constitute an endorsement from Drinan, and that the Congressman wasn't at the meeting. He added Drinan made no effort to block the meeting of his staffers.

On hand was Susan Drinan, the Congressman's niece, as well as Democratic Committeeman Jerome Grossman of Wellesley and coordinators Robert Logan of Waltham and Jane Webb of Weston.

Grossman, who reportedly has raised at least $250,000 in past campaigns, was joined by Newton campaigners Paula Levitman, a political strategist, Alderman Ethel Sheehan, district Committee member Lois Oxman, Audrey Cooper, who in the last campaign prepared an advertisement with 1,000 endorsements, and Crosby.

Mrs. Reichard and other members of Drinan's staff did not vote.

Robert Corleo, a former Drinan aide was there, with his wife Ann Marie, who is now on the staff and former administrative aide Bruce Holbein.

It's not certain, Crosby said, that the 35 insiders at the meeting can motivate the estimated 3,000 workers throughout the district to support Frank.

Diana F. Ossinger...evidence centers on cashing payroll checks

Paycheck testimony disputed

WEST NEWTON — The trial of Diana F. Ossigner, charged with stealing more than $24,000 from Mayor Theodore Mann's paychecks, was expected to enter its third day Friday.

Mayor Mann testified Wednesday. A motion by defense attorney Terry Segal to have him detail his finances for the court was withdrawn after lunch.

Ossigner, 39, of West Newton faces 44 counts of larceny. She is accused of cashing and keeping the funds from 58 of the mayor's paychecks which he allegedly told her to deposit in the city credit union account.

Evidence apparently refuting testimony of a key prosecution witness was submitted Wednesday.

In his opening remarks, Assistant District Attorney John Lawlor said the prosecution would provide "three eyewitnesses" who would testify that they saw Ossinger cash Mann's paychecks "on a number of occasions" at tellers' windows in the city treasurer's office on the first floor of City Hall.

The first of those eyewitnesses, teller Floriana Pignatelli, said that she could distinctly remember Ossinger cashing paychecks for herself and Mann on Dec. 27, the most recent date on which the offense is alleged to have occurred.

But during cross-examination defense attorney Thomas Segal produced bank records showing that Ossinger's Dec. 27 paycheck had been deposited by mail on Jan. 3 in a local branch of the Shawmut Bank.

Asked by Segal if she wished to change her testimony after seeing that evidence, Pignatelli said she did not.

That exchange came near the end of five hours of testimony in the opening day of the trial in a coutroom crowded with about 45 persons, many of them friends and supporters of Ossinger.

Continental gets cable TV license

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore Mann Monday awarded Newton's cable TV license to Continental Cablevision.

Continental, along with Warner Amex and Teleprompter, were the three finalists chosen for the license by the mayor's advisory committee on cable TV.

"The selection of Continental Cablevision was based upon the belief that its proposal offers a superior mix of benefits to Newton subscribers," Mann's decision said.

The final decision was based on cost to subscribers, programming offered, local origination of programming, system design, financial capability, technical capability, "other 'appropriate' benefits" and character.

The license report was careful to repeat that "in-kind benefits" offered by some of the cable companies, had been excluded from the decision-making process.

Financial and other "inducements" offered by some cable firms caused one to ask the state cable commission to investigate the propriety of such offers.

Continental, in addition to its television subscriber services, offered Newton $1 million for a media center to be paid for by subscribers over the 15-year life of the contract. It also offered a separate institutional system for use by the city, schools, hospitals and other agencies.

It is evident from Mann's license report that Continental narrowly edged Warner Amex for the Newton license.

"The final selection of the CATV licensee was, therefore, left to a decision as to which of the two superior applicants should be chosen," the report said. "The evaluation of the features indicated that the two applicants each possessed different relative strengths. The decision-making process focused on which of these were most important to Newton subscribers."

"Although Warner Amex offered an extremely competitive service," the report went on to say, "they were relatively weak in the areas of installation policies, provisions for low-income and elderly, and premium service rates."

Newton-Wellesley nurses vote to strike

NEWTON LOWER FALLS — Newton-Wellesley Hospital has been officially notified that its nurses voted by a 2-1 margin last week to go out on strike at 6 a.m. Wednesday, May 28.

Registered nurses at the hospital are seeking representation by the Masssachusetts Nurses Association (MNA) to bargain collectively.

"The public can be assured that Newton-Wellesley, working with its sister hospitals, will continue to meet the health care needs of the community," William C. Christenson, executive director of Newton-Wellesley Hospital, said after notification of the impending strike.

Newton-Wellesley registered nurses voted in March on whether or not they wished to be represented by the MNA.

The ballots were impounded after the election because the hospital appealed a ruling by the regional National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) that said the registered nurses alone would constitute a bargaining unit.

The hospital feels the bargaining unit should include all professionals at the hospital—pharmacists, dieticians, social workers, therapists and medical technologists as well as the nurses.

The MNA threatened a strike if the appeal was not withdrawn.

"The hospital is taking all necessary steps to ensure that it continues to be adequately staffed," Christenson said' "and that all employees, including staff nurses who want to work, can do so and that patients and their visitors will have normal access to the hospital."

According to Newton Fire Chief Edward Reilly Jr., if the hospital has difficulty, Waltham Hospital and St Elizabeth's in Brighton, will be Newton's alternatives.

Apartment amendment rejected by alderman

NEWTON — A zoning amendment requiring a special permit to construct multi-family housing in business districts was rejected by the Board of Aldermen Monday.

The amendment proposed by Ald. Ethel Sheehan, recommended by the Land Use Committee, was reconsidered, then defeated on an 11-12 vote.

Opponents argued the measure would make it difficult to construct low income housing in the city.

Mrs. Sheehan said her intent was only to give the board control for the first time over the density and design of multi-family housing in Business A and B Districts.

The board had approved the amendment earlier this month without debate. Ald. Richard McGrath moved reconsideration after he realized the proposal was on the docket.

The plan had been discussed during a public hearing and within committee, and Mrs. Sheehan said it should not be reconsidered because McGrath had missed the item.

Board President Matthew Jefferson said the amendment would be a "backward step." Housing in business districts is a less intensive use, he said, and there are only a few places in the city where that kind of development is possible.

The Sheehan amendment, Jefferson said, is a reaction to "something that slipped through the cracks," an apparent reference to a recent plan to construct attached housing on land zoned for business at the Oak Hill shopping area.

The Oak Hill plan might have been an "impetus" but the reason for the amendment, Mrs. Sheehan said, adding the housing proposal did take the neighborhood by surprise.

There is a risk, she said, of similar housing construction in the Newton Centre business area. It's better to have the legislation on the books, Mrs. Sheehan said, than to wait for a problem.

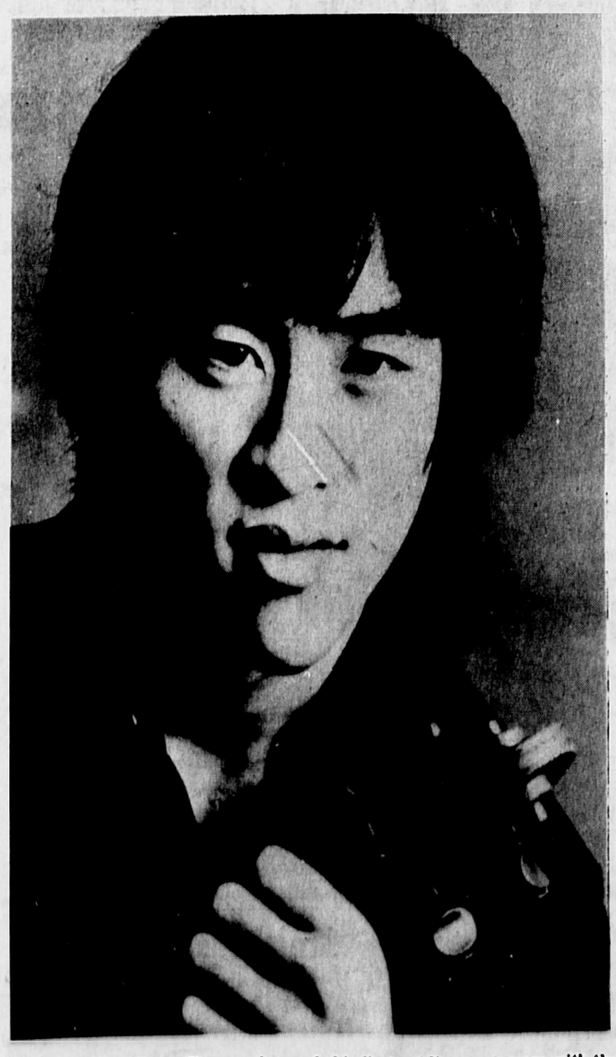

McGraff said if the board approved the special permit requirement, the legislation could be used to block low income housing.

"That's nonsense," Ald. Ernest Dietz respondent. The amendment, he said, would only give the board control over high rise apartment buildings.

Voting with Mrs. Sheehan were Alds. Lisle Baker, Rodney Barker, Wendell Bauckman, Paul Coletti, Joseph DePasquale, Dietz, Elaine Gentile, James Miller, Susan Schur and Carol Ann Shea.

Voting against the amendment were Alds. Donald Budge, Bruce Carmichael, Cynthia Creem, Paul Daley, Robert Gaynor, Robert Katz, McGraff, Edward Richmond, Dominic Taglienti, Robert Tennant, Mark White and Jefferson.

Ald. Terry Morris was absent.

Newton violinist Lynn Chang, who made his first public appearance with the Boston Pops when he was 10, will perform Thursday, May 22, at 8 p.m. at Grace Church in Newton Corner in honor of the congregation's 125th anniversary celebration. Chang won the Paganini Competition in 1974 and the Concert Artists Guild Award in 1976. He is currently a professor of music at Cornell University. His program will consist of works of by the music of Brahms, Dvorak, Telemann and Franck. The concert is free.

Largest ever Memorial Day parade Sunday

NEWTON — Newton will observe Memorial Day Sunday with the largest parade ever held in the community, according to officials of the Newton Community Memorial Day Parade Committee.

This annual observance is jointly sponsored by the City of Newton and the Nonantum Christmas Party Association.

Parade Adjutant General Frederick Casavant said the line of march will be made up of a lead column followed by five divisions. Units will form at 12:15 p.m., Sunday, in the King's Department Store parking lot and the parade will start at 1 p.m.

The parade route will be up Watertown Street to Walnut Street to the Newton Cemetery where the annual Memorial Day address will be given by Mayor Theodore D. Mann. Along the parade route memorial observances will be held at Coletti-Magni Memorial Park and the War Memorial located in front of Newton City Hall.

Along with the nationally recognized Aleppo Temple Shrine units, the 1980 Newton parade will feature the Pulaski Brass Band of Webster as the lead musical unit, the Syria Temple No. 31 Marching Band of Boston, the Holy Name Band from West Roxbury, the Newton North High Marching Band, the Newton South High Marching Band and the new All Newton Junior High Marching Unit.

Other parade units, along with many veteran, fraternal, youth and civic organizations, include the police "Blue Knights" motorcycle patrol, the MDC Mounted Patrol, the United States Marine Color Guard and Firing Squad, American Legion Post 18 Color Guard of Dedham, Natick Post 107 American Legion Color Guard, the Needham Police Color Guard, as well as many drill teams including the Blessed Sacrament Drill Team, Cambridge; and Brigadettes Drill Team, Walpole.

The parade will be led by the Newton Police Department Color Guard and members of city and state government.

Along with the adjutant general other parade officials include Francis Howley, Carleton P. Merrill, Anthony Pellegrini, Henry J. Wilson and Robert Vassalotti as parade adjutants; Robert Burke and Lawrence H. Marino, treasurer and assistant treasurer; and John Webber, secretary.

Mayor Mann will serve as chief of staff with former mayor Howard Whitmore and former mayor Monte G. Basbas, present presiding justice of the District Court of Newton, acting as chief marshal.

Serving as the honorary chief of staff will be Samuel M. Rachlin.

Hail 'honorary chief

WEST NEWTON — "It's not the years that count, it's the fact that I am able to stay active," says Samuel M. Rachlin, a veteran of World War I.

Several years ago Rachlin was named honorary marshal for the annual Memorial Day parade in Newton with many believing that he probably had reached the point where he might slow down and really start to enjoy his retirement.

"Slow down, baloney," Rachlin says. For the past several years he has served Nonantum Post 440 as post historian, and as a result of his efforts, Post 440 has been the recipient of several American Legion awards from the state.

During World War I, Rachlin served as a second lieutenant and was an infantry instructor under General Pershing. Following his discharge from the Army, he became a reporter and sports editor for the Early Evening Herald, Wilmington, Del., before moving to New England where he owned his own advertising business until he put the cover on his typewriter and headed into what many believed would be years relaxing retirement.

Retirement only meant not working regular hours to Sam, who not only stays busy with his post duties.but gives as much time as possible to programs which have brought happy hours and smiles to many disabled veterans hospitalized at the Veterans Administration Hospital.

As a result of his activities, officers of this year's parade named the 88-year-old Rachlin to the position of honorary chief of staff, a "promotion."

Physical ed program cited by commonwealth

WEST NEWTON — West Suburban Elder Services, Inc. (WSES), a private, non-profit elderly social service agency, has announced the opening of a nutrition site serving kosher meals on May 28. This nutrition site, the fifteenth to be opened by WSES, is funded by Title III-C of the Comprehensive Older Americans Act Amendments of 1978.

Located at Congregation Beth El-Atereth Israel, 561 Ward St., Newton Centre, this nutrition site will provide 20 hot kosher meals daily, prepared by Golda Meir House, 160 Stanton Ave., as well as support services to participants. Meals will be served in a group setting.

There are no income guidelines for people wishing to have lunch, and although there is no charge for meals, a $1 donation per meal will be requested. This donation helps WSES defray the cost of the meals, is intended to be unidentified, and people can adjust this amount upward or downward within their means.

Because there is a limit of 20 meals daily, anyone wishing to have lunch at Congregation Beth El-Atereth Israel must make a reservation at least 24 hours in advance. To make reservations for the May 28 opening, Thomas Cameron, site manager, will be at Congregation Beth El-Atereth Israel, 244-7233, on May 22 from noon to 2 p.m., to accept reservations.

If you would like additional information about the Nutrition Program at West Suburban, please call Barbara Gross, nutrition program manager, 332-2133.

Drive to get nuclear question on ballot

NEWTON — As a result of the Three Mile Island accident and increasing evidence that nuclear power is both dangerous and uneconomical, CPPAX (Citizens for Participation in Political Action) is starting a statewide campaign to take this issue directly to the ballot box this year through the use of "public policy questions" in the Nov. 4 Massachusetts election.

The project will be based on a question regarding an end to construction of new nuclear power plants with support shifted to safe and renewable power sources.

This effort was inspired in part by two successful anti-nuclear ballot initiatives in Cambridge. The clear vote against nuclear power (80 percent in 1979) led to the formation of a Cambridge Energy Commission and an anti-nuclear resolution passed by the City Council.

Members of CPPAX will be collecting signatures starting this weekend. Anyone interested in helping in this effort in Newton can call 527-2680.

The company of "Personals," the award-winning new musical being presented at the Spingold Theater, Brandeis University, Waltham, Friday, May 23, at 9 p.m. and Saturday, May 24 at 2:45 p.m. and 8 p.m.

Kosher lunch program opens in Newton May 28

NEWTON — A motor development program for children with special needs, developed by the Newton Public Schools, has been named by a statewide panel one of three "Promising Practice" programs and selected as a model for other systems.

Barbara Morton, adaptive physical education specialist and supervisor of the program, recently made a presentation on the program at the statewide conference on Special Education.

Now in its third year, this innovative program makes it possible for approximately 400 children (K-8) who need adaptive physical education services to receive them while remaining in their regular physical education programs.

The specialist trains regular physical education staff in methods of identifying and working with children who have gross and perceptual motor problems. By careful scheduling of regular physical education staff and by using specially trained aides, the Motor Development Program is able to provide half-hour supplemental sessions for students who require more extensive help than can be given within regular class periods.

School and community response to the program has been enthusiastic. Surveys of the parents and of the regular and physical education staff indicate that they are convinced that the program is effective as a learning and growth experience for the children involved.

Bickford wins race

Bruce Bickford of Newtonville, a member of the Greater Boston Track Club, won the Corinthian Road Race Sunday, May 11 at Hale Reservation in Westwood.

The race was put on for the second year by St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Dedham. The five-mile course was hilly and ran for two miles over rocky, sometimes soggy, trails through the woods. The final mile over paved surface.

Proceeds from the race will go to the Faulkner hospice program which was established to provide volunteer help for terminally patients and their families.

Cohen MBTA bill advances

BOSTON — Legislation designed to reduce excessive MBTA cost and inefficient MBTA operations has been reported favorably by the Legislature's Committee on Public Service.

The bill, drafted by Rep. David B. Cohen (D-Newton), attacks four areas of MBTA waste, Cohen said.

It allows the "T" to set standards of labor productivity.

It allows the "T" to set qualifications and standards for hiring and promoting employees.

It allows the "T" to determine levels of staffing and service.

It provides a mechanism to end the log-jam which has, thur far, prevented the MBTA Retirement Board from acting upon the recommendations of its financial consultant to remove the First National Bank as the sole fund manager and replace it with a multi-manager system.

Rep. Cohen said, "The MBTA has the highest cost per passenger of any major public transit system in the nation. This is directly related to the excessive labor costs which have been built into the system over the years by an overly generous MBTA management and by a Legislature that found it easier to give into union demands than to pay the political price associated with proper management.

"Until government is willing to pay the price, we are going to continue to be plagued with poor service, high costs and the threat of greater service cutbacks."

"The legislation enables the MBTA management to eliminate some of the regressive practices which have been costing taxpayers literally millions of dollars annually," Cohen said.

The poor performance of the pension fund, with an annualized rate of return of less than 2 percent for the years 1972-1978, has also cost taxpayers millions. By providing a method of selecting an honorary member to break tie votes on the six man retirement board, the bill will enable the board to break the 3-3 deadlock which has prevented it from diversifying its investments and from insulating the fund against the precipitous price declines which have marked the equity market over the last ten years," Cohen said.

Backman wants DMH overhaul

BOSTON — Senator Jack H. Backman has called for creation of a special investigating panel to conduct a comprehensive review of all programs run by the state's Department of Mental Health (DMH).

In the plan which will be offered as an amendment to the state budget, Backman proposed an independent 13-member commission to examine all aspects of patient care for the mentally ill and retarded.

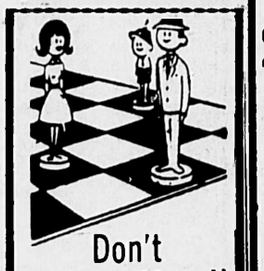

According to Backman, "Every neutral observer who has looked at the Department of Mental Health has concluded that the system is out of control. Dozens of patients have died unexpectedly, new community programs are half empty at the same time thousands of patients remain warehoused in century-old institutions, and no effective monitoring scheme exists to make sure programs work. Policy makers need to assess where we're going before we commit more resources to DMH."

At present, the Commonwealth spends $400 million dollars each year through the Department of Mental Health. Testimony before the Legislature's Human Services Committee and the Senate's Committee on Seclusion, Restraint and Deaths in State Supported Facilities, both of which are chaired by Backman, has revealed widespread problems in program implementation and monitoring.

"Right now, DMH is a nightmare for patients and taxpayers," explained Backman. "While it is important to fund existing facilities at levels sufficient to provide adequate patient care, it makes no sense to press blindly ahead with new programs until we have a clearer sense of direction.

"My own committees have neither the staff nor resources to conduct the in-depth review that is necessary. The Department of Mental Health's own Blue Ribbon Commission on the Future of Inpatient Mental Health Services has prejudged the issue in favor of turning care over to private vendors. What we need is an independent citizens panel that has the backing to make a thorough investigation."

Registry reminders

On the theory that a number of motor vehicle operators aren't aware of the more severe penalties for driving while drunk, the Registry of Motor Vehicles recently issued pertinent reminders.

They are deserving of special attention in the interest of public safety. While alcoholic drivers on occasion wipe themselves out, too frequently the fatal injuries are to somebody else. This goes for drug users as well.

Here is what the Registry offered by way of warning.

—The first conviction for driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs carries a one-year mandatory revocation of the driver's license. It also results in adding a one-year $200 surcharge to the driver's future insurance premiums.

—A second conviction within three years results in a $425 surcharge and a third conviction carries one of $675.

—Operators younger than 18 may not drive between 1 a.m. and 5 a.m. unless accompanied by a parent or guardian.

District courts have been doing a good job in handling the drunk driving cases, with a compulsory education course and assessment of court costs. That's an after-the-act remedial action. Registry information is a before-the-act bit of advice that is important.

A brief ride?

The 4th Congressional District seat vacated by five-termer Rev. Robert F. Drinan could be a here today, gone tomorrow prize. That's why a number of hopefuls have had second thoughts after filing.

State Sen. Edward Burke of Framingham raised about 4,500 endorsees in his home area. In less than two weeks, he had decided he would stick by his reasonably safe bid for Senate re-election rather than chance submersion in a large Congressional field.

Burke's decision was influenced by the fact that Massachusetts will almost surely lose one of its Congressional districts after the decennial census. Most of the political sharps are looking for the 4th District to be chopped up and absorbed in a realignment.

The Drinan successor this fall would have an entirely new ball game. House Speaker Tip O'Neill could be reaching out from Cambridge to take some. Other pieces could go into the district now ruled by Cong. Margaret Heckler. Here's a thought for the revisionists: The western suburbs are entitled to a cohesive, well-integrated district. That is the way the 1982 realignment should go, if it is indeed required.

MX missle program approved

By ROBERT DRINAN

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Despite the fact that the military experts are in sharp disagreement over whether or not the proposed MX Missile represents the best system for our national defense, the House has voted to go ahead with this massive $56 billion project.

This proposal, the largest public works program in all of history, has run into serious problems even in conservative southeast. There the population has raised objections to the ecological and social effects of digging thousands of miles of underground tracks to hide the missiles. In response to this opposition, the Pentagon came up with a new plan two weeks ago. It now proposes to shuttle the missiles in trucks along roadways to 4,000 launching points.

Incredibly, the House has voted to move ahead with this hastily-devised plan. I voted for an amendment which would have halted development until more study had been completed. I will continue to oppose development of this ill— conceived system.

Beyond the tremendous inflationary effects of such a project, beyond the waste or our resources it represents, beyond the frightening damage to our environment, the simple fact is that this further escalation of the arms race will only force the Soviets to develop enough weapons to counteract it, thus making the MX obsolete in a few years.

This past week we had more than 150 members of the House voting to halt the MX. I hope that in future votes this number will grow, and that we can build a coalition strong enough to stop this multi-billion dollar threat to world peace and security.

Oil Import Fee

President Carter's plan to levy a fee on imported crude oil and thus add 10 cents a gallon to gasoline prices is at least temporarily dead. His effort to bypass the Congress's taz-levying authority has been stopped in U.S. District Court, while the House and Senate tax-writing committees are both moving to scrap his plan.

Opposition to the import fee continues to build. The facts clearly show that any small savings in gasoline conservation will be offset by enormous costs to consumers. Also, imposition of the fee would have inflationary effects that would absorb any anti-inflation benefits from Carter's balanced budget. Furthermore, there is a real possibility that this fee would end up being passed on to already overburdened heating oil users in New England.

I will continue to strongly oppose this fee.

Fair Housing

A bill which I coauthored to amend Title 8 of the Civil Rights Act is scheduled for a vote in the full House this week. This bill, acclaimed by many as the major civil rights legislation of the past 10 years, would create an enforcement mechanism to facilitate prosecution in instances of housing discrimination. Also, this bill would for the first time extend civil rights protection to the disabled in the area of housing.

While there will no doubt be attempts to weaken this measure on the floor of the House, I am hopeful that we can muster the support we need to pass this measure intact.

Once this bill is passed and signed into law by the president, the promise of equal housing opportunities for all Americans will have become a reality at long last.

Freedom of Information

Very shortly my Subcommittee on Government Information and Individual Rights will hold hearings on a bill which would largely exempt the FBI and CIA from compliance with the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). This act, which I helped to write, is based on the notion that a Democracy cannot operate as a secret police state. It has done much to help uncover abuses of power in government.

While the CIA and FBI continue to blame the FOIA and alleged Congressional Committee leaks for their lack of prestige and effectiveness, they have been unable to cite even one instance in which compliance with the act, has endangered their legitimate operations or the nation's security. In fact, the act in no way requires these agencies to give up information endangering national security.

At our forthcoming subcommittee hearings we will hear testimony from journalists, historians, and private citizens regarding the usefulness of the FOIA, as well as hearing from the FBI and CIA.

I intend to continue to fight for a strong FOIA, and to oppose efforts to return to the secrecy and intelligence abuses of the past.

Congressman Drinan represents the Fourth Congressional District, which includes Newton.

On Carter missing Tito's funeral

Commentary
By Don Graff

Margaret Thatcher was there.

So were Hua Guofeng, Indira Gandhi, Masayoshi Ohira, King Baudouin of the Belgians, three other crowned heads and several turbanned ones.

Also presidents as disparate as Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, Urhu Kekkonen of Finland and Kim Il Sung of North Korea.

Prime Minister Robert Mugabe of the world's newest independent state, Zimbabwe, was there.

And, of course, Leonid Brezhnev.

But not Jimmy Carter.

To read some interpretations of the symbolism of the event and the significance of that absence, the seeds of World War III may well have been sown right there in Belgrade at the funeral of Josip Broz Tito.

The last rites for the Yugoslav president having occasioned the greatest assemblage of world leaders in recent years, the president of the United States is being roundly criticized at home and abroad for not being among them.

The Yugoslavs are said to feel slighted that as surrogates they had to make do with a mere vice president and the first mother.

The allies are rumored to be distressed that Carter failed to seize a potentially tension-easing opportunity for a personal encounter with Brezhnev.

And the Soviets are reported to be delighted at having one-upped the United States, propping up the ailing Brezhnev long enough to get him to Belgrade and back and thereby demonstrating to the grieving Yugoslavs the greater political intensity of their commiseration.

Well maybe to all of this, but more likely maybe not.

There is a powerful likelihood that rather than cooling things, a Carter-Brezhnev one-on-one at this point would have hardened confrontational positions. Which consideration may be precisely what motivated the Carter non-presence.

Summits, informal or full-dress, are generally most useful when parties are close to agreement and only a slight but prestigious extra push or a ceremonial blessing is required. The superpowers are far from this stage on the Afghan and Olympics issues and the wary circling of Iran; maneuvering for the time being is probably better left to intermediaries.

As for any Soviet propaganda coup, it's going to be an exceedingly short-term gain unless Moscow in the long run respects Yugoslavia's independence as it was forced to do before the great man's passing. And that happens to be precisely U.S. policy in the matter.

The Yugoslavs understandably would have been gratified by the American presidential presence. But any disappointment is likely to be of slight consequence and brief duration. They well know, as one explanatory voice in Washington noted, "who their friends are and who is a threat to them and who isn't."

While the tempest occasioned by the Tito funeral may be an exceedingly minor and passing one, it also may have worked momentarily to the presidential advantage. It has at least drawn some attention away from matters that are not minor or passing — the Iranian stalemate, continuing post mortems on the abortive rescue mission and a campaign in which he is steadily losing stock with the public in the very process of wrapping up the nomination.

That's where Jimmy Carter really is. On the whole, he'd probably prefer Belgrade.

Muskie's rocky start

Commentary by Joseph Kraft

Almost everybody in Washington likes Ed Muskie. So there has been a sympathetic audience for his debut as secretary of state. Too sympathetic in fact.

For Secretary Muskie is off to a rocky start. He has turned his back on his best shot. He has run after events in ways that are likely to flash bad signals to the Russians, the allies and this country.

Washington represents Muskie's richest opportunity. There has been no serious, comprehensive review of foreign policy since the Nixon-Kissinger critique of early 1969. Not surprisingly public opinion is in fragments. The various components of the executive branch and the Congress are at sixes and sevens on every major policy issue. The country does not know its own mind on Russia, on Iran, on the Persian Gulf, on Israeli-Arab affairs and, perforce, on relations with the allies.

The ideal time for a sorting out of views, to be sure, is not now. Bureaucrats tend to play cagey games at election time. But nothing very good is going to happen anywhere in the world until the U.S. organizes its views.

Muskie is the right man for that job. He has the political clout and the questioning skills to force out relevant comment — not only in the State Department but from all other departments and agencies. He has the orderly mind and analytic penetration required for the formulation of sweeping ideas. So during the coming months he has a chance to take the town, as it were, to develop the intellectual framework for a new set of basic foreign policy choices.

Unfortunately Muskie has allowed his friends in the Congress and State Department to enlist him in their causes. He has given countenance to the idea that he should be the battering ram for the Congress in its running battles with the executive branch. He has leaned on State Department officials who have as a principal motivation the settling of scores with the president's national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski. As a result, Muskie found himself hurled into a maelstrom of complex policy battles on his trip to Europe last week.

The trip, to be sure, had to be made. There was no graceful way for Muskie to avoid a meeting with the allied foreign ministers in Brussels. Nor could he have ducked an encounter with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko at the 25th anniversary of the signing of the Austrian State Treaty in Vienna. But as the new boy, he could have used both occasions to put a hold on foreign policy developments pending further immersion.

Instead, Muskie went to Europe trailing clouds of policy statements. He indicated that, while still sore at Moscow about the invasion of Afghanistan, the U.S. aimed to return to normal communications with Russia. He said that he favored an approach to Iran that combined "carrots and sticks." He let it be known he hoped the Europeans would abide by previous pledges they had made to invoke sanctions against Iran. He also expressed concern lest the Europeans go forward with a Middle East "initiative" that might sabotage negotiations the U.S. is fostering between Egypt and Israel.

Whether these goals are right or wrong, giving them advance public expression conveys an unfortunate message. The Russians are now on notice the U.S. is prepared to return to more cooperative relations. They are bound to think that with a little patience they will be off the hook on Afghanistan and back to business as usual. Hence the friendly noises made by the Soviet leaders at the Warsaw Pact meeting in Poland and the bogus peace proposal from Afghanistan which Muskie has now been obliged to spurn.

The allies also see a more conciliatory stance toward the Soviet Union. West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt feels he has the green light to warm up to the East Germans and is now sure to go off to visit Mr. Brezhnev in Moscow this summer. The French can proceed to the Moscow Olympics with impunity.

The allies are also bound to see the U.S. in the role of a petitioner, seeking favors with respect to Iran and the Egyptian-Israeli peace talks. Even if they go along, it will be for now and in the expectation of some American favors in return.

As to this country, Muskie has not been able to stay above the truly debilitating battle of hawk versus dove, tough guy versus softy. Like it or not he has allowed his friends to position him on the soft side as the heir to Cyrus Vance.

Perhaps Secretary Muskie can recoup the ground that has been lost. He is a man of strong will and keen intellect. But it will take all his strength to get off the moving escalator on which he has stepped. If he wants to make his mark, he will have to let other people put out the brush fires burning because of past policies, while he concentrates on organizing here in Washington the policies of the future.

Highlands Village Day celebration May 30, 31

HIGHLANDS — Newton Highlands Village Day will be held Saturday, May 31, and will feature nearly round-the— clock activities.

A Pops Concert and the Village Ball will be held on Friday, May 30, the Festivities on Saturday will begin with a 7:30 a.m. Pancake Breakfast. The fair will include arts and crafts booths, specials in most of the local stores, a Children's Parade, entertainment and games throughout the day, a 3.2 mile mini-marathon and a turn-of-the-century fashion show.

On Village Day, Lincoln Street will be closed from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. from Walnut Street to Chester Street. Parking will be available at the Hartford Street Parking Lot and on adjacent side streets.

This year for the first time, there will be a Zoomobile from the Franklin Park Zoo, a Moonwalk, and a merry-go-cycle. Local musicians will be joined by John Bushnell, a traveling minstrel who has spent nine months traveling 22,000 miles throughout the country playing his acoustic piano. Also new this year will be a roller skating contest, an exhibit of Victorian toys, and demonstrations of pottery, caligraphy, shoe-making and quilt making.

Bobbi Croce and Lane Gunnoe of the Village Ball emphasize that this year's dance will feature music by the Swing Kings and will be held at St. Paul's Church on Walnut Street.

Saturday evening there will be a picnic on the Hyde School green and outdoor dancing will continue throughout the evening on the Lincoln Street plaza at the corner of Lincoln and Hartford Streets. Admission to Village Day is free.

Party benefits Carroll Center

NEWTON CORNER — A Carriage House Party with a turn-of-the century theme will be held at the Carroll Center for the Blind in Newton as a fundraising drive to renovate the center's facility for newly blind adults.

The party will be held Saturday, June 7, from 7:30 p.m. until midnight in the carriage house on the grounds of the center.

This carriage house once housed 12 horses for the Frank Day family of Newton, and with its rustic materials of iron, brass and stone complemented by imported brick and varnished woodwork, it exhibits a charm that today's craftsman can only admire.

Entertainment, dancing to a swing band, drinks and hors d'oeuvres will be available. A number of Boston's radio and TV personalities will be in attendance.

Tickets are $15, and can be obtained by calling the Carroll Center for the Blind at 969-6200.

DAR elects officers

HIGHLANDS — "The Eleventh Hour is at hand. America's national character, the quality of our institutions and basic values are undergoing a severe change...."

With these words the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) prefaces the resolutions passed April 19 in Washington, D.C.

Catherine Priest Atkins discussed those resolutions at the May 12 meeting of Lydia Partridge Whiting Chapter, held at the home of Mrs. Leslie W. Irwin, Newton Highlands.

Many issues, both domestic and international, are considered in the resolutions. These include the United Nations, liquidation of free enterprise, inflation, energy, internal security, legislation by the judiciary, and both genetic and social engineering.

Mrs. Atkins concentrated on two, considered of paramount importance: "International Terrorism," and "The Family — An Endangered Species."

The first urges members of the DAR, as individuals, to ask "the United States government either to close endangered American embassies or to take steps to insure the protection of United States diplomatic personnel and property and American citizens living or traveling in foreign countries and to enforce sanctions against countries condoning such blatant violation of international law."

The meeting was preceded by a buffet luncheon prepared and served by the Executive Board. Later, at the business session, the chapter elected officers for the next two years. Mrs. Lincoln Alvord, regent, will serve another term with the following officers: Vice-Regent, Mrs. William A Hurley; Chaplain, the Rev. Bonnie Allen; Corresponding and Recording Secretary, Mrs. David Hamblen, III; Treasurer, Miss Alice Joy; Assistant Treasurer, Miss Marie Desmond; Registrar, Mrs. Leslie W. Irwin; Historian, Mrs. John Gay; Librarian, Miss Marion Stratton; Curator, Mrs. Henry Kendall. Directors are Miss Stratton, Miss Desmond, and Mrs. James S. Gove.

Certified for CPR

NEWTON CORNER — Fifteen members of the Newton Y Staff and Junior Leaders Club were recently certified in Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation (CPR), during workshops held at the YMCA.

The eight-hour course was instructed by Donna Tartaglino, aquatic director. She will also be camp director for the Y's Camp Massasoit, a day camp for youngsters, ages 3-7. Ms. Tartaglino is a swimming specialist instructor, and lifesaving instructor, as well as a certified national YMCA pre-school specialist instructor and YMCA fitness specialist.

Those achieving certification were: Nuala Horkan, Patty Caron, Annette Auciello, Charis Dunn, Nancy Ghannan, Michael Bean, Jose Spann, Kelly O'Donnell, all members of the Junior Leader's Club; and Y Staff personnel C. William Kelley, Carolyn Chernoff, Mary Harrington, Lynette Leka, Sherry Cherwin, Donna Murphy, and Patty McLellan.

Confirmed

WEST NEWTON — A special confirmation service honoring 17 students was held on Tuesday, May 20, at Temple Shalom, West Newton. Confirmands were presented with diplomas by Rabbis Murray I. Rothman and Jefferey M. Silberman.

The confirmation class consists of: David Agranat, Dayana Brill, David Cohen, Donna Elgart, Hannah Feldman, Alison Golden, Jeff Idelson, Adam Kasha, Richard Levine, June Lidsky, Lauren Liss, Karen Meltzer, Louise Moller, Marci Rockoff, Peter Schnall, Erica Seifert and Bradley Stolbach.

In charge of flowers for the service was Mrs. Gerald Golden, and the Oneg Shabbat committee consisted of Mrs. Livin Brill, Mrs. Gerald Cohen, Mrs. Beldon Idelson and Mrs. Robert Liss.

Everything for Cousin Sally. From Uncle Johnny.

These days, you can spend too much energy trying to find the right Lazy Susan. Because most stores put too little energy into their gift and household departments.

So you drive all over creation, pouring money down the gas tank. Instead of into the perfect pewter pitcher.

Next time, drive straight to Johnny Appleseed's. Where we still choose every pepper mill, every table lamp, every piece of stainless, woodware, copperware, stoneware and lead crystal as though we were buying presents for our own families.

As a result, Johnny Appleseed's gifts go to as many weddings as the local preacher. And are as welcome at birthdays as the frosting on the cake.

Come in. You're going to enjoy the good taste of Appleseed's.

Money Market Certificates
Add An Exciting New Benefit For You
THE CHECK/LOAN PROGRAM
Now available anytime...anyplace...and for any reason, up to 90% of your money market certificate balance.
There's no need to worry any more about the hardship from Federal regulations requiring a substantial penalty for the early withdrawal of funds from your high rate certificate.
Here's how our guaranteed "Check/Loan" Program Works:
You can instantly obtain the money you need by writing a "check/loan" against a preauthorized line of credit that is determined by the balance in your savings certificate account. Checks drawn against a line of credit are considered loans, not withdrawals from the certificate. As such, they are not subject to withdrawal penalties and are less costly.
Regulations permit you to borrow up to 90% of your account balance. There is a minimum amount of $500. for each "check/loan". A book of 10 "checks" will be provided so you may continue to have access to your money whenever, wherever and for whatever reason you need it.
If you have a 6-month money market certificate you are eligible for our guaranteed "Check/Loan" program.
• Interest rates are guaranteed for the entire term of the certificate and do not fluctuate with market changes.
• Absolute safety...Your deposits are insured to $100,000. by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.
• It's a great way to earn high interest and still have easy access to cash when you need it.

Making sure the golden years don't turn to brass

By DAVID SMOTHERS
UPI Senior Editor

CHICAGO (UPI) — Retirement is serious business. It takes guts, brains, planning and an acknowledgement of the facts of life.

It does not necessarily mean taking things easy for the rest of your days. For many, that could be dangerous to your health.

For Americans, the retirement years generally amount to a quarter or even a third of their lives. Those years, experts warn, can be a traumatic experience.

Men or women who have worked all their lives do not always know how to stop — or what to do when they do.

It is a problem of concern to businesses which want their older employees to stay happy and productive, to scholars expert in the problems and challenges of the aging, to federal, state and local governments, and to all people who are just getting older.

Prepping for retirement has become a minor business in itself. Some firms and universities are prepared, for a fee, to come into a business and tell its employees how to retire.

One such is Unity Savings Association of Chicago, which happened into the field five years ago when it found itself confused in helping pensioners with their troubles.

Unity became one of the agencies which developed a series of seminars to spell out the ABCs of retirement. The start of the course sounds like a first grade lesson for the mature. It amounts to getting organized.

—Make a complete record of household, personal and family facts. Write down full legal names, names of parents, birthdates and birthplaces, marriages and divorces.

—Include the exact location of vital documents such as birth certificates, marriage certificates, adoption papers, divorce decrees, military discharge papers, citizenship documents and the like.

—Put them all in a safety deposit box and tell your family where it is and what is in it.

—File legal and business papers by category. That would include banking, insurance, stocks and bonds, real estate and personal property. Write down as much information as possible under each heading, even if does not seem important. Knowing a single date can save a lot of trouble.

—One category should be Social Security. It is best to write down your Social Security number and keep the card itself in your safety deposit box, along with the location of the nearest office of the Social Security Board.

There are tougher tasks and questions for a person on the road to retirement. Among them:

—Are you prepared to spend 24 hours a day with your wife or husband? If you don't like to now, what makes you think you will?

—Do you like your own company so much that you are prepared to leave the old friends at work, or — if you intend to move elsewhere — your neighbors, your children and grandchildren, your church, even the store where you pick up groceries?

—Do you really want to stop working? Can you manage to face day after day without a place to go to, a job to do, something to be accomplished? Are your pension, Social Security and property enough to let you do that?

—If not, do you have any particular skills, hobbies or talents which you could employ, or enjoy, in turning into retirement income?

Norman Sprague is director of the New Life Institute, one of the programs organized to address these problems. He wrote:

"Retirement policy is frequently unable to fully take into consideration the psychological and financial needs of those who face it. The rising cost of living, coupled with the limited resources available for pension and Social Security benefits, make it difficult for many older persons to live above subsistence level.

"Even those with adequate financial means often find retirement boring, frustrating, and without promise of improvement. A jo b, full-time, part-time, temporary, or seasonal, often solves these problems." ——

The fact it appears, is that those which some call the golden years can be as full of stress — or more so — as those which have gone before.

Prof. Robert A. Havighurst of the University of Chicago is a pioneer in ascertaining what retirement is all about.

Of visions of golden years basking on Florida sands or fishing in Wisconsin waters, he shrugged and said, "These claims, of course, are not entirely valid."

"There is the myth and the reality of aging," he said. "Making a living comes in as a main problem at all ages. Health comes in at about age 55. And loneliness comes in more heavily than you might expect and is heavily related to widowhood." ——

With advancing age, Havighurst indicated, a stubborn determination to hang on can follow.

University professors may hardly be typical of the general population. But Havighurst cited a survey he helped conduct of professors at Chicago.

"We asked at what age would you like to retire," he said. "Up to about age 50 they all said 'as soon as possible.' Then at 55 there came a cutting point where they said 'I don't want to retire at 65.'

"There's no question that somewhere in the mid 50s comes this shifting around and facing the realities."

Havighurst is one of those professors who prefer to stick in there. At almost 15 years after retirement age, he is still working at full throttle.

He advises those who feel as he does to do the same — if they can.

Stacking job deck in your favor

NEW YORK (UPI) — More people will be competing for fewer available jobs as the economy goes into recession and those who devise a strategy can stack the deck in their favor, says the head of an executive recruitment and consulting firm.

Myron Chefetz, chairman of Wells Management Corp., the U.S. subsidiary of BIS, France, the huge personnel firm, says Wells already has seen a reduction in the number of placements it makes. The slowdown in hiring began late last year and accelerated through the first quarter of 1980, he said.

"Companies that don't hesitate to hire in a boom cycle are now taking another look," Chefetz said. "Maybe last week they wanted a new employee but when we call with a candidate they say they've decided to wait a while."

Based on experience in Well's 33 offices nationwide, the slowdown has been spotty.

"New York still is pretty strong, but surprisingly we've seen the first weakening in years in the Southwest," he said.

Not only is hiring down, but companies are beginning to lay off management and administrative personnel. "They are feeling a squeeze and when this happens, he said, "they look around and ask, 'Who don't we need?'"

If you suddenly find yourself looking for a job, however, there are ways to stack the deck in your favor and the first is to use such firms as his wisely, Chefetz said.

"Our income is strictly from the employer and the candidate should behave accordingly," said Chefetz. "The industry is becoming increasingly scientific in selecting candidates for a job. It's no longer just 'Hey, you might be right for this job.'

"But remember that while the company is interested in how closely the candidate matches his particular job the consultant is interested in his 'marketability' for a number of jobs," Chefetz said.

Do research before a particular interview, Chefetz suggests. Check directories such as Standard & Poor's or Dun and Bradstreet's for products and for sales figures. The firm's annual report not only will give you valuable information about its business, it will clue you about the image it wishes to project.

Go over the interview in your mind but don't over-rehearse to the point where you sound stilted.

Answer questions fully. A simple yes or no doesn't tell the interviewer much about how you would handle a particular situation. Cite relevant past experience.

At the same time don't be afraid to ask questions. That will not only evidence a high level of interest, but demonstrate your knowledge of the company.

Don't be afraid to ask questions about the job, and not only obvious ones about salary and responsibilities. Ask if the job is a new one, if you will have a staff working for you and if so their level of experience. Ask about the reasonable prospects for advancement.

Be honest about why you are there, why you are looking for a job. Decide beforehand what factors are most important to you — salary, position, benefits — and discuss them.

You don't have to call attention to your faults but don't try to be perfect, Chefetz said. The interviewer won't believe you and you'll lose credibility.

See if you can zero in on what the interviewer is seeking and target your responses in that direction.

Respond to humor but do not initiate it. A job interview in not a social occasion, Chefetz said, no matter how friendly or informal the interviewer may seem.

Rapping America's 'fiber-depleted died'

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Dr. Denis Burkitt, the high fiber guru from England, stopped by the potato bin in an American supermarket.

His eyes sparkled and his hands gripped two huge spuds. He held them over his head, arms outstretched in a V — and started singing the praises of tubers.

For instance:

He said four taters a day — without sour cream, gravy or butter — munched with the skins will keep you "regular" and probably will help you slap down obesity.

Potatoes, the high priest of fiber insisted, though long a no-no to fat and dieting Americans are good bulk. They fill you up, you feel full and don't reach for high energy, low bulk, high calorie edibles such as candy, sugary pie, cookies, ice cream.

When you're full of potatoes, there's also less of a temptation to fill up on sugary drinks or even booze.

You feel full because you a-r-e full. And that's one point about high fiber in the diet, he says, but not the main point. The main point is to keep you regular, Burkitt said.

Burkitt, also called the bran man, is the self-appointed fiber missionary of the west. Bran keeps you regular, too, he preaches. Bran, you may recall, is the staple in a breakfast food long called "the laxative cereal."

He held up a box of that this day when we got to the cereal section. And waved it like a flag.

The spuds-pusher -- a wiry 69-year-old — was born in Northern Ireland and made his mark as a surgeon and epidemiologist. He will go down in history for putting the western world's scientific types on the road to the high fiber diet as a step to good health.

As an epidemiologist — health detective — Burkitt did several studies on disease patterns. He found, he said, certain kinds of cancer were rare in certain countries, mostly the developing ones in the third world. In those countries high bulk, high fiber is the dietary lifestyle.

Burkitt conclused that a few simple diet changes can help prevent many diseases and promote health and longevity. It's all supported, he says, by documented patterns of disease around the world.

"Fiber has a crucial effect on the working of our digestive system and bowel," Burkitt said. "And that is where most of these diseases find their origin. They all start with constipation."

The diseases he mentioned included varicose veins, colon cancer, some cardiovascular conditions.

As he toured the supermarket in New York City this day, Burkitt searched for high fiber foods that might fit his preachments.

He recited as he traversed the aisles:

"Bran comes first, nuts and legumes second, and potatoes third. They're all great fiber additions to a diet."

Burkitt's ideas come at a time modern medicine is banking more on prevention than miracle cures to battle modern killers such as coronary disease, diverticular disease, piles, appendicitis, hiatus hernia, varicose veins — and, of course, bowel cancer and obesity.

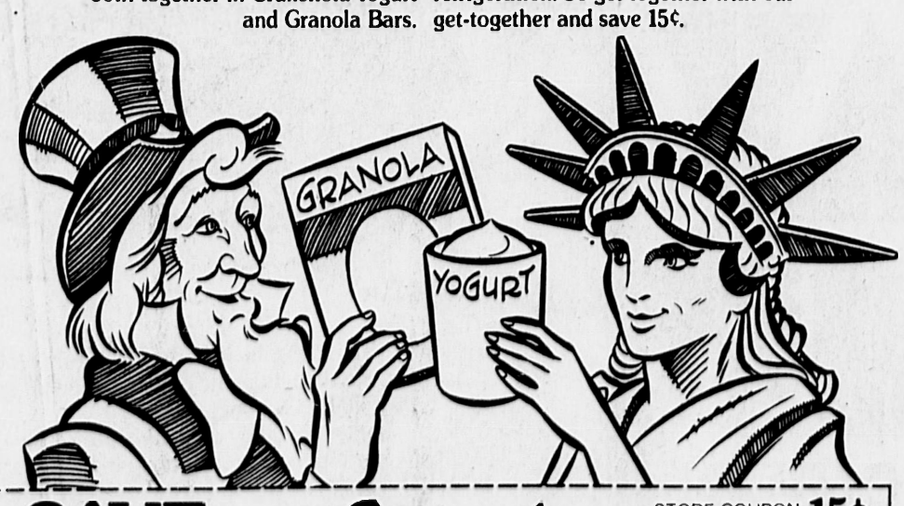

Burkitt is his own best advertisement. Active, energetic, he eats lots of whole wheat bread — homemade — and adds bran to his morning cereal. He travels the world lecturing to medical groups, spreading the word.

He carries his bran in a little plastic bag but allowed it could easily be kept in a tobacco pouch instead.

Before Burkitt gained status as a passionate preacher of high fiber he had medical fame. He had worked nearly 20 years as a surgeon in a teaching hospital in East Africa.

Main library exhibits run art to history gamut

By ELINOR PERSKY

NEWTON CORNER — From "American Color 1973-1980," a one-man show of photographs by R.P. Kingston, to "Oil Paintings" by Gideon Cohen, to a celebration of the Grace Church's 125th birthday, people visiting Newton Free Library buildings can see five different exhibits now through early June.

Kingston's color photographs will be exhibited in the Main Library gallery, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner through June 2.

A well-documented exhibit of the "200th Anniversary of the Massachusetts State Constitution," compiled by the staff of the Reference Department can be seen in the Main Library's glass cases. This exhibit is a variation of one shown earlier this year. The display, which includes documents, records, descriptions of the delegates and meetings, is being repeated by popular demand.

As a special community service honoring the Grace Church's 125th birthday, the library is exhibiting memorabilia, including registers and an old atlas from the Grace Church archives. This exhibit arranged by Kenneth Carpenter, curator of the Kress Library at the Harvard Business School, and archivist for the Grace Church.

Gideon Cohen, well-known to the Boston art world as the "Grandpa Moses" of Arlington, is exhibiting his joyful paintings at the West Newton Branch of the Newton Free Library, 25 Chestnut Street.

Like Grandma Moses, Cohen, who is now 86 years old, has never had formal art training. He did not begin to paint until he was in his seventies, when he started by doing sketches of his grandchildren.

His paintings, which are featured in "Contemporary American Folk Artists" by Elinor Lander Horowitz, (Lippincott), are done in a primitive style. Landscapes, close-ups of buildings and gardens demonstrate a wonderful sense of design, a joyous use of color, and a meticulous style. Cohen is a member of many art including the Copley Society and the Arlington and Lexington Art Associations.

At Newtonville Branch, 345 Walnut St., members of Newton's Adult Education Photography Class are showing photographs. The instructor is Ken Winokur. The show was arranged by Muriel Morris.

Main Library Hours are Monday-Thursday, 9-9; Friday, 9-6; Saturday, 9-5; and Sunday, 1-5.

The library will be closed Sunday and Monday, May 25 and 26, Memorial Day weekend.

Ladies' Dog Club show in Wellesley May 31

WELLESLEY — The Ladies' Dog Club's 63rd Annual Dog Show and Obedience Trial, a highlight in dog show events, will take place Saturday, May 31, at the Commonwealth Career Center, 900 Washington Ave., Wellesley.

Many of the top dogs in the country will compete among the 2000 expected.

Five clubs in the New England area are holding their specialty shows this year. They include the English Setter Club of New England, the Yankee Weimaraner Club, the Downeaster Belgian Sheepdog Club, the New England Old English Sheepdog Club and the New England Chow Cow Club.

Supported entries include the Irish Setter Club of New England, the Bay Colony Dachshund Club, the Colonial Rottweiler Club, the Colonial Shetland Sheepdog Club, the Hudson Highland Skye Terrier Club and the Poodle Club of Massachusetts.

Junior Showmanship Classes for children 10 to 16 years of age will take place. This attraction enables the younger person to compete in handling ability. Classes in obedience will be held for dogs competing on the Novice, Open and Utility levels. Judges will be coming from all parts of the United States, with Mrs. Marie A. Moore, The Plains, Va., being the Best in Show judge.

A popular event last year to be held again this year will be an exhibition of Dachsunds and Whippet Racing, each breed racing separately for a scented lure. This will take place in the early afternoon.

Jane L. Young, president of Ladies' Dog Club is being assisted by Mrs. Darby A. Chambers, chairman of this show, along with all the members of the club.

Proceeds from the show benefit several animal-related projects such as Tufts University Veterinary School, Dogs for the Deaf, the Breeder's Referral Service and several neutering clinics.

The grounds open at 8 a.m., the show remaining open until 7 p.m. Best in Show judging is expected to take place about 6 p.m. The show grounds, a vast expanse of lawn area and pine-shaded woodland along the Charles River, were once part of a large estate. Refreshments will be available throughout the day along with ample room for family pleasure and enjoyment.

Pro and anti busing forces will challenge decision

By DOUGLAS DOWIE

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A state court judge denied a request by the Los Angeles School Board Monday to abandon compulsory racial busing, ordering the program expanded to cover all grades in years to come — but only in the general area of the students' homes.

Superior Court Judge Paul Egly's decision climaxed years of argument over integrating the nation's second largest school district. It was expected to be challenged by appeals from both pro and anti-busing forces.

The judge gave the school board guidelines, dividing the sprawling district into 11 zones and directing that racial busing be confined within the zones — eliminating the longest rides anti-busing forces said have been driving Anglo children out of the district. Anglo enrollment is already only about a quarter of the system.

But the zone plan may also confine integration efforts to neighborhoods that are populated mostly by one racial group, such as heavily black south Los Angeles and largely Mexican-American east Los Angeles.

It would end busing across the Santa Monica mountains between the central city and the mostly Anglo San Fernando Valley, heart of the anti-busing movement.

In denying a request by the school board, and the anti-busing group Bustop, for an all-voluntary plan, the judge said it would be "neither reasonab'e nor realistic" and 'treats minority (race) children wih less concern than other children in the district..."

Board members — who have mostly won election in recent years on anti-busing platforms — have not shown a commitment to integrate the schools, the judge said, "even if given more time."

"In view of the foregoing, the court intends to find it has no option available other than to intervene actively in the supervision of the preparation and implementation of a a reasonably feasible desegregtion plan..."

The court case began in 1963 and has been in Egly's hands since 1977.

The school board, under Egly's order, began a busing program with the 1978-79 school year, applying only to some schools and only to the fourth through eighth grades.

The racial makeup of the districts has changed considerably since the suit was filed in 1963 by Mary Ellen Crawford.

Miss Crawford charged the attendance area of her high school seemed to be gerrymandered to form an almost all-black school while another school nearby seemed to have a similar attendance area shaped to make it almost all-white.

A trial court judge, the late Alfred Gitelson, agreed in 1971. The State Supreme Court upheld Gitelson in 1976 and remanded the case back to the Superior Court for remedy.

Egly has had the matter since 1977 and has permitted a school district plan to go into effect pending deliberations on whether it was adequate and would work. Egly said it was an initial effort and it has been further modified with hearings underway since last September.

The court-mandated busing began in September of 1978, but only after other legal conflicts.

A stay of the busing order was granted by the 2nd District Court of Appeals which the State Supreme Court overturned. U.S. Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist refused to hear an appeal to reinstate the stay.

Last week, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled against proponents of a metropolitan plan in Atlanta, who sought to have suburban school districts combined with the Atlanta district for purposes of integration.

Last week, the Justice Department filed motions and a proposed suit in U.S. District Court in Houston seeking to add 22 suburban school districts to a 23-year-old school desegregation case against the Houston Independent School District.

It was the first time the Justice Department had sought to force a desegregation remedy involving both suburban and inter-city school districts although citizen groups have proposed similar actions in other cities.

The military academies, who gets in and how

NEW YORK (UPI) — The military service academies — Navy, Army, Air Force, Coast Guard — are colleges charged by the nation with educating and training young men and women to become professional officers.

Graduates are commissioned at graduation and must serve five years. Many make it a career and, among those who do, postgraduate training is not unusual. About one percent of the graduates from the U.S.M.A., for example, go to medical school.

About one of eight applying to the academies is accepted and receives an education combining military and academics. The training, plus college degree, costs from $100,000 to $125,000 per student per four years. Taxpayers pay, as students are given scholarships.

United States senators and representatives nominate 75 percent of the cadets entering. The remaining 25 percent are nominated by the Departments of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Coast Guard to compete for service-connected cadetships.

A profile on a recent class at the U.S.M.A., for one example, show 72 percent rank in the first fifth of their high school graduuting class. The average scholastic aptitude test scores are 584 verbal and 628 math. Perfect SATS are 800 for verbal; the same for math.

In the class of 1981, graduating next year, academic honors in high school included: 90 valedictorians, 66 salutatorians, National Merit scholarship recognition 235, National Honor Society 866. Career officers seem to breed offspring destined for the military academies. A recent count showed about one-fourth of the service academy students are "brats" — as sons or daughters of career officers are called.

West Point, for one example, has enrolled at present a third generation cadet — father, grandfather graduated ahead of the current cadet.

Brother-brother, sister-brother, or even three members of one family enrolled at the same time in a service academy is not a rarity.

New theory on obesity

CHICAGO (UPI) — Doctors who for years preached overeating is the prime cause of obesity may have to eat their words. New research shows that, in some cases, overweight may result from the body's inability to burn excess calories.

The new theory, outlined in the current Journal of the American Medical Association, tends to explain why some people get fat while others eat at will without gaining a pound.

The normal body, it said, compensates for overeating by burning the excess calories taken in. The calorie-burning process is centered in the body's small store of brown fat — a heat-producing tissue that gets its name from its brownish hue.

But, researchers found, some people lack the physical ability to burn the excess calories. Instead, the extra calories are stored — and the people get fat.

The new theory is proposed by Dr. Michael Stock and graduate student Nancy Rothwell, at the Queen Elizabeth College in London, a group led by Dr. George A. Bray of Harbor University of the California-Los Angeles Medical Center, and others in both England and Canada.

Research on both rats and humans showed overfeeding induces calorie burning — apparently centered on brown fat. Such diet-induced burning of calories may be a primary factor in maintaining normal body weight, researchers said.

"It appears that one possible explanation for the development of obesity in man is that certain people without this capacity to turn on dietary-induced thermogenesis may be those who store food as fat, whatever their intake, rather than burning off calories in heat," said Bray.

But researchers still don't know what controls the mechanism that causes the "brown fat" to burn calories.

Six museums join forces to review the 70's

By the State Arts Council

"From director to board members to staff, we're all out there on Saturdays helping with the construction work," said Pat Bennett of the Museum of the National Center for Afro-American Artists in Roxbury.

The museum staff pitched in to help meet a double deadline. The opening of its permanent gallery space in May coincided with the opening of an unprecedented collaborative effort by six museums, an exhibition called "Aspects of the 70's."

From the castle-like 1860 mansion on a hill in Roxbury to the brand-new art centers of Brockton, Wellesley and Brandeis in Waltham, to a former high school in Framingham, to another renovated castle-like mansion in Lincoln, six medium-sized museums in the Boston area have combined forces to produce an exhibit of national importance which would have been impossible for anyone to do alone.

"All six museums collect and show contemporary art. Together we saw that we could take a leading role in the Boston area by presenting a comprehensive view of a whole period," said Marilyn Hoffman, director of the Brockton Art Museum, one of the six contributing gallery space to the exhibition.

"The show has a dual existence," said Anne Hawley, ezecutive director of the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities, which partly funds four of the six museums involved.

"Each exhibition stands on its own, yet each is also part of the larger project and increases in value when seen within the context of the whole show."

The six-part catalog for the exhibition reflects this dual existence. While each museum has its own catalog, all six are also available together for use as a combined guide.

Putting together such an ambitious exhibit was not easy. "Museums move like glaciers," said Michael Leja, curator of the Rose Art Museum at Brandeis. "It's very difficult for even two museums to collaborate on a project because of all the paperwork involved. But we're hoping that the success of our shared project will provide incentive for other museums to experiment with collaboration."

At the Brockton Art Museum, "Painterly Abstraction," May 3 through Aug. 24, examines the continuing development and strength of abstract painting in the 1970's. Such well-known national artists as Helen Frankenthaler, Jasper Johns, and Robert Motherwell are represented, as well as Massachusetts artist Gregory Amenoff who captured one of the Artists Fellowship Awards in 1979 in the annual state competition that honors outstanding artists.

The Danforth Museum in Framingham presents "Directions in Realism" May 17 through Aug. 24. This exhibit contains the work of 23 artists working in the realist tradition, including Audrey Flack, Richard Estes, and Cambridge artist Michael Mazur.

The DeCordova Museum in Lincoln houses "Photography: Recent Directions" during June and July. James Sheldon, guest curator of the show, pointed out that "art doesn't usually fit into decades. But, in photography, you really can see that the 70's marked a major turning point in the way photography was treated by institutions, galleries and the public. Photography finally achieved full status as a serious art form."

The exhibition of 200 works by 60 photographers includes Robert Heiniken, Leslie Krims, Harry Callahan and Nancy Rexroth.

The Museum of the National Center of Afro— American Artists, one of only two non-university museums of Afro— American art in the country, offers "Spiral: Afro-American Art of the Seventies" May 18 through June 15. Featuring work by 25 black artists, including Charles Searles, Ellen Banks and Betye Saar, the exhibit traces the expansion in both style and content of Afro-American art in the '70s.

Rose Art Museum, Brandeis University, plans an exhibition of work outside the mainstream of '70s art movements in "Mavericks." Boston artist Roger Kizik, who has also been recognized with an award from the state-funded Artists Fellowship Program, is one of the eight artists represented.

"Sitework," at Wellesley College Museum from April 27 to June 29, is the largest exhibition of environmental sculpture ever to take place in New England, and features the dramatic work of Stephen Antonakos, Nancy Holt, Robert Irwin and Ned Smyth.

While opening and closing dates vary at each museum, all exhibits are open between June 1 and 15. Since thousands of museum professionals will be in Boston in early June for a joint conference of the American Association of Museums and the Canadian Museum Association, many will be drawn to see this unprecedented collaboration.

The National Endowment for the Arts, agreeing that this experiment was well worth trying, gave the six museums a $107,000 grant for the show. Grants from the Mabel Louise Riley Charitable Trust and the William Underwood Company supplemented this major grant, as well as the funds supplied by the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities.

Observers expect the joint exhibit to attract over 100,000 visitors. Since all six museums are in or near parks, people can enjoy picnics before seeing the most comprehensive collection of art from the seventies ever gathered and presented in the Boston area.

New life for FTC

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House has approved and sent to the Senate legislation allowing the Federal Trade Commission to exist through fiscal 1982, but giving Congress the power to veto any FTC rule.

The Senate is expected to approve the legislation.

The bill also would halt or limit FTC proceedings against unfair television advertising aimed at children, anti-competitive practices by agricultural cooeperatives, insurance industry practices, and the use of trademarks.

Proceedings against practices in the funeral industry would be allowed to continue within limits — a decision attacked by the funeral industry and Rep. Marty Russo, D-Ill.

The vote on final passage was 272-127 Tuesday.

Passage of the bill came after many weeks of uncertainty over the agency's future, including a brief shutdown until temporary funding legislation could be passed to let it limp along while permanent legislation was being considered.

Under the veto provision, both houses of Congress could veto an FTC regulation within 90 days by joint resolution. If one house acted within 60 days, the rule still would be vetoed unless the other house failed to reject the veto.

Silent Killer

High blood peassure has no symptoms in its early stages but if afflicts one out of ten people in the United States. Most people who have high blood pressure do not realize it and if it is not recognized in its early stages, tragic complications may result. Although high blood pressure does not go away and requires life-long treatment, people with this disease can lead a normal life as long as they keep up with prescribed treatment.

High blood pressure has come to be recognized as the leading cause of heart failure, stroke and kidney failure. Other threats to high blood pressure victims are the increased possibilities of hardening of the arteries, atherosclerosis, blood clots, aneurysm, holes in brain cell,s enlarged heart fibers, scarring, liver damage, lung damage, spleen damage and blindness.

Anyone can get high blood pressure but it seems that the highest incidence has been found in the middle 30's age bracket. It has also been discovered that high blood pressure is more common among males and blacks at an earlier age. However, the disease tends to occur more frequently in females as they reach old age.

In the past, society often ignored the silent killer, giving more attention and money to fight more dramatic diseases. However, tthe increased prevalence of high blood pressure has finally attained widespread public attention in the past few years. past few years.

Several organizations and programs have been established to increase public awareness of the dangers and prevention of high bloodpressure. In addition, numerous screening centers have been set up throughout the country in supermarkets, banks, schools, churches, special vans, clinics and hospitals where people may walk in and have their blood pressure checked. Screening is also done through government programs and the Community Hypertension Evaluation Clinic, a screening center sponsored in every city by the local chapter of the American Heart Association. More and more physicians and hospitals throughout the country have incorporated the routine of recording their patients' blood pressure every time they seek medical attention.

The National High Blood Pressure Information Center was established at the National Institute of Health for the collection and dissemination of public and professional information. Available there are brochures, films, cassetts, TV documentaries and pro fessional information, all of which is produced by the government. This center also carries charts for schools and for displays and exhibits at conventions and meetings.

There are several measures people are encouraged to take in order to control and hopefully prevent high blood presssre. As a means of detecting and controlling high blood pressure, one should have his or her blood pressure checked regularly and when medical treatment is required, close adherence to the attending physician's advice is urged. Other measures people should exercise on a regular basis are: weight control, exercise and limited intake of salt, alchol, coffee, tea and cholesterol.

Since stress will increase the outpouring of certain hormones which will increase blood pressure and heart rate, individuals must learn to manage their level of stress. Two of many recommended ways are yoga and biofeedback.

Join the fight against the silent killer by exercising these preventivie measures, and by also encouraging family members and friends to closely monitor their blood pressure.

Geriatric Resource Center

The Geriatric Resource Centre, the new private service founded by Ann Peck and Joanne Cooper, is continuously adding to its extensive list of available services as they work closely with both senior citizens and their children.

Thus far their services have included setting up home care for the elderly for both the long and short term, assisting the elderly to relocate into congregate or cooperative housing, submitting insurance claims for third party payments and reimbursements so that the individual client receives the maximum benefits to which he is entitled, and assisting the elderly to find group situations, both supportive and recreational.

These geriatric social workers have found that when nursing home placement is necessary, many people are not fully informed as to the financial implications and as to what constitutes a good nursing home. Their competent staff locates several appropriate beds in select nursing homes and offers these choices to their clients.

One of the new services is finding "respitcare." This means looking for a bed in a facility for a short period of time so that family members may have some relief from constant care.

There are many isolated and lonely people in the community. The Centre has established "caring calls" whereby staff members call individuals on a daily basis to keep them in contact with a caring person.

Their Speakers Bureau has been particularly rawarding. Besides disseminating information Joanne and Ann believe that this service keeps them constantly in touch with the needs of those whom they serve. Service is available seven days a week.

For further information call the Geriatric Resource Centre, 964-8121.

The Geriatric Resource Centre, Inc. is pleased to announce the opening of Home Companions. This new subsidiary provides carefully screened companions who have had experience in geriatrics to care for clients in their homes.

Directors Joanne Cooper and Ann Peck founded The Geriatric Rescource Centre to provide information and assistance to older people and their families as they face the problems of advancing age.

It is the goal of this service to help older people remain in their homes as long as possible.

Ms. Cooper and Peck feel that providing a companion for an elderly person requires the same personalized approach as their other services which include securing alternative living accommandations and nursing home placement.

Companions are available days, nights and weekends on a full time or part time basis. For further information call 964-8121.

Aquinas College Summer Session

An enriched Summer Session will begin on Monday, June 16 at Aquinas Junior College, Newton. The Center for Continuing Education is offering both day and evening classes.

The Day courses will be held four mornings a week for a six-week period or until July 24. Upon completion of the courses students will receive three college credits. Some of the offerings include: Typewriting, Shorthand, Accounting, English Composition, and Office Procedures.

A special program to assist students entering college or reentrying college is the Sills Program. These courses will be held during both the day and evening sessions. The course, College Reading and Study Skills, should enable students to read and study academic subjects successfully. Basic Writing Skills for College Students will give the student the opportunity to learn the techniques of writing for the collegiate or professional world. These two courses will provide students to recognise their writing and reading ability and then to strengthen areas which need to be developed.

EVENING PROGRAM

To assist persons who are working to continue their studies, the Center for Continuing Education has initiated evening classes. A previously-mentioned Skills Program will be given. Other special offerings will serve adults. These coursses include: Accounting and Introduction to Data Processing and Medical Terminology.

Aquinas Junior College offers a Professional Certificate Program in Accounting. Accounting and Introduction to Data Processing are two of the five required courses towards the Certificate.

Medical Terminology is being offered as a response to persons interested in the Allied Health area. The course has been planned to assist persons to know the derivation of words used by the medical profession.

INFORMATION

To obtain information about the Summer Session, contact the Director of Continuing Education (244-0089) at Aquinas Junior College, Newton. All registrations should be received by June 11.

Think Thin

"Don't you think you ought to lose a couple of pounds?

For millions of Americans, both young and old, men and women, weight loss is a very real problem.
But, for an Allston woman, the answer to coping with unwanted pounds is a new organization.

"It works beyond my wildest dreams", insists Phyllis Lurie, "and I'm the skinniest I've ever been."

How did Ms. Lurie lose those pounds?

A new diet, perhaps...or a new strain of wonder drugs...or was it a new technique for jogging backwards?

"It was no diet," says Lurie, a typesetter for H.M.K. Advertising, in Chestnut Hill. "It had no chemicals, no restrictions...it was just something that came from within".

Well, if it's not a diet, and it's not an exercise program...then what is it?

"I've been through a a lot of diets,"she emphasizes, "and I've been overweight for a long time. It's something that all of us share".

"People tell you every day that you're fat and should lose weight....a couple of pounds. Nobody takes into consideration what you are already".

"What BEING THIN does is to help you get rid of all that worry that's around food. You begin to eat naturally when you're hungry and stop naturally when you're not."

BEING THIN, an organization successfully conceived a year ago by two Newton women, is a self-discovery group dedicated to losing unwanted pounds naturally.

"We approach weight loss from a different direction," says West, who who with Alice Marx serves as coordinator for this new idea in body control.

"Rather than dieting," she reports, "we focus on changing your body from within the way you relate to food and how it relates to your body".

"When you go on a diet, after you go off, or after you have completed it, even if you've been successful, a lot of times the weight will just come back on."

"Because BEING THIS is an inner approach to losing weight and NOT a diet program, when you lose weight, it's permanent."

How permanent?

"I've lost 20 pounds since September when I started the program," reports newcomer Lueiw. "And, I have no fear of gaining it back. The way I lost that weight was effortless...a jou rather than a struggle...and it feels almost like being reborn."

Sounds almost too good to be true...the power of the mind over Boston Cream Pie...losing weight without dieting or exercise...or anything.

"Well, it's not quite without anything," says West. "The idea that we are thin is within us, and it's a matter of letting that out". "We don't deal with diets because we listen to our bodies in more of an intuitive sense...listen to what the body is saying rather than to what the mind is says. When you're always on a diet, you're shutting off all of your natural mechanisms, and your body naturally rebels and you end up going on splurges and working against yourself".

The BEING THIN program is a series of seven seminars, meeting in various locations throughout the metropolitan Boston area. Each session incorporates self-evaluation and research data into a comprehensive weight loss schedule that enables participants to lose weight from the inside out.

"BEING THIN allows everyone to be an individual," says West, "to be themselves, with their own program tailored to their own needs".

Sound like a good idea?

Introductory free seminars are now being scheduled throughout the area. For further information and registration, please contact BEING THIN, 15 Orchard St., Newton Corner, or call 244-2268.

Eats and economics

By Gaynor Maddox

Concerns over inflation and recession are reshaping the way many of us eat. Among those making that observation is Anita Fial, a Cornell-educated nutritionist who is senior vice president of a public-relations firm.

"An amazing number of married women are in today's away-from-home working group," she notes. "They need the money for schools, doctors fees, home maintenance and other rising costs.

"When they return to their home at night, they don't feel like starting dinner. Yet, custom says they should.

"Only among the well-educated families will you find husbands who actually help with preparation of the family meal. The traditional husband's attitude is, 'That's a woman's job.'"

And what about other family members helping with meal preparation?

"Teen-age daughters often help with kitchen work," says Miss Fial. "Many make a good showing at it. But still there are many who will gobble up snacks on the way home from school and be listless when asked to help getting dinner on the table.

"Sometimes boys help. But too often they are influenced by their fathers' attitudes."

Tighter constraints on young people's finances may actually push more of them into the kitchen, suggests Miss Fial.

"The constantly rising cost of junk foods is forcing our younger Americans to think twice," she says. "So, they try at home to duplicate hamburgers, hot dogs, hero sandwiches and even pizzas."

Many of them are discovering that the snacks they prepare at home are less costly, more nutritious, even tastier.

Perhaps fast-food restaurants are becoming aware of this phenomenon. Miss Fial observes that many of them seem to be increasingly nervous about the economy. That may mean fewer summer and part-time jobs for young people, who often make up a sizable portion of their employees.

Miss Fial senses strongly that Americans — even teen-agers — are becoming more aware of the importance of nutrition in their lives.

Some are switching to vegetarian diets. Many are enjoying Chinese foods, which use vegetables to stretch a small amount of meat into a satisfying meal. Stir-frying has become a popular cooking method because it is quick and preserves much of the foods' nutrients.

Norwood Hospital Expansion Underway

The people at Norwood Hospital work each day to promote "better living" in the southwestern suburbs by maintaining high quality health care. Because of their high standards and increased population in area towns, the Hospital has found that more and more people are requesting medical attention. In order to meet increased demand, Phase I of Norwood Hospital's Modernization and Expansion project was begun the first week in February. Phase I will include approximately 13,000 square feet of new construction and 4000 square feet of renovations in space adjacent to the new construction. Included in expansion will be the Emergency Department, the creation of a new Day Operative Center for "same day" minor surgery, a relocated and expanded Radiology Department and an expanded employee cafeteria.

According to John D. Dalton, Assistant Administrator, in charge of Project Development, "Phase I will strengthen the Norwood Hospital's ability to provide quality cost-effective patient care and to enhance patient comfort and dignity."

As the first major project for Phase I, the new Emergency Room entrance on the Winter St. side of the Hospital has been completed. The project is scheduled for completion in late November or early December 1980 at which time plans will be gaining momentum for Phase II of the Modernizaton and Expansion project.

The major part of the project which will be built on the present site of the Norwood Civic Center will commence December 1981 and completion is expected by June 1984. The new facility will be 200,000 square feet in size and will contain 212 additional beds, a new opeating room, a new lab, a new X-ray department and dietary facilities. At present, Norwood Hospital has 275 beds and by 1984 it should have 325.

When this addition is completed, Norwood Hospital will be the only community hospital in New England with a complete range of facilities. Accompanying this new facility will be additional parking for patients and visitors. The net result of the Hospital's expansion project will be the provision of a "good solid health facility" to surrounding communities.

Norwood Hospital reveled in several accomplishments during 1979, one of which was the 43 bed NORCAP Lodge in Foxboro, an intermediate alcoholism treatment center opened in November 1979. In late 1979, Norwood Hospital installed the IBM 4331 computer system, a system which only a few hospitals in the country have. The Hospital was also awarded a full 2-year reaccreditation (the highest achievable rating) by the Joint Commission of Accreditation of Hospitals.

During 1979, the pulmonary function laboratory was expanded with necessary new equipment and a non-invasive vascular lab was established. As a result of a management systems study of the Operating Room, the Hospital is making improvements in such areas as scheduling, space utilization, supplies and staffing. New equipment acquired by the Hospital include: cardiac monitors, an ACA lab analyzer, a microcomputer in the Nuclear Medicine Department and computerized ultra sound equipment in the Radiology Department.

New TV sets were installed throughout the Hospital. All patient TV sets are connected to a new closed circuit TV antenna which enables the education staff to bring to the bedside information and instruction about a patient's disease and the recommended treatment. This service is available to the patient at no extra cost. The staff at Norwood Hospital believe that their patients should be educated in proper health care and preventive medicine. In 1979, a Stroke Education Program was established and is aimed at multi-disciplinary stroke education and prevention. The Nutrition Service now provides various programs of education and service, including individual patient counseling, participation in community health fairs, career counseling and a radio broadcast on station WJMQ.

A number of patient services were expanded during 1979. Improved physician coverage for psychiatric emergencies is now available and a full time psychiatric nurse clinician has been retained to deal with crisis situations.

The Pharmacy's hours of service were expanded to approximately 14 hours per day, 364 days of the year. More than 1500 bottles of hyperalimentation (special IV nutrition) solution were prepared and distributed. In conjunction with Nursing, the Pharmacy implemented a new medication cart system that will maximize accuracy and nurse efficiency.

On October 12, 1979, the Norwood Hospital Intercommunity Foundation co-sponsored a very successful dinner dance with the New England Patriots at Schaefer Stadium. The proceeds were forwarded to a fund for the Birthing Center. This new addition to the Maternity floor which, like its predecessors, the Childbirth Education Programs, Rooming-in, sibling visits and the Regency Room adds another dimension to services offered to expectant parents at the Norwood Hospital.

The Norwood Hospital Birthing Center is designed to offer an alternative to parents who wish to combine a "home-like" atmosphere with the security of modern technology found only within a hospital setting. This program and the birthing room itself are planned around those couples who wish their baby to be born in as natural setting as possible. In keeping with the needs of patients and responding to the ever-increasing awareness of new parents concerning the importance of dual participaton, involvement and "bonding" during the birthing process, the Birthing Center should be a natural extension of the existing Childbirth Education already existing at Norwood Hospital. Renovation is expected to begin this year at the site of the present Fathers' Waiting Room South II.

The night before a mother and her newborn are discharged from Norwood Hospital, the new parents may enjoy a gourmet dinner in the Hospital's Regency Room. The maitre d' escorts the couple to their private reserved table, set in elegant china and crystal. Parents are presented a souvenir menu personalized with that first snapshot of the newborn and accompanied by a trustee account on the child's behalf.

The candle-lit dinner begins with a champagne toast followed by shrimp cocktail, fresh fruit cup or French onion soup, salad and rolls. The main course selection includes chicken cordon bleu, filet mignon or baked stuffed lobster. Each dinner comes with potato (baked stuffed with sour cream or French fried) and a vegetable (asparagus spears on cauliflower au gratin). Dessert is chosen from a selection including fresh whipped cream eclair, hot fudge sundae, strawberry sundae or fresh macaroons followed by coffee, tea or milk and an after dinner liqueur.

Although this degree of elegance and charm may sound costly, it actually has relatively little impact on the cost of maternity services, according to Assistant Administrator, William T.R. Holman, "Despite the fact that Norwood Hospital's overall rates are comparatively low in today's market place, we have never cut corners in providing top quality food and related services to our patients," states Holman. Holman attributed the very positive response to the patient food service, in general, and the success of the Regency Room, in particular, to the outstanding staff of the Food Services Department, headed by Director Robert D. Lehane.

Holman explained that the Regency Room is one of several steps Norwood Hospital has taken to make its maternity services as attractive as possible. "Inasmuch as the maternity unit could presently be described as having unused service capacity," he said, "if the utilization increases by even a small percentage, the average cost per patient for these additional services can be decreased."

On Sunday, February 24, 1980, the Norwood Hospital Family celebrated the dedication of the NORCAP Lodge in Foxboro. NORCAP Lodge, a 43 bed facility, is designed to guide patients through an intensive 28 day stay during which time the patient will be provided with medical treatment, counseling, education and direction making re-entry into the community an easier transition.

The administrative staff at NORCAP include: David E. Wilson-Administrator of Alcoholism Services, Frank A. Seixas M.D. - Medical Director of NORCAP, John F. Kelly-Special Consultant for Alcoholism Affairs and Terry Wilson-Chief Counselor.

The site of NORCAP is the old Walnut Lodge in Foxboro which was formerly a state run mental health institution. After appeal to the state governing bodies, a bill was passed through the state legislature and signed into law enabling the state to sell the Walnut Lodge property to Norwood Hospital for exclusive use as an alcoholism treatment facility.

Terry Wilson states, "Our people become personally involved through the process of understanding and the offering of friendship which is a very important part of our treatment philosophy."

The treatment plan that is used at the NORCAP Lodge is designed to make each worker involved at some point with each patient, assuring that no patient "gets lost in the shuffle." A complex system involving interfacing between primary counselors, psychosocial counselors provides maximum exposure of each patient and their needs to the entire staff. "Senior roommates" are involved in the orientation process of new patients, to ease the transition into the facility that will become their home for 28 days. One-to-one therapy and group therapy complement one another in a series of meetings, which begin with general sessions and gradually develop into indepth counseling, concentrating on the unique problems and needs of each patient as an individual. Each week a "team conference" is scheduled where the physician, nurses, counselors and other support persons share with each other their insight and perceptions on the progress and status of each patient. Through this system, each patient is guided through well-defined plan of treatment that culminates in the fourth week of their stay with intensive preparation for a return to the community. This stage will many times include making community contacts for the discharged patient through the highly successful Friends of the NORCAP program, making arrangements for halfway house residency, when necessary, and encouraging some patients to participate in a 12 week outpatient program.

This transition is not an easy one to make and for some patients, it is more difficult than for others. For those needing additional help in dealing with their problem, and present what might be a high risk for returning to a dependency on alcohol, NORCAP offers "Reality Therapy." sessions for several years on Friday mornings and more recently on Monday evenings, as well. These sessions, running in 20 week cycles, offer, according to Terry, "a cognitive and didactic kind of therapy that seems most helpful in aiding patients coming to grips with their disease as we can and "Reality Therapy" is another vehicle whereby we can effect this."

The nursing staff at Norwood Hospital promotes better living by caring for each patient as an individual.

Jennie Babel, R.N., Supervisor of Nurses states, "What makes the Norwood Hospital stand apart from the bigger health care facilities in Boston is the way we care about our patients. They're not numbers or figures lying on a bed. They all have names, families, fears, concerns. Our job is to administer to the total needs of the patients, not just the medical condition."

The Nursing Department promotes extensive education programs designed for the nursing staff, the Hospital staff, student affiliates, patients and their families.

While patient education has always been conducted on a one to one basis, in 1963 the use of closed circuit television for limited patient education in the obstetrical area of the Hospital was initiated. In June of 1963, for instance, "How to Bathe a Baby" was started and became a twice weekly program. In September of 1963, an additional closed circuit program on "How to Make Formula," was shown once a week.

The need for a Nursing Education Department had long been recognized. Such a department would assure that the nursing staff was well versed not only in nursing skills but in teaching and supervision. The education program would start with orientation at the beginning of employment and would continue thereafter. It was for this reason Jeanne Feeney, R.N. joined the Norwood Hospital staff in April of 1964. Within the first year, Mrs. Feeney had established the much needed orientation program for new nursing personnel, a training program for nurses aides and had taken the initial steps toward providing continuing education for the nursing staff.

Family Health Care & Services

NEEDHAM — For the Harvard Community Health Plan, New England's oldest and largest health maintenance organization, the July 1st opening of its Wellesley Health Center represents a major expansion into the suburbs. For HCHP members living in Newton, Wellesley and adjoining communities, the new center means ready access to a wide range of prepaid medical services under one roof: internal medicine, pediatrics, OBGYN, optometry, mental health and all medical and surgical specialties, plus X-ray, laboratory and pharmacy facilities.

The Wellesley Health Center, located at 230 Worcester Street (Route 9 less than a mile west of Route 128),, is the latest chapter in the ongoing development of the Harvard Plan. Founded in 1969 by the Harvard Medical School, the Plan was conceived as a prepaid alternative to traditional "fee for service" medicine—an alternative that could prove invaluable to doctor and patient alike. In the years since, as medical costs have soared ahead of inflation, the concept's worth has become increasingly evident.

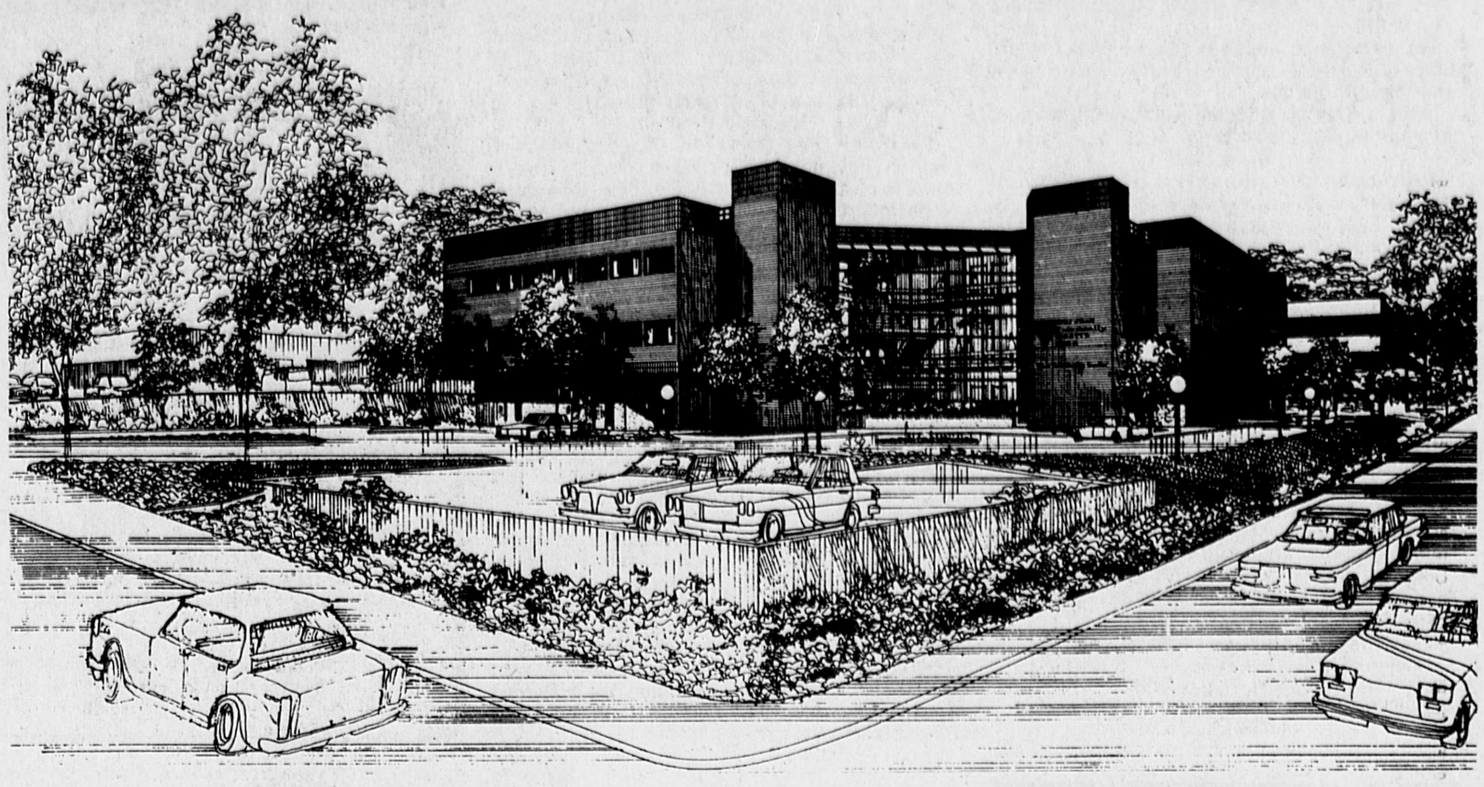

Today, little more than a decade after the first HCHP health center opened its doors to 88 members, the Harvard Plan's Cambridge and Boston centers offer comprehensive PD medical care through the Plan's own doctors and nurse practitioners for nearly 90,000 men, women and children in the Greater Boston area. Beyond the services available in its health centers, the Plan's affiliation with many of the area's major hospitals assures members full surgical, obstetrical and emergency coverage as well.

Because of the Harvard Plan's broad benefit package, members do not incur heavy out-of-pocket costs for non-hospital services. Unlike conventional medical insurance plans, HCHP premiums cover annual checkups, "well baby" visits, eye examinations and outpatient tests, besides the usual hospital and emergency care; a routine dollar-a-visit charge is normally the only fee when a member visits a health center for any purpose. Also, because the care is prepaid, members do not have to keep track of bills, receipts or claims forms for covered services.

The Wellesley Health Center is not a clinic. New members select their personal doctor and nurse practitioner from a list of the center's medical professionals, and their regular visits to the health center are made to the physiciannurse practitioner team chosen. All referrals to specialists within the center are made by the primary care team; in addition, the Harvard Plan has a 24-hour emergency service, with doctors and nurses by the phone at all times.

The three-story Wellesley Health Center building, designed by the architectural firm of Steffian-Bradley, will ultimately serve a total membership of 40,000. It is laid out so that members may go directly to the primary-care or specialty area where they have an appointment. Elevators within the health center and themulti-level garage directly to the rear will provide full access to all facilities for handicapped persons, and a supervised playroom for children will be maintained for members' convenience.

Harvard Community Health Plan, 230 Worcester Street, Wellesley Hills, VIEW FROM WORCESTER STREET

James E. Sabin, M.D., of 14 Birch Road, Wellesley, has been appointed director of the new center. A graduate of Harvard Medical School, he was an assistant clinical director at the Massachusetts Mental Health Center in Boston and director of that facility's Community Mental Health Service before joining the Harvard Plan in 1975. For the past four years, he has served as a psychiatrist in the Plan's Kenmore Health Center in Boston.

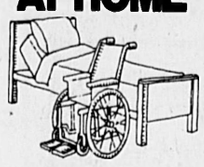

Marc A. Bard, M.D., of 6 Crocker Circle, West Newton, will be the Wellesley Center's chief of medicine.

After graduating from the Tufts University , Medical School and spending part of his residency with the Harvard Plan, he was co-director of Mount Auburn Hospital's Ambulatory Care Department from 1975 until last year, when he rejoined HCHP. As WBZ radio's medical advisor, he shared a 1978 Ohio State Award for the station's "BZ Living" campaign.

Elizabeth A. Bayardi of Brookline, formerly assistant administrator of the Harvard Plan's Cambridge center, will be the Wellesley center's administrator. A graduate of Middlebury College, she joined HCHP in 1974, working for a year and a half as manager of the Kenmore Center until promoted to her administrative job in Cambridge. She is currently an MBA candidate at Boston University's School of Management.

Membership in the Harvard Plan is available through some 1600 employers on a group basis, and to individuals as well on a "non-group" basis. It is also available through the Department of Public Welfare and to recipients of Medicare via HCHP's Plan 65, which supplements Medicare coverage to give members complete health benefits when they use Harvard Plan doctors and health center services.

Have you visited a nursing home lately?
Retirement years can be active years.
Today's nursing homes are a vital, integral part of the community, meeting the social, spiritual and physical needs of the retired, the convalescent and the chronically ill of all ages.
But too many of us fail to realize that much of the social, spiritual and physical nourishment of nursing home residents must come from the outside.
Our nursing home welcomes visitors. We want your involvement in our functions. We want your social and spiritual contributions.
Not out of a spirit of charity or good will, but out of the idea that all of life is interrelated.
We would like you to visit our home. Call on us. Our doors open both ways.

The Recreation Department's Women's Twilight Softball League has no games scheduled for Memorial weekend but will resume play on May 28.

A League teams this season are Jesters, Crimsons, McG's, Why Nots, Raiderettes, Hustlers and Art Carrolls.

B League teams are Zepp's Zeros, CJ's, General Cinema, Killer Bee, Papa's I, Buff's Pub, Brandons and Shirleys Cherubs.

These teams play Sundays and Wednesdays at Albemarle at 6:15 and 8:15 p.m.

Water Staff

Individuals interested in serving as lifeguards and water safety instructors at the Gath Pool and Crystal Lake this summer may still make application to the Newton Recreation Department, 70 Crescent St., Auburndale.

Applicants must have current Senior Lifesaving certificates, Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation certification and Standard First Aid and Personal Safety certification.

Sailing Instruction

The Newton Recreation Department has scheduled three sessions of sailing instruction at Crystal Lake this summer. They will be held June 30 to July 18, July 21 to Aug. 8 and Aug. 11 to Aug. 22.

Classes for the first and second sessions will be 9:30 to 11:30 a.m., 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. and 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. Class times for the third session will be 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Applicants must be able to swim 200 yards, surface dive, swim 15 feet under water and tread water for five minutes (clothed).

Registration for these classes will be held at Crystal Lake on Tuesday, June 24, Wednesday, June 25 and Thursday, June 26, from 4 to 6 p.m. Applicants should see the sailing instructor.

Sailing Program

The Recreation Department will also have a sailing program from June 30 to Aug. 22. During this period three Sunfish and one Jetwind will be available Monday through Friday from 5:15 p.m. to dusk; Saturdays, 9 a.m. with the dockmaster.

Swim Permits

The Recreation Department will begin selling 1980 season swim permits at the office 70 Crescent St., Auburndale on Monday, June 2. They will be sold weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. The fee for children is $2 for adults $5 and families $15.

Mini-Bike Program

The Mini Bike tracks on Winchester Street, Newton Highlands, are open each Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. through June. This Recreation Department facility will close for July and August and reopen in September for the fall season.

Riders must wear helmets and hard-toed shoes, and bikes must have spark arresters, mufflers, safe tires and brakes. There is a $5 registration fee for each bike and a $1 fee for each additional rider of that bike.

Swim Class Schedule

During the first Swim Class Session at Crystal Lake from June 30 to July 18, the following schedule will be in effect: 9 to 9:40 Beginner I, Beginner I, Swimmer and Basic Rescue; 10:40 to 11:20, Beginner II, Intermediate, Advanced Beginner and Beginner II; 11:30 to Noon Tots; 12:40 to 1:20 Advanced Beginner, Intermediate, Beginner II and Beginner I; 1:30 2:10 p.m. Beginner I, Advanced Beginner and Beginner II; 2:20 to 3 p.m. Swimmer, Beginner II and Advanced Beginner.

Evening Swim Instruction

There will be eight weeks of adult lessons at Crystal Lake from 5:30 to 6 p.m. from June 30 to Aug. 22. Advanced life saving classes will be held June 30 to July 25 from 6 to 8 p.m. Basic Rescue Classes will be held July 28 to Aug. 8 or Aug. 11 to Aug. 22 from 6 to 8 p.m.

Golf Lessons Full

The golf lessons for Newton youngsters aged 10 to 16 have been filled. Over 50 youngsters are enrolled.

Canoes Available

June 30 to Aug. 22 the Recreation Department will have three canoes available at Crystal Lake on the following schedule: Monday through Friday, 5:15 p.m. to dusk; Saturdays, 9 a.m. to dusk and Sundays, 1 p.m. to dusk.

All applicants must pass a swim test and boating skills test to use the boats.

Sign up with the dockmaster.

Summer Basketball

Newton women 16 years of age or older are invited to play in the Newton Recreation Department's Summer Basketball League. First rosters are due on June 2.

League Director Fran Towle urges interested women to contact her at 552-7120.

Volcanic ash will be hard to find

Dust and ash spreading over North America from Mount St. Helens could have an increased effect on New England's weather or environment if there are additional eruptions, a geologist who studied the volcano last month says.

But Dr. Richard Kadle said the giant cloud of soot which spewed from the volcano earlier this week, darkening skies over Washington, Idaho and Montana, will probably have dissipated too much to have any noticeable impact by the time it reaches the eastern United States today.

"By the time it reaches the East Coast, it will be so dispersed and extremely fine effects on vegetation will be essentially nil," Kadle said Tuesday. "I think it's very unlikely they'll even be able to see it (ash residue) on cars."

"It may be insignificant if there are no other big (volcanic) explosions," he added. "If there should be several more, we may have a noticeably cooler summer than usual."

Kadle studied Mount St. Helens for the National Center for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colo., in April.

In Vermont, officials planned to take air samples at 15 locations around the state for the next three days to make sure the cloud poses no health hazard.

New job for Paul

SAN DIEGO- Paul Silas, a former Celtic and 16 year veteran in the NBA who has appeared in more games than any active player is all smiles after he was named as player coach of the San Diego Clippers replacing Gen Shue who resigned. Silas has played the last two years with the Seattle Supersonics.

Clayton eager to help Jets

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Ralph Clayton, the New York Jets second round draft choice, says the Jets were his first choice.

"Couldn't have picked a better place to come to," said Clayton, who will probably play running back, receiver or tight end. "This was my number one choice."

Clayton, a former flanker for Michigan, who has 4.5 speed for 40 yards, was actually picked third behind Texas speedster Johnny "Lam" Jones and Oklahoma safety Darrol Ray. New York obtained its second second round choice from the Denver Broncos as partial compensation for quarterback Matt Robinson.

But Clayton doesn't much care how he got here — as long as he's here.

"I couldn't imagine being anywhere else," he says. "I'm close to home (Detroit) and in one of the greatest cities of the world."

The 6-foot-3, 222 pounder, 216 pounds at playing weight, who sports a Grizzly Adams type beard, didn't come here with many preconceived notions.

"I'll do what I can for the team," he said, during the Jets rookie mini camp. "I want the coach (Walt Michaels) to be able to count on me. I've done it before and I can do it again."

Although he has only spent a few days in the pros — three to be exact — Clayton already feels at home.

"In Michigan there was a lot of pressure," he said. "They were always pushing, pushing," as he pumped his fist for emphasis. "It's laid back here. You can enjoy yourself and work at the same time.

Pats sign free agent

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — The New England Patriots Tuesday announced the signing of free agent running back Angelo Colomiso of Colgate.

Colosimo, a 5-foot-11, 208-pounder, gained 1,349 yards in 358 carries for Colgate and scored 12 touchdowns to finish as the school's ninth ranked career rusher.

He also was named to the Academic All-America team the past two years and was one of 11 athletes to be awarded the National Football Foundation'w Scholar Athlete Award.

Donna top golfer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Donna Caponi Young has withstood the challenges of several LPGA members for the seventh consecutive week as she continues to remain the leading money winner on the tour.

Amassing $111,052 this year, Young is ahead of JoAnne Carner by over $17,000. Carner has now earned $93,810.

Donna Horton White, who captured last weekend's event in Clifton, New Jersey, moved up from no. 16 to. no. 7 with her first prize money of $18,750.

2,000 summer jobs available

BOSTON will be available this year across the commonwealth through the state's summer job program.

Persons may apply for these recreational facility jobs at any local Division of Employment Security Job Matching Center. Applications will be accepted until June 30.

The program provides job opportunities for new applicants, but also reserves some positions for those who have shown skill and reliability in past summers.

The available jobs are administered by the Metropolitan District Commission and state Department of Environmental Management.

Eye injuries mount in racquet sports

Eye injuries suffered in raquet sports have more than doubled over the past five years. Tennis, squash and raquet ball were responsible for some 4.000 ocular injuries last year, up from less the 2,000 in 1973, according to the Mass. Society for the Prevention of Blindness (MSPB).

To prevent such injuries, the Mass. Society urges all players-whether or not they normally wear eyeglasses - to use special protective eyewear.

"As the popularity of these non-contact sports continues to rise, so does the threat of eye damage among players," reports Paul Vinger, M.D., Medical Advisory Committe and well-known ophthalmologist specializing in eye injuries in sports. "A tennis ball that feels relatively soft becomes a hard missile at speeds which can exceed 100 miles per hour. The smaller the ball, the greater the potential to injure eyes. Uprotected eyes are left open to injury and possible vision impairment, most of which could be prevented," Dr. Vinger added.

Eye safety is as important for the seasoned player as it is for the casual beginner. Recognition of this bact is underscored by a recent Canadian Recquetball Association regulation making eye protectin mandatory for all tournament participants.

"Safety eyewear can absorb the impact of the ball or racquet- and spare the eye'" Dr. Vinger advised.

"Mutual Bank's puttin' Newtonville on the map."

"Sooner the better. My end's gettin' a mite heavy."

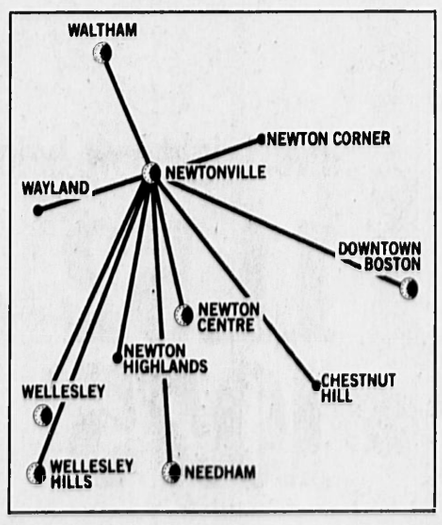

Add one more location to Mutual Bank's map of convenience, because PLUS/24 'round-the-clock banking has come to Newtonville. Now with PLUS/24 you can make deposits and loan payments, get cash or transfer funds between REDi-NOW checking or statement savings accounts.

It's the seventh convenient PLUS/24 location from Mutual Bank For Savings, designed to meet your banking needs every day of the year. If you haven't tried PLUS/24 before, now's the time, and here are two good reasons why:

FREE MAPS: Just for trying PLUS/24 at our Newtonville office, you'll receive a free, detailed driver's map of the Boston area. That's something we all can use.*

ENERGY SAVING GIFTS: When you apply for a free REDi-CASH Card (the heart and soul of PLUS/24), we'll give you an energy saving gift, free. It's just our way of saying thanks.

Stop by our Newtonville office soon and ask for a demonstration of PLUS/24. It's conveniently yours, from Mutual Bank For Savings.

Watch "This Old House" every Wednesday at 8:00 on Channel 2.

Before you leave for these doors, have The Globe delivered to your door.

Door to door anything.

Door to door house hunting.

Door to door groceries.

Door to door recreation.

In today's economy, you've got to shop pretty hard to get the best possible bargains on everything you buy.

There's two ways to do this. One way is to get in the car and drive from store to store until you find just what you're looking for, at just the price you want to pay. Obviously, this can take precious time. And gas.

The other, more economical way, is to have The Boston Globe delivered to your home every morning. Because in addition to offering you the most indepth news coverage around, The Globe offers you the most extensive, daily advertising shopping guide in New England.

No matter what you're looking for, you'll probably find it featured or "on sale" in The Boston Globe. And with a home delivered Globe; you can plan your shopping day over breakfast, before you even leave the house.

So if you want to get a head start every day on things you need to buy every day, then have The Boston Globe delivered to your home. Because when it comes to the best bargains in New England, The Boston Globe delivers them door to door.

Tumultuous times in nursing

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Nursing, a profession in tumult and change, gives the healthcare industry plenty of headaches these days.

Change gives the nation such specialists as nurse practitioners, nurse midwives and nurse health care advocates — who help patients get everything from second opinions on recommendations for operations to free shots for poor children.

Tumult comes from hospital politics and poor job conditions, setting the scene for a growing flight from fulltime jobs in hospitals. About 40 percent of the nation's available nursepower is out of the job market at any given time.

Two nurses in every five drop out for an average of six years — stars in their eyes blanked out by conditions far removed from what they expected. In a new survey, RN magazine claims nine percent run up the white flag for good.

The report said:

"Self-realization and fulfillment are clearly nurses' highest priorities."

The things they gripe about, the RN report said, include arrogant doctors, politics, red tape, fragmentation of patient care, bad hours, too much bedmaking and low pay.

Barbara Nichols, president of the American Nurses Association, said only 980,000 of the nation's 1.4 million licensed nurses are in the workforce these days.

She thinks nurses need more chances to contribute to the say over what goes on in hospitals. They want their voices heard by planners, administrators and trustees.

Ms. Nichols is director of in-service education at St. Mary Hospital's Medical Center in Madison, Wis.

Sara Tatem, president of the American Society for Nursing Service Administrators of the American Hospital Association, said:

"I know of no hospital in the nation without a problem — especially when it comes to getting nurses for the harder areas such as the critical and intensive care units.

"Nurses must work afternoons, nights, weekends and it is difficult. We — hospitals — never close."

Ms. Tatem, assistant administrator and director of nursing affairs at the Fairfax Hospital in Falls Church, Va., said a bright spot on the nursing front is an improvement in the doctor-nurse relationship — an area pocked with feuds for decades.

"I think nurses and physicians are closer today than ever," she said. "I believe it is probably the result of the demonstrated ability of nurses. The doctor is recognizing the nurse for new responsibilities she assumes.

"He recognizes that he is probably more dependent on her than in the past.

"To me, there is an ever increasing respect — one for the other, as he gets busier, as the practice of medicine becomes more complex.

"Patients in many hospitals are sicker, demand more care. What many young nurses can do with the new technologies is simply incredible in the intensive and neonatal care areas.

"Nursing has become a vital part of treatment today. It was more a service before. Take a the immediate post-op period. Or in a coronary care unit. She manages patient care. She is on the frontline."

Being on that frontline is one reason for another problem. Burnout.

Ms. Nichols said the shortage of trained nurses in the critical and intensive care units puts those on staff under tremendous pressure — stress, emotional and physical fatigue leading to burnout.

"Nurse burnout in critical care units is a national phenonomen," she said.

Pay check disputed

Judge Stanley Jablonski is presiding without a jury over the trial, which Segal said could last until Friday.

Five witnesses testified in all: City Treasurer Theodore L. Scafidi, former deputy mayor James Salter, staff secretary in the mayor's office Donna Gordon, former community relations director Richard Antonellis and Pignatelli.

Much of the testimony from Scafidi and Pignatelli concerned the layout of the treasurer's office and check cashing procedures in that office. They both testified that, as a service to City Hall employees, tellers in the office cashed city paychecks from 8:30 to 9:30 Thursday mornings. They said two tellers cash a total of anywhere between 150 and 200 paychecks, worth up to $28,000, in that hour.

From the time the check cashing service was established in 1975 to the end of 1979, Pignatelli testified, Ossinger appeared in one of the two tellers' lines "every week."

Besides her own check, Ossinger frequently had in her possession paychecks addressed to Mann and, on occasion, to Antonellis, Pignatelli said.

Although the mayor's checks were marked "for deposit only" on the back, "there were times when she (Ossinger) would cash the mayor's checks as well as her own," Pignatelli.

Practices and procedures in the mayor's office were the main subject of testimony given Salter, Gordon and Antonellis. All three described Mann as a perfectionist who would occcasionally annoy staff members by asking that a speech or a letter be redrafted eight or 10 times.

And Ossinger, suntanned and wearing a blue and white checked jacket and white skirt, wept briefly when Salter described her as "the most capable secretary anyone could have," saying there was nothing that was too hard for her.

Travel Talk

by Josephine Arria

Venice is the capital city of romance. Built on 177 islands, it is an intricate network of 150 canals and 400 pedestrian bridges. Balconies are festooned with flowers; flocks of birds rise in unision from Europe's most beautiful square. Open-air cafes, centures-old masked balls, exquisite Venetian glass and lace and the famous gondolas make it easy to understand this city's reputation for romance. Sundials are inscribed with the words "I count only the happy hours".

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
LAND COURT
Middlesex, ss.
To The Honorable The Judges of the Land Court for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
Respectfully represents Eilin Saltzman (Silberberg) of Newton, in the County of Middlesex and said Commonwealth; that she is owner of certain lot of land with the buildings thereon situate in Newton, in the County of Middlesex, and said Commonwealth bounded and described as follows:
NORTHERLY: by Hartman Road eighty-four and 93/100 feet;
NORTHEASTERLY: by a curved line forming the junction of Hartmen Road and Village Circle thirty-four and 33/100 feet;
EASTERLY: by Village Circle seventy-six and 03/100 feet;
SOUTHERLY: by lot 429 on said plan eighty-five and 89/100 feet;
WESTERLY: by Lot 427 on said plan one hundred seventeen and 27/100 feet, that the record title to said lot of land is clouded by a mortgage given to Fox Meadow Corporation by George (now deceased) and Eilin Saltzman, dated May 4, 1950 and duly recorded Book 7574, Page 173, purporting to secure a note for $1,000 payable with interest annually, which mortgage appears to be undischarged, unassigned and unforeclosed on and by the record--or not properly or legally discharged of record:
That for more than twenty years after the expiration of the time limited for the full performance of said condition no payment has been made and no other act done in recognition of said mortgage and;
That the mortgagor named in said mortgage and those claiming under her have been in uninterrupted possession of said land for more than 20 years after the expiration of time limited in said mortgage for the full performance of the condition thereof.
Wherefore your petitioner pray that after appropriate notices a decree may be entered on the foregoing allegations as authorized by Section 15 Chapter 240 of the General Laws as amended by Chapter 20, of the Acts of 1924.

AAU head is unhappy about the U.S. boycott

By CARRIE MUSKAT

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Robert Helmick wants to run a sub-5 minute mile, provide more competitive opportunities for amateur athletes and send the U.S. Olympic team to the Moscow Summer Games.

Helmick, a 43-year-old Des Moines attorney, is president of the Amateur Athletic Union and a member of the U.S. Olympic Committee since 1972.

"I participated until not too many years ago," he said, "and I see sport as a very good social reform. I want to give others the opportunity to compete."

Helmick has the same enthusiasm for sports as he did when he played water polo 20 years ago. His time on club teams from 1960-1974 included a stint as manager of the U.S. water polo team that won a bronze medal at the Munich Olympics in 1972.

The USOC is suffering severe cash flow problems, Helmick said, because people feel since the U.S. team is boycotting the Moscow Summer Games, the USOC doesn't need any donations.

"We're in a dilemma," Helmick said. "We've got to have the Olympics so we can promote something exciting but we need the money for amateur athletes.

"We're trying to change the image people have. They get all excited about the Olympic games but they need to be concerned about amateur athletics. Only 10 percent of the USOC's money is used for the Olympics while the other 90 percent is used for the development of sport.

"Fifty to 60 percent of our contributions come in during an Olympic year and unfortunately people are cutting back — but understandably so."

Helmick said USOC's decision to support President Carter's boycott of the summer Olympics has "increased tension internationally."

"After we voted for the boycott, we decided to work together so our athletes aren't the only ones hanging out and not going," he said. "Most of the other nations are unwilling to join the boycott."

Helmick said he is disturbed by the administration's efforts to get other countries to join the boycott, calling them "absolutely incorrect."

"My difficulty with the boycott is not to keep sports and politics separate," he said. "I'm upset that we're using our athletes as a means of outrage against another country."

USOC is continuing to select teams to represent the United States, just as if it were sending teams to the games. But Helmick said many of the athletes are bitter.

"The volleyball team has been working for the past two to three years at a training camp and you can imagine the feeling of despair there when they announced the boycott," he said. "It's certainly a negative factor but it's one we can overcome."

Helmick's two sons and two daughters are influenced subconsciously by his sports interests, he said, and son John was a member of the U.S. national modern pentathlon team and U.S. champion in the modern triathlon in 1978.

Helmick said he swims and runs almost every day, "and hopefully I'll run a mile under five minutes.

"Not too many years ago, people looked at you funny if you jogged," said the trim, chlorine-bleached blond attorney. "Now, I think everybody who wants to should have the opportunity to compete and this has been my commitment."

Helmick's commitment to both the USOC and AAU includes traveling to places like Lausanne, Paris, and Colorado Springs, Colo., meeting with the 1,200-member AAU staff twice a week, and aiding amateur athletes. Last month, he raised funds for the U.S. water polo team's trip to Hungary.

The AAU is a "grassroots" organization, he said, consisting of 3 million members and 300,000 volunteer workers who organize local meets.

His goals as president the past two years were three-fold, including effective reorganization of amateur athletics in the United States, development of a comprehensive masters program and growth of the Junior Olympics program.

"I'm satisfied and had we gone to Moscow, I think people would have seen the quality and caliber of athletes we've got," he said.

Average marathoner shrinking and aging

The average runner in the 1980 Boston Marathon (assuming such a being exists) was shorter, lighter, and older than his, or her counterpart in the 1979 event. As a group, the runners also had less stamina and slower times than those who competed in last year's race, though women in general did markedly better than they did the year before.

These and numerous other statistics have been compiled by the Honeywell Level 6 computer that scored and timed the race right at the finish line: Here's a quick rundown of the data;

1. In 1979, the "typical" runner was 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighed 147.6 pounds, and was 34.5 years old. In 1980, he "shrunk" one inch to 5 feet 8 inches, lsot one-tenth of a pound to 147.5, and aged three-tenths of a year to 34.8.

Perhaps as a result of simultaneously getting smaller and older, the average runner took one minute and 25 seconds longer to complete the race (up from 3:01:15 in '79 to 3:02:40 in '80). And all along everyone thought it was the heat that was causing the slower times.

2' In 1979, according to Honeywell of Waltham, three out of every four official starters completed the race (4,958 out of 7 '910, or 75.3 percent). In 1980, the percentage of runners completing the race fell of significantly (3,663 out of 5,471, or 66.9 percent).

3. The male breakdown looks like this: In 1979., men as a group completed the course in 3:00,28; in 1980, 2,112 men under 40 ran the course in an average time of 2:55:10, while 1,315 masters averaged 3:12:34 for a combined average time of 3:01:50 for males.

4. Women, on the other hand, bettered heir 1979 time of 3:16:25 to 3:13:33, although fewer of them entered and completed the race. In 1979, 296 out of 521 female entrants crossed the finish line (56.8 percent); in 1980, 236 out of 456 (51.7 percent) finished the course.

5. Interestingly enough, the Honeywell computer reveals that age group with the largest contingent of runners continues to be the 40-44 group. In 1979, 1,636 of them entered the race and 1,197 completed it (73.1 percent). In 1980, 1,189 started from Hopkinton and 815 of them crossed the line (68.5 percent). Thus, for the last two years, the age 40-44 group accounted for approximately 22 percent of all entrants and for more than 20 percent of all finishers.

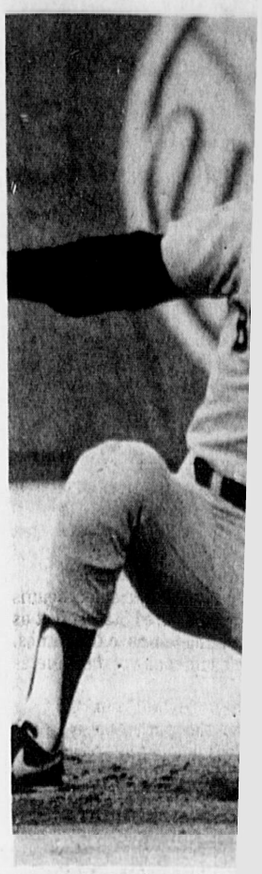

6. Finally, the new, more stringent qualifying times (2:50:00 for men, 3:10:00 for masters, and 3:20:00 for women) appear to pose a problem only for the first two groups.

Women as a whole, bettered their cutoff times by five minutes and 23 seconds, while men under 40 averaged fivexm minutes 10 seconds over the prescribed time and masters averaged two minutes and 34 seconds over theirs.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

REALTORS in 17 cities and towns in southwestern Norfolk County have launched an anti-vandalism campaign as this year's "Make America Better" project, enlisting the support of fifth and sixth grade students in their area.

As part of the program, the REALTORS are showing a film on vandalism at the more than 40 schools participating in the project. After viewing the film, distributed by the National Association of Realtors, the fifth and sixth graders are asked to create anti-vandalism posters, expressing their feelings on the subject.

A winning poster will be selected at each school to be displayed in a public place, and the winning students will be presented awards during the REALTORS' "Private Property Week", April 15-21.

The program is being conducted by members of Council I & M, a regional organization of the Brokers Institute, a division of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board.

Edward F. Smith of the Audrey C. Fields office and Karen Glaser of the Florence Kates office in Canton are coordinating the project as co-chairpersons of the council's Make America Better Committee.

Council I & M represents REALTORS in Bellingham, Canton, Dedham, East Milton, Foxboro, Franklin, Mansfield, Medfield, Medway, Millis, Milton, Norfolk, Norwood, Sharon, Walpole, Westwood, and Wrentham.

What makes someone change from this... to this?

The temptation to sell your own house is very strong. For some, it's a matter of money. For others, it's a matter of pride.

But the truth is that more than half the people who start out selling their houses themselves end up listing with a broker–after months of frustration and wasted time.

Before you make the decision to sell your own house–or even if you're trying it–talk to your CENTURY 21® Neighborhood Professional™ and ask us about our exclusives:

OUR 20 MILLION DOLLAR ADVERTISING PROGRAM. The largest in the industry, it has helped CENTURY 21 become the organization 9 out of 10 homeowners know and trust.

OUR VIP REFERRAL SERVICE™ helps us locate potential buyers for you locally and around the country.

OUR NEGOTIATING SKILLS. CENTURY 21 closes over 1,600 home sales every day. That's 579,000 a year. We know how to negotiate in your best interest. And once your house is sold, we know how to keep it sold.

ACTION WARRANTY™, a written document that tells you exactly what we'll do before, during and after the sale. If we don't come through, you can cancel.

OUR HANDSHAKE, the most binding contract of all. We mean what we say. We give you our word on that. And our sign.

Century 21® At CENTURY 21. We'll Give Our Word To You.™

CAMELOT(S)
DON'T HAVE TO COST A LOT
Make your winter dreams come true this summer by building your summer home on the finest location on the "Gateway to the Cape".
There's a lot of Camelot on this 30,300 sq ft of prime waterfront land in Wareham. It's on a beautiful, breath-taking knoll overlooking the sparkling Weweanic & Marion shore.
Yet it's only a 50 minute drive from the Greater Boston area even on the busiest of traffic weekends since you don't have to go over either of the clogged Cape Cod Canal bridges.
This Camelot is the nicest area left on the Upper Cape. A one minute walk to a private sandy ocean beach on one side while there's just a saltmarsh between you and the river on the other.
You can build your own private dock riverside or just stroll across the road to an Atlantic inlet and a spectacular view of Buzzards Bay.
Land has 165 feet fronting on water with 200 feet bordering on rustic road. Asking $30,000 and at that price it's the last bargain left on the Upper Cape. Shown by appt. only by ROD MERRILL, Realtor, Wareham. 1-295-4443.

Americans showering military with ideas for hostage rescue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After the aborted mission to rescue 53 U.S. hostages in Iran, many Americans are writing Defense Secretary Harold Brown with pet suggestions for a new try.

Almost invariably, their ideas ignore technical capabilities of military equipment, such as the limited range of helicopters; or fail to deal with key developments, such as dispersal of hostages throughout Iran after the failed mission.

Examples:

—One woman, writing in Serbian, suggests dropping gas bags on the U.S. Embassy in Tehran to incapacitate the Iranian militant — then helicopters would swoop in to rescue the hostages.

—Another writer suggests that Iranian officers taking military training in the United States be incorporated into a clandestine force to take over the embassy. Once they seize control, helicopters evacuate all, and Iranian agents are rewarded with U.S. citizenship.

—One Canadian writer suggests two volunteer pilots from the CIA fly Air Force One to Tehran on a peace mission. Once the plane lands, Iranians are informed the plane actually is a gigantic neutron bomb which will explode in 48 hours unless the hostages are released.

—Another writer is more straightforward: rain nuclear bombs on Tehran and all Iranian ports.

Defense officials say that in the weeks since the raid they have received over 300 letters, of which 71 disapproved the mission, 153 approved, and 114 offered suggestions.

Several urged Brown to hire agents in Israel or West Germany to undertake the mission because those two countries succeeded in rescuing hostages from Uganda and Somalia.

Mostly, the well-intentioned writers ignore the major difficulty of the Iran operation: Tehran is far from any easy staging area.

The Iranian capital is 500 miles from eastern Turkey, and 1,000 miles from the U.S. fleet in the Arabian Sea.

The RH-53 Sea Stallion helicopters the raiding party used has a range of slightly over 500 miles.

Since it appeared doubtful Turkey would cooperate in advance, it became obvious to U.S. planners the only way to reach the hostages was by landing helicopters secretly, and refueling, at a base within Iran.

Just how the rescue force was to seize control of the embassy still is secret, but from what has trickled out, it appears six U.S. helicopters were to fly to a mountain hideout outside Tehran.

Planners counted on losing one helicopter, from various causes, at each stage of the mission.

Thus, they calculated they needed five helicopters to fly from the mountain hideout on the night of April 25 to a point closer to the city.

"European businessmen" connected with U.S. intelligence had reportedly purchased a warehouse in Tehran and procured a small fleet of buses. The buses were to move the commandos to the Embassy in the dead of night.

After the takeover of the embassy by commandos, the buses were to spirit raiders and hostages to waiting helicopters.

Now, planners estimated, the helicopter force might be down to four.

Since each helicopter could carry 35, there would, nevertheless, be just enough room for 50 hostages and 90 commandos.

These would then fly to yet another secret base to join up with C-130 transports for the final evacuation.

The loss of three helicopters on the way in to the secret desert base has raised questions about the way the aircraft were maintained aboard the USS Nimitz.

Adm. Thomas Hayward, chief of naval operations, has strongly denied any laxity.

"A special logistics system had been covertly established within the naval aviation supply system to keep the Nimitz supplied with essential helicopter parts in a timely fashion while not revealing the possible mission," Hayward said in speech May 1.

"The helicopter detachment aboard Nimitz had all the people and technical skills the on-scene commander said they needed, in contrast to the shortages which are standard elsewhere in the Navy."

Another question: why were only eight helicopters designated for the flight into Iran?

Senior military officials say the original plan called for seven, on the theory only one helicopter would fail on each leg of the mission. An eighth was added at the last moment for good measure.

Planners resisted expanding the force too much, however, because each operational team required logistics support.

Expanding the operational team meant expanding the logistics "tail" and that in turn made it more likely the secret of the mission might leak.

Efforts to rescue the U.S. prisoners now seem to be infinitely complicated by the decision of militant guards to disperse them throughout the country.

So long as the vast majority were held in one place, it was possible to plan a single military mission to descend on the embassy.

Now, any plan to rescue the hostages would depend on infiltrating disguised agents into Iran who could strike nearly simultaneously — no mean feat.

Assuming the hostages could be freed in this way, the United States would still face the problem of spiriting the hostages away from their captors to a secret rendezvous for evacuation.

No recession in higher education

True or false: Colleges will beg for students in the 1980s as higher ed hits hard times. "False" — says a "good news" report from the American Council on Education.

The Council forecast disputes earlier forecasts of a "depression in higher education" which could teachers will hit the breadlines as schools scramble for students.

Instead of an enrollment decline, widely estimated as high as 25 percent in this decade, the ACE study figures there could be only a small decrease or a levelling or — even a slight increase.

If the ACE is right, all those junior faculty members — last hired, first fired -- can stop biting their nails over the prospects of jobs drying up all along the academic trail between now and 1990.

Non-traditional students can make the difference, says the study from the ACE, the naion's principal independent non-profit coordinating body for post-secondary education.

The study shows, for example, that increased enrollment of men aged 35-to-64 and of women aged 20-to-34 could yield much larger enrollments.

Enrollments also could be boosted by:

—Increased retention of current students;

—Increased credentialing of high school dropouts;

—Lower income youth and minorities.

—Employed persons currently receiving education in industry;

—Foreign students.

The ACE report, "College Enrollment: Testing the Conventional Wisdom Against the Facts," was orchestrated by ACE Chief Ecnomist Carol Frances and prepared for the Interassociational Council on Policy Analysis and Research.

That is a consortium of 21 higher education associations functioning as a research coordinating body.

"The study shows that we may have been far more pessimistic about the outlook for student enrollments than is justified," said J.W. Peltason, president of ACE, based in Washington, D.C.

"It is clear that the decline in the so-called traditional college-age population group is not the only fact determining the prospects for American higher education enrollments in the 1980s."

The report contradicts earlier forecasts this way:

Forecast: Total enrollments are already down, falling off even before the decline in the college-age population, raising the spectre of greater decreases in enrollments than originally feared.

ACE: College enrollments have increased by over 3 million students from 1970 to 1979. Enrollments are up in every major sector of higher education, in both public and private institutions and in both four-year and tw o-year institutions. ——

Be Nice To A Graduate Nurse Today

How, You May Ask?

#1 By offering congratulations because graduation time is here.
#2 By suggesting that Morton Hospital is a rewarding place to practice nursing.

Morton Hospital is a 190 bed non-profit acute care community hospital which is located within easy commuting distance of southwest suburban Boston, Plymouth County, Cape Cod, Bristol County and Providence, R.I. We believe in the potential of Graduate Nurses and we have a successful history of offering a rewarding opportunity to begin nursing practice within a progressive nursing service which offers a unique blend of individualized orientation and supportive supervision. Everything is carefully orchestrated to assist the Graduate Nurse through those important months following nursing school and beginning nursing practice. Candidates will have the opportunity to interview with Morton Hospital's nursing recruitment team which includes nurse managers as well as nursing unit teachers who will work with Graduate Nurses throughout the orientation period and beyond.

Please call Denise Fortin at (617)823-5025 for more information about these unique nursing opportunities.

SELF-SERVICE STATION MANAGER

WEST ROXBURY

What we need:
Somebody dependable and conscientious, even if you don't know a dip-stick from a doorknob, to manage a first-class self-service station. (Gas and oil only; no mechanical experience necessary.) A man or woman capable of learning the ropes and routine, and then handling his own show: Hiring people who are reliable. Firing people who aren't. Training a crew. Then keeping them well-organized and motivated; and generally running a tight ship.

What you need:
Above all, the ability to be organized and responsible, along with a respect for other people – your customers and your crew alike. Some background in managing people would be helpful, but not 100% essential. If you can convince us you're right for the job . . . you've got the job.

What you get:
A good starting salary and a pile of benefits: Company-paid Master Medical and dental insurance, paid vacations, a bonus program, and the security of working for New England's largest independent oil company.

What to do:
Call Chris Anderson toll-free to set up an interview soon.
In Mass., call 1-(800)-732-3313, Ext. 241.
In N.H., call 1-(800)-225-3404, Ext. 241.

We're Analog Devices, the No. 1 company in data-acquisition and computer interface components and the fastest-growing electronics manufacturers in the industry. Our tremendous expansion has resulted in tremendous opportunities for you:

Corporate Communications Secretary

Our Corporate Communications Department is in need of a personable individual with good telephone presence and the ability to work in a high-pressure environment, adapting to constantly changing priorities. Individual must handle a varietya of assignments simultaneously, possessing organizational skills and initiative, as well as superior typing speed and excellent command of the English language. Applicant should have good typing and secretarial skills and at least 1 year of secretarial experience (secretarial school a plus). If you're interested in assuming increasingly challenging responsibilities and willing to put in some overtime to advance, this is the opportunity or you.

Order Entry Typist

In this position, you will prepare orders prior to processing, determining account numbers and confirming price and delivery. You will prepare write-ups if delivery information is necessary beyond delivery schedule capacity. Also, you will check the credit status of new order accounts prior to release; and accurately process new orders for domestic customers via remote erminal entry system into the computer. We seek a well-organized individual with the ability to perform well under pressure and a heavy workload. Some previous order entry experience using a CRT or very good typing skill is all you need for this challenging position.

Data Control Clerk

Tuesday-Saturday

You will receive and log input and output data, spot-checking for obvious errors. You will prepare job control for computer runs, distribute reports, and perform control work on output data. Interaction with many of our department for CIS services will aslo be involved. A background which includes 6-12 months data control work is an added plus.

Payroll Clerk Typist

In this position you will aid in the preparation of weekly and bi-weekly time cards, and master file input. Maintenance of attendance and vacation records, as well as filing and typing of reports, tax returns and procedures is also involved. If you are a high school graduate with 1-2 years working experience, 40-50 wpm typing and proficiency with the use of calculator and other business machines, you may be interested in this position.

Analog Devices, Inc., offers growth opportunity and an excellent benefit package. If you are interested in advancing with a No. 1 company, call John Francis at 329-4700, ext. 1600, or send a ? resume to his attention, Analog Devices, Box 280, One Technology Center, Norwood, MA 02062.

School math flunking demands

NEW YORK (UPI) — School math, ailing for years, is flunking demands of the high technology era — computers and calculators included, the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics said Wednesday in a new report.

Among the findings of the report, which is entitled "An Agenda for Action in the 1980s," were:

—School mathematics is not keeping pace with the changing needs dictated by developing technologies.

—Most students are not taking as much mathematics in high school as they will need for their immediate or distant future.

—The present shortage of qualified mathematics teachers in mathematics clasrooms is increasing dramatically. Many able ones prefer higher-paying jobs in industry.

"Policy makers are not confronting the most urgent problems because the public has been diverted by a fixation on test scores," said Shirley Hill, council president.

"School mathematics rapidly is approaching a crisis stage as a result."

Remedial actions recommended in the report timed for release as the council opened its annual meeting, included:

—Three years of mathematics in grades 9-12 should be required for all high school graudates. These would not be the same courses for all and schools would have an obligation to make available diversified programs suited to varying needs and ability.

—School mathematics programs should take full advantage of the power of calculators and computers at all grade levels.

—Teachers have an obligation to remain current by taking every opportunity for continuing education. A related obligation is that of the school districts to make these opportunities available.

—Computer literacy should be a part of the education of every student.

—School mathematics at all levels should be organized around the development of problem-solving ability.

—The definition of basic skills in math must be broadened to include more than minimal computational skill. Also basic are the skills of problem solving, estimation, applying mathematics to eveyday situations relating to spatial and geometric ideas, measuring, finding and working with data, and using tools such as calculators and computers.

—New demands should require that obsolete material be eliminated. Spending large amounts of time in practicing computation with large numbers — for example, 72,509 divided by 29.3 — is unproductive.

The mathematics teachers said they cannot solve the math crisis alone and challenged parents and the general public to join the professional educators in attacking the problem.

"The council is challenging all groups to confront this question: If you want today's students to learn the mathematics that will be advantageous to them as future citizens, what are you willing to do?," Hill said.

"It is becoming more and more difficult to attract people into our profession and more and more difficult to keep them when it is easy for mathematically knowledgeable people to find financially attractive jobs.

"Our recommendations are only a beginning. We pledge our organization's resources and energies to a concentrated effort.

"But we cannot solve these problems alone. They require cooperation, support and help from everyone. In a sense we are saying to the public and its representatives, the ball is not in your court."

The agenda for action is based on two years of study and analysis of information about school math programs. Principal recent sources included several National Science Foundation-funded studies of classroom practice and a major national test given by the National Assessment of Educational Progress.

In addition, the Council conducted an extensive survey of many groups. Included were teachers, school administrators, mathematicians, parents and school board members.

All were asked what should be done in school mathematics. Where will all the computers and calculators — recommended for all students — come from?

The council said schools should provide these in elementary and secondary education classrooms. But that's not all. The counil said schools should provide budgets sufficient for calculator and computer maintenance and replacement costs.

Expand EMass football playoffs

In the fall of 1980 there will be five Super Bowls in Eastern Massachusetts.

The Tournament Review Committee of the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association (MIAA) has endorsed the recommendations of the Football Tournament Committee, the Massachusetts High School Football Coaches Association, and the athletic directors of each league that will enable a fifth division to be formed.

In the past one of every 24 teams competed in the playoffs. Now one of every 19 will compete. Previously many outstanding teams, even some that were undefeated, were unable to make the playoffs. The change to five divisions also affords much better competition and balance within each division.

The alignment of leagues into divisions was based on present average enrollments, porjected enrollments, and past performance.

The change is in keeping with the MIAA philodophy on tournaments—to reward excellence and to present wholesome and worthwhile goals. The experience of teams that have competed in the playoffs has been most positive. The change will continue to keep football in proper perspective to the toal school program in nd athletics in particular.

The alignment of leagues and independents into divisions is as follows:

DIVISION I—Subruban 9, Greater Boston 8, Middlesex 10, Bay State 10.Tot. 37.

DIVISION II—Southeast Conference A 4, Merrimack 14, Catholic Conference 6, Northeast Conference 10, Independent (Boston Latin) 1. Tot. 35.

DIVISION III—Old Colony 9, Southeast Conference B 7, Dual County 9, Hockomock 9, Independent (Boston Tech) 1. Tot. 32.

DIVISION IV—Cape Ann 10, South Shore 9, Southeastern Conference C 9, Tri Valley 9, Catholic Central 8, Independent (Weston) 1. Tot. 46.

DIVISION V—Commonwealth Conference 6, Boston District 12, Mayflower 10, Catholic Suburban 8, Independent (Tyngsboro) 1. Tot. 37.

Guilty finding in check theft appealed

District Court Judge Stanley Jablonski Thursday Diana Ossinger guilty of 44 counts of larceny over $100. She was placed on five years probation, ordered to pay back the stolen funds and ordered to perform 15 hours of community service a week for two years.

The verdict will be appealed.

(Editor's Note: Because a continuing trial is difficult for a weekly newspaper to cover, following is a complete recap of testimony in the Ossigner trial that started last Tuesday and adjourned last Friday).

WEST NEWTON — Diana F. Ossinger, accused of stealing more than $24,000 worth of Mayor Theodore Mann's city payroll checks while serving as his personal secretary, testified in her own defense last Friday, saying she "never" cashed any of Mann's paychecks.

Testifying for more than an hour, under direct questioning by defense attorney Terry Segal and under cross examination by Assistant Dist. Atty. John Lawler, the 40-year-old West Newton woman appeared calm as she filled in the gaps in an oral resume provided by a series of character witnesses called by Segal earlier in the day.

Testifying on Ossigner's behalf were officials of the West Suburban Red Cross, who said she has done extensive work for that organization; Margaret Hale, assistant to the minister at Second Congregational Church in West Newton where Mrs. Ossinger is a member; and State Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci, who said Ossinger has worked on three of his political campaigns.

Segal said he called the character witnesses to demonstrate Mrs. Ossinger's character is "completely inconsistent with stealing the mayor's paychecks."

For each of the character witnesses called by Segal, Dist. Atty. Lawlor's cross examination was strikingly similar.

"Is it fair to say you've never seen (Ossinger) in a check cashing line at City Hall," he asked them.

The check cashing line Lawler referred to is where City Hall employees go every Thursday morning to cash or deposit city payroll checks in the city credit union.

It is alleged that Mann habitually asked Ossinger to deposit his check, but that on 44 occasions over the past four years she cashed the checks and kept the money.

During her testimony, Ossinger acknowledged she removed staff attendance records and appointment diaries from the mayor's office after being fired March 7, which Mann had testifed to Wednesday, but said that since she kept the records, she considered them her personal property.

She also confirmed earlier testimony of Police Det. Sgt. John R. Lawrence that she had told police she had thrown out quarterly statements depicting Mann's credit union account.

Lawrence quoted Ossinger Wednesday U as saying, "I probably put them with mine and thew them out with mine."

In Friday's testimony, Ossinger said that "on a couple of occasions I might have thrown them out with mine."

Mayor Mann testified Wednesday that it was his credit union statement for the quarter ending Dec. 31, 1979, that gave him the first indication someone might be tampering with his account.

Subsequent investigation showed intermittent paychecks had disappeared all the way back to 1976.

Mann said he did not notice the problem because he had enough income from outside business interests that he didn't need his mayoral paychecks to live from week to week.

Although she "never" cashed Mann's paychecks, Ossinger testified she did sometimes cash his expense checks, travel vouchers and personal checks.

She said she always returned to Mann from the teller's window at the city treasurer's office with the cash in a sealed envelope.

Mann testified Wednesday he always put the restrictive endorsement "for deposit only" on his paychecks with the intent they be placed in his credit union account.

It is alleged Mrs. Ossinger crossed out "for deposit only" on 58 of the checks and cashed them.

To this, Ossinger testified: "I never altered a check in my life."

The defense Friday also presented five other witnesses to show Ossinger as not at City Hall on several occasions when the mayor's paychecks were cashed.

One, Mrs. Ossinger's son, Donald, 19' testified she was out of the office taking him to a doctor's appointment on July 14, 1977, the date of one of the missing checks.

But under cross examination, DA Lawler pointed to earlier evidence that on several occasions' the mayor's paychecks were saved from week to week and that more than one was cashed on 14 occasions.

Much of the testimony Tuesday and Wednesday focused on what happens to the paychecks after being deposited or cashed at the treasurer's office.

Several witnesses said when tellers balance accounts after the check-cashing hour, the checks and remaining cash are transported to a local branch of BayBank Middlesex.

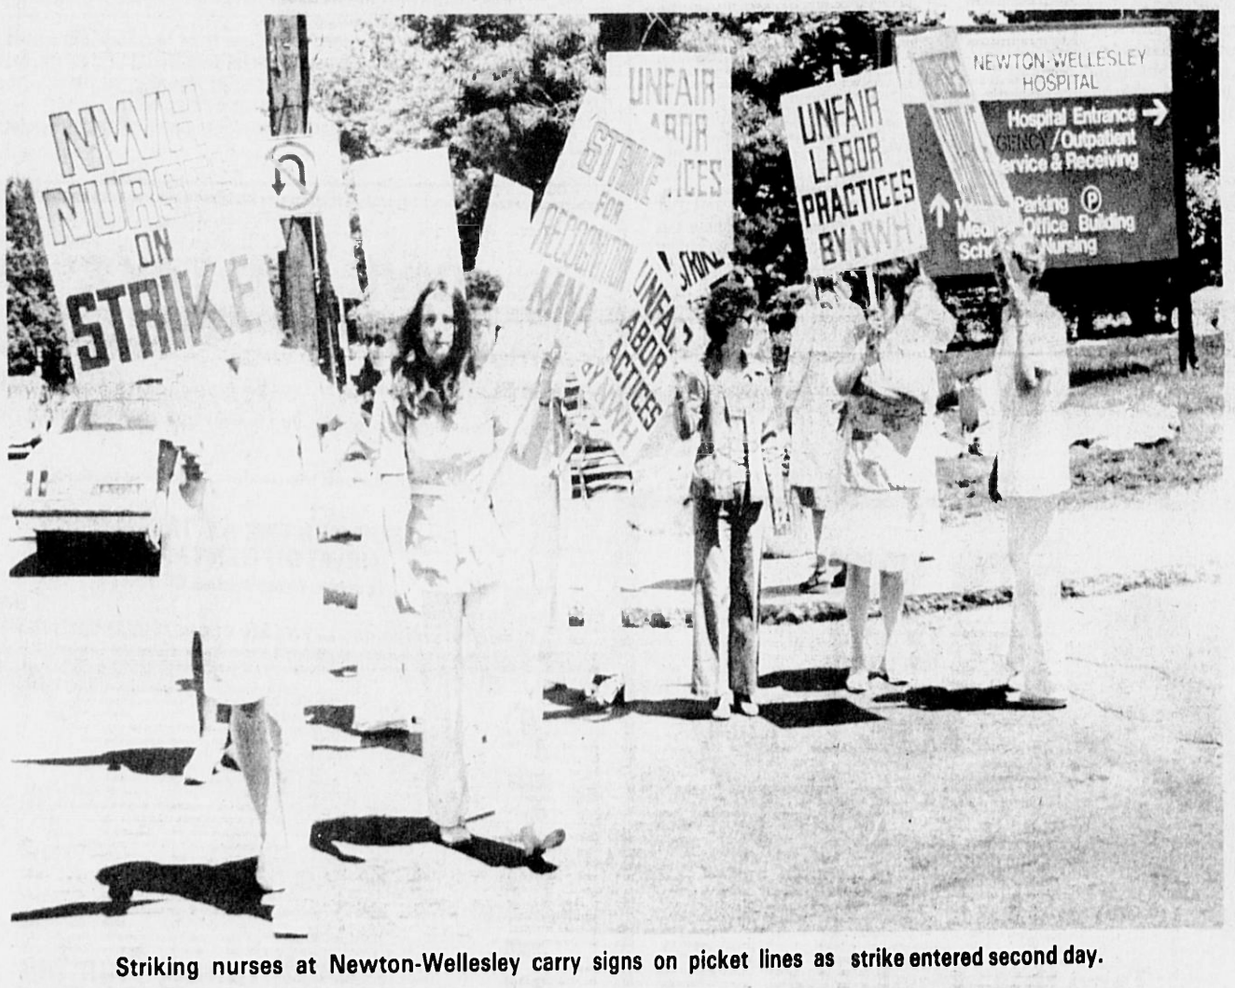

The bank's vice president, James Aspell, testified checks are given a five-digit number to indicate the order in which they are received for processing.

Under questioning by DA Lawler, Aspell said paychecks from Ossinger, Mann and Citizens Assistance Officer Richard Antonellis had been received

Innovative Newton Corner plan unveiled

NEWTON CORNER — A massive construction project that could change the face of Newton Corner's business district was unveiled for city officials last week and discussed by area residents Wednesday night.

Representatives of the Druker Co. of Boston described plans calling for the demolition of the Goren-Leeder properties and a parking garage at a cost of $29-$34 million.

The Druker plan includes construction of more than 300 units of elderly and mixed-income housing near the intersection of Washington and Centre streets.

The area involved is east of the theater on Washington Street going around the corner and involving both sides of the Centre Street .

Three of the proposed eight new buildings would be "mid-rise," 8-10 stories in height' one of which would be devoted to elderly tenants and a second to office space.

The proposal is still in preliminary stages, but as presented last week, the parking garage would hold between 350 and 500 vehicles and might include one or two underground parking levels.

Open space for parks has also been worked into preliminary plans. Purchase cost of the Goren-Leeder building is estimated at $1.2 million' and Druker Co. reportedly has an option agreement with Goren-Leeder Trust.

Community reaction Wednesday was generally favorable to the proposal.

Steve Gartrell' the Newton Planning Department's liaison with Newton Corner' said that outright opposition came from Goren-Leeder tenants who were concerned with relocation plans.

Sticker campaign in Newton for Mofenson's house seat

By CYNTHIA BLACK
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Voters in the 12th Middlesex state representative district are going to have a chance to find out just how smart they are this September.

In the district currently served by State Representative David J. Mofenson no names will appear on the Republican or Democratic ballots in the primary; the whole nomination process will be accomplished via sticker voting.

And it appears voters will have four Democrats and two Republicans to choose among.

The unique election is the result of the withdrawl of Mofenson, now running for Congress, from the race.

Mofenson is running for the seat being vacated by Congressman Robert Drinan, but prior to the surprise Drinan withdrawl from politics, he had nomination papers for another term as a state representative.

Since no one had an inkling that Drinan fenson step in, the deadline for getting would bow out and Mo nomination papers to run against incumbent Mofenson passed without a challenger to his candidacy.

The switch to a bid for Congress left Rep. Mofenson with two options. He could file his nomination papers' withdraw from the race and allow the ward committees in his district to designate a replacement on the Democratic ballot, or he could fail to file his nomination papers, create a vacancy, and allow anyone in the district to seek the nomination.

He chose the latter option Tuesday.

That set the stage for six aldermen to give serious thought to mounting sticker campaigns for the party nominations in September.

They are Democrats Susan Schur' Cynthia Creem, Richard McGrath and Paul Daley and Republicans Robert Tennant and Robert Katz.

The 12th Middlesex District curves down the western border of Newton from Auburndale to Oak Hill, including Newton Lower Falls, Newton Highlands and Newton Upper Falls. It has one arm reaching out to take in West Newton Hill and one precinct of Newtonville.

According to Alan Licarie, executive secretary of the Newton Election Commission, the sticker candidates need 150 bona fide votes to be nominated. Since only one in each party will triumph, after the 150 mark the candidate with the highest vote total would win.

It means the voters must learn where to place their candidate's sticker on the voting machine and makes the election a toss-up since no one really knows how many votes each candidate will get or how many will be needed to win.

Voters can also write in a candidate's name' but that, too' must be in the proper spot on the voting machine and include the candidate's address in order to count as a legal vote.

The four Democratic candidates are scattered across the district.

Richard McGrath, who served one term as a state representative before losing to current State Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci, has been redistricted into another district since his last bid for the State House.

Although he did not confirm that he is definitely running, he said Wednesday that the vacancy "makes it very tempting for me to run."

McGrath said he intends to analyze the field and make a decision within a week on whether or not to make it definite. . State

"I would enjoy going back to the House to finish some of the projects I started, " Ald. McGrath said. "And I would not be a 'yes man' for the leadership."

Ald. Susan Schur's candidacy is definite. The four-term Waban alderman points out that she would be able to devote full-time to duties in the legislature and said she feels that is the type of representation Newton residents prefer.

DeNucci unopposed

NEWTON — Incumbent State Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci, whose district includes the north side of Newton and southside wards of Waltham, will run unopposed for reelection in November.

DeNucci' a Democrat' represents the 10th Middlesex District.

"I'm not surprised I have no opposition," he said Wednesday. "I worked very hard, and I think people in my district recognize that.

"I consider this an overwhelming approval of my work in office," he said.

Incumbent State Rep. David Cohen, a Democrat, will be opposed by Republican Robert Spain in the 11th Middlesex District.

White welcomes suit over county taxes

NEWTON—Alderman Mark White welcomes Middlesex County's court action against Newton city officials to obtain $1.9 million in assessments.

"This suit gives us the opportunity to examine county government and expose it for what it is, a parasite that feeds off the taxpayers of this city," White said Monday.

The county hopes to recover the amount of the overdue assessments, eight percent interest per annum and the amount of money the city has earned by investing the delinquent payments, perhaps an additioal six percent.

Dist. Atty. John Droney has sued the Board of Aldermen, City Treasurer Theodore Scafidi and Comptroller Lawrence Marino. The district attorney is representing County Treasurer Rocco J. Antonelli in the name of the county.

Alderman White, chairman of the ad hoc committee on Middlesex County, said the city withheld the money "out of a deep frustration that we had no say and were not entitled to any information about the funds we pay to Middlesex County."

The city withheld the first assessment more than a year ago, White said, after the committee questioned yearly upgrades for commissioners assistants, "non-existent departments run by high-salaried department heads," duplication of services provided by state agencies, and "needless positions."

County commissioners wouldn't answer questions and blamed the state legislature, White said. During a meeting with the Legislature's Committee on Counties, White contends aldermen were insulted. According to White, Committee Chairman Rep. Charles Flaherty said "if I had to listen to every political hack that came in here, I'd never get any work done."

After the unsatisfactory meetings, the city requested documents the county commissioners are obligated by law to provide. "These reports are to be detailed and specific and are supposed to give all communities some idea of where their assessment is going," White said.

White charged the county has not provided those reprots to communities for five years and that the reports given to the city after repeated requests are incomplete and "a rush job.

"The time has come for all communities to say we have a right to know where our money is going. We have a right to a fair distribution of services and we have a right to expect economy in government rather than a patronage system s resulting in excess jobs," White said.

"We intend to fight the request for the eight percent interest charges and especially fight the request for the excess money we have made have made by investing the money at a high rate.

"The legislature passed a law that said eight percent interest, and in order to charge anymore the legislature would have to pass another law. The D.A.'s office knows this and the request in this complaint is nothing more than harrassment of this board," White charged.

in sequence on several occasions, indicating they had been cashed toghether.

But under cross examination by Atty. Segal, Aspell acknowledged that on several occasions' checks bearing the same date and the city treasurer's stamp were not filed in sequence by the bank, indicating the principle of sequential processing was not fully consistent.

Mann, Det. Lawrence, Assistant City Treasurer George Stiglich testified at length about the sequence of events that launched the investigation. The following timetable was culled from their testimony.

..Wednesday, Jan. 30: Mann received a quarterly statement ending Dec. 31, 1979, from the city credit union. He said he had deposited three out of four of his December paychecks in the credit union, but the statement showed "no activity" for the month. Mann mentioned the discrepancy to Ossinger, Stiglich and credit union President Gloria Doherty.

..Thursday, Jan. 31: Stiglich met with Mann in the mayor's office. He brought with him two of the mayor's December paychecks with the restrictive endorsement "for deposit only" crossed out and the treasurer's office stamp indicating they had been cashed.

"I didn't recall having crossed out the restrictive endorsement," Mann said. He asked Stiglich to "go back a few years" in the credit union records to "see if this kind of thing had been happening before."

..Friday, Feb. 1: Stiglich and City Treasurer Theodore Scafidi conducted an internal investigation among staff members in the treasurer's office. The results of that probe were not disclosed at the trial.

Early in the afternoon, Stiglich and Mann met in the treasurer's office. Stiglich told Mann a check of credit union records showed more than $20,000 unaccounted for since 1976.

At about 5:10 p.m., Ossinger listened in on a phone conversation about the matter between Mann and Stiglich. Ossinger recommended the police be contacted. Stiglich was hesitant.

..Saturday, Feb. 2: At a 10 a.m. meeting, Mann met with Police Chief William Quinn and a police investigation began.

..Tuesday, Feb. 5: Stiglich and the mayor met in the treasurer's office at about 5 p.m. While they were there, Ossinger phoned and asked Stiglich: "Will, what the hell is going on down there?"

At 6 p.m., Det. Lawrence said Ossinger arrived at police headquarters.

"She was upset; visibly shaken. Her eyes were watery, a bit puffy."

After a brief discussion' during which Mrs. Ossinger denied the allegations against her, she was read her Miranda rights at 6:02 p.m.

N-W accepts patients

NEWTON — Striking nurses today began their third day on the picket lines outside Newton-Wellesley Hospital in an attempt to have the Massachusetts Nursing Association recognized as their bargaining agent.

A police spokesman said there were "no incidents" at the hospital Thursday, in contrast to Wednesday when picketers attempted to stop cars from entering hospital grounds. Several shoving incidents were reported and one policeman was slightly injured when he was pushed into a moving car.

On the early morning shift Thursday, 26 of 48 regularly scheduled nurses showed up for work, hospital spokesman Richard Montalbano said. The normal complement of 48 was filled by supervisory personnel or specially hired workers.

"On the day shift we had 54 out of 111," he said, and on the night shift 28 out of 43 nurses showed up.

"At the moment we're not talking" with the striking nurses, Montalbano said. "We made our offers last week and they were rejected. We feel the ball is in their court."

He said the hospital has again begun accepting admissions on a limited basis. It now has 105 patients toward its planned 120-patient goal.

About 125 of the hospital's 465 nurses went on strike Wednesday and set up picket lines outside the hospital's five entrances to convince hospital administrators to recognize the MNA.

Nurses voted for MNA representation Feb. 28, but the National Labor Relations Board impounded the ballots when the hospital appealed the vote.

The hospital claims if the MNA is approved, registered nurses will have their own bargaining unit instead of being classified with all health care professionals in collective bargaining.

Some emergency patients have been transferred to other area hospitals and medical-surgical, psychiatric and obstetrical units were operating on a limited basis.

Montalbano said early today the hospital was still counting how many nurses reported to the shift beginning at 7:30 a.m.

He said the emergency room is fully staffed and is accepting patients "on a case-by-case basis."

acknowledges his responsiblity for relocating the residential tenants on the site, including interim housing when the buildings would be torn down.

While the developer is not obligated to relocate business tenants, Gartrell said he indicated a willingness to work with the businesses on relocation plans.

Gartrell said there were some neighborhood questions about the density of the project.

The Druker proposal involves an area of Newton Corner that is considered blighted and in need of improvement.

Newton Corner Ald. Robert Gaynor, who attended both meetings' said he thinks the Druker proposal is "one of the best I've ever seen for dealing with Newton Corner."

"I think everyone will be able to enjoy it," he said' noting that Newton Corner is the "gateway" to Newton' a heavily traveled area for commuters.

Druker hopes to win all necessary approvals by September, break ground in 14 months' and complete the project 18-24 months later' according to those at the meeting. Construction would go on on both sides of Centre Street' and would involve both private financing and federal housing funds.

Payoffs scared off firm

BOSTON (UPI) — A New York engineer says a prominent management firm abandoned a joint venture bid on the University of Massachusetts project with McKee-Berger-Mansueto when MBM officials said they would have to make as much as $150,000 in payoffs to get the contract.

The charge was made by Stanley Davis, a former employee of Seelye, Stevenson, Value and Knecht and, from mid-1970 to mid-1971, MBM.

Davis told the Special Commission Concerning State and County Building Contracts Thursday he left MBM after a policy disagreement with firm officials that included disputes over double billings — a practice whereby MBM altered time sheets of New York personnel to indicate falsely that they had worked on the UMass-Boston project.

Davis said that about the time he left MBM in early 1971, he became aware that former Sen. Joseph C. DiCarlo and former Rep. Ralph Sirianni, D-Winthrop, were going to head a special legislative committee investigating MBM's UMass contract, a contract which eventually paid the firm $5.5 million.

He said he came to Boston and met with DiCarlo for two or three hours in an attic room of the Statehouse beneath the historic Golden Dome and, there, the two discussed the contract.

DiCarlo told him, Davis said, "he was going to seriously investigate MBM ... and do his best to overturn the contract."

Picnic in Auburndale celebrates state rivers

AUBURNDALE — This year the Charles River Watershed Association will observe the statewide Massachusetts Rivers Celebration with a picnic at Newton's Auburndale Park on Saturday, May 31' from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Members and families, as well as friends of the Charles River generally, are invited to pack a lunch and celebrate the Charles at one of the loveliest municipal parks along the River. There are no fees and almost no scheduled events — just a chance for those who support Charles River reclamation to share the pleasures of the river environment.

Naturalists from CRWA's Board of Directors will conduct nature tours of the area throughout the day. Allan Beale of Westwood will guide the land-based walking tours and Bruce Lund of South Natick will guide canoeists through the lakes district.

Birders may see the resident osprey. Fishing is excellent and some picnickers may want to try catching their lunch and cooking it on one of the six grills reserved for CRWA.

Tennis, baseball (soft ball is not permitted on the baseball field), and children's play equipment are available.

The park features a Life Course exercise trail. CRWA will have four canoes available for member use' contributed for the day by the Charles River Canoe Service.

This is the second year that Massachusetts river people will be joining Senator Paul Tsongas' efforts to promote our rivers as community assets. River events will be held around the state on the May 31 - June 1 weekend.

Last year CRWA sponsored a Charles River swim to demonstrate the improvement in the water quality of the Charles. This year's picnic will underscore some of the easy recreational opportunities provided by public parks along the Charles which bring the river to the people and the people to the river.

CRWA coordinates public and private actions to create a Charles River Corridor of shoreline conservation and recreation along the 80-mile river from Hopkinton to Boston.

Auburndale Park is a city park whose facilities will be available for CRWA by permit from the Newton Recreation Commission. It is approached from Commonwealth Avenue (Rte. 30) via Melrose Street, a half-mile east of the junction of Rtes. 30, 128, and 90. Take Melrose Street north three blocks to a left turn onto West Pine Street. Parking is at the end of West Pine.

Ware's Cove which abuts the Park is accessible by canoe; parking for canoeists is best at the Duck Feeding Area across the cove from CRWA.

Canoes can be rented 527-9885. Reservations before the weekend are recommended.

Newton man innocent of raping south senior

CAMBRIDGE — A Middlesex County jury last week found a 26-year-old Newton man innocent of attempted rape.

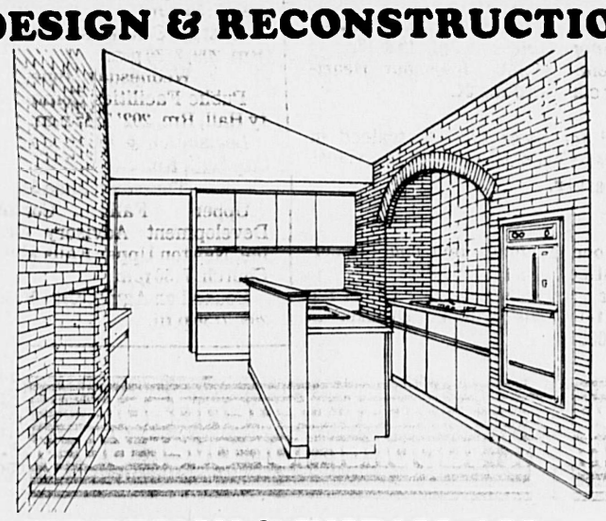

Bruce Jewett, 26, of Newton Corner, was charged with the attempted rape of a Newton South High senior on Oct. 24, 1979.

The jury also found him innocent of charges of assault with a dangerous weapon stemming from the same inident.

The Newton South senior identified Jewett as her assailant during the trial, but an MCI-Bridgewater psychiatrist testified that Jewett could not have been in Newton Centre at the time of the alleged attack because Jewett was with him for an appointment in Bridgewater.

The defendant still faces a second charge of rape involving an Auburndale woman.

Water Dept. revenue set for increase

NEWTON—A change from a flat fee to a sliding scale of water rates won preliminary approval Wednesday.

The increases proposed by Water Commissioner Vernon Porter will generate an additional $650,000 to $700,000 receipts for the department.

Single-family homeowners may not see a difference in the bill although heavy users will face a 50 percent increse in the cost of water in excess of 8,000 cubic feet.

The Public Facilitis Committee endorsed the increase Wednesday after modifying Porter's proposal to maintain the existing rate for the small water user.

Currently the city charges 50 cents per 100 cubic feet of water used, regardless of the amount of water that flows through the meter

Porter's proposal would keep the rate at 50 cents per 100 cubic feet for the first 4,000 cubic feet used. The rate would increase to 65 cents for the second 4,0000 cubic feet then would increase to 75 cents for consumption in excess of 8,000 cubic feet.

According to Porter, about 75 percent of consumers in the city require no more than 8,000 cubic feet.

Porter had originally proposed a two-step increse, 65 cents per cubic 100 cubic feet for the first 8,000 cubic feet and 75 cents for the addtioanl consumption.

Several members of the committee argued the fee scheduale should be skewed so the large water user paid more for the service.

Aldermean Paul Coletti said the schedule approved by the committee means the single-family homeowner and the owner-occupant of a two family house who both use about 4,000 cubic feet in six months will not see an increase in the six-month water bill.

The Water Department will use the increase revenue to cover fringe benefits and cost of services provided by other city departments. The increase rates will shift the cost of those items from the taxpayer to the water user.

Chief Executive Officr James Hickey assured the committee the anticipated increase in revenue will be considered by assessors when setting next year's tax rate. The increased revenue represents about $2 on the tax rate.

Girl Scout Cadet Kimberly Baldi of Newton works on a "noise survey" taken in West Newton Square this month, which was designed "Noise Month" by the Intercommunity Noise Program of Newton and Brookline. Girl Scout Troop No. 537 members surveyed area residents about noise problems in neighborhoods.

Route 9 study delays vote on church

NEWTON—An unexpected traffic study was the reason given Tuesday for delaying a vote on a plan to construct a church near the intersection of Boylston St. and Dudley Road.

The Land Use Committee postponed discussion after learning the Planning Department is studying the possiblilty of Boylston St. (Route 9) acess.

The Church Society of St. John of Damascus hopes to construct a church and assembly hall for 400 persons, 114 parking spaces and will use an existing building at 47 Dudley Rd. for administrative offices and Sunday School.

Most of the 4.2 acre a site is in a single family residence district. According to the Planning Dept., 37.5 percent of the land area would be covered by buildings or parking.

Dudley Road is estremely narrow and has been designated a "scenic road." The Planning and Development Board favors the Boylston Street access as do several members of the Aldemanic Land Use Committee.

Atty. Peter Harrington, representing the church, said the approach from Boylston Stteet is impossible. The land is characterized by dense tree growth, ledge outcroppings and steep grades.

Harrington said a ramp and a roadway to route 9 could cost $200,000 and he questioned whether that is a reasonbable conditions to impose on the project. He also questioned whether aldermen can eliminate exisiting curb cuts on Dudley road.

By law the board of aldermen cannot reject a site plan for a religious use but can impose "reasonable" restrictions on the use.

Gala open for senior center

UPPER FALLS — Newton Community Schools celebrating the start of a new senior citizens program in Newton Upper Falls.

Featured at the celebration was a performance by students from the New England Conservatory of Music, as well as greetings from Mayor Theodore Mann, Newton State Rep. David Mofenson, and Community Schools Director William Slotnik.

The open house is the first of the new "senior activity series," which will be held on Wednesdays between 10 a.m. and noon.

Upcoming series events include: "Questions and Answers on Senior Services" on June 4 with staff from West Suburban Elder Services; a group sing-along on June 11; a trip to Old Sturbridge Village on June 18; and "A Trip to China," a slide show and travelogue with John Barwicky, bassist for the Boston Symphony on June 25.

All events are open to the public. People who do not live in Upper Falls must pay a $2 charge for transportation to Sturbridge Village if they wish to go. Reservations for the trip will be taken at the open house.

The new "activity series" is the result of a recent block grant from Community Development.

Cathy Becker, coordinator of the community center said, "The community is overjoyed that Upper Falls seniors finally are receiving the services they so greatly need and deserve."

Refreshments will be available at all series events. The center is located at the corner of High and Pettee streets.

Nursery school wins conditioned approval

NEWTON—The Aldermanic Land Use Committee Tuesday supported a plan for a Centre Street nursery school after the city solicitor ruled the plan cannot be rejected.

The committee did attach a number o conditions to the request from The Preschool Experience for site plan approval for a nursery school at 1091 Centre St.

In several opinions in recent years, the solicitor's office has interpreted state law to mean a request for site plan approval from a religious or educational group cannot be denied.

Some members of the committee feel it is a hazard to drop children at the school on busy Centre or Homer Sts. The only other possibility, Ferber Lane, is objectioable to neighbors.

The committee asked City Solicitor Daniel Funk if a site plan can be denied because of unresolved safety problems that are inherent to the site.

The opinions of the city solititor are not made public, but Asst. Solicitor Michael Pierce said educational and religious uses are exempt from zoning requirements.

The most recent cases suggest a religious or educational use is the equivalent to a use allowed in a zoning district by right, Pierce said.

Committee approval is conditional on the school meeting all state licensing requirements. Access will be from Homer Street. The school will be required to prove there is offstreet parking for employees and will be allowed an enrollment of no more than 39 students.

Other conditions prohibit school related parking on Ferber Lane, a fenced play area and limited hours of operation.

Fix asbestos rather than wait

NEWTON—The $23,000 request for a study of the asbestos covering of pipes in public buildings was rejected by the Public Facilities Committee Wednesday.

The "lagging" covering pipes has a high asbestos content Building Commissioner Allan B. Fraser said.

He requested the funding at the urging of the city's Health Department so Dr. Charles Spooner could determine if there is a danger and recommend corrective action.

Dr. Spooner tested Newton North High School last year and recommended the removal of material containing asbestos from several sections of the building.

Aldermen on the committee suggested Fraser survey city buildings himself for damaged insulation on pipes and make repairs where necesssary with a non-asbestos covering.

The committee will also request a letter from the Health Department outlining its concerns.

Fraser said schools would be a priority for the replacement of asbestos pipe insulation because that is where the coverings are most likely to be damaged through vandalism or inadvertant abuse.

He said most of the 61 municipal buildings with heating plants may contain pipe lagging with asbestos. Fraser will return to the committee with an estimate on the cost of replacing damaged sections of lagging.

Fraser said it may be possible to finance the replacement using some of the $800,000 approved by the Board of Aldermen for removal of asbestos at Newton North High School this summer.

The city has signed a contract with Seagull Environmental Co. of Dayton, Ohio, for the first phase of abestos removal at the school.

The bid price of $203,331 was well below the $800,000 earmarked for the job. Fraser said Wednesday the state may reimburse almost the entire cost of the project.

Several aldermen said they were reluctant to authorize a study of the pipe lagging when corrective action has not been ordered by any agency.

Mental health study needed

Light at the end of the dark tunnel iN which state mental health problems have been heretofore examined can be seen. Two senators are striving to obtain funding for special commission study.

Sen. John G. King (D-Danvers) wants a full scrutiny of the deinstitutionalization process. Sen. Jack H. Backman (D-Brookline) wants a much broader probe of all State Mental Health Department programs.

Without doubt, the result will be for the more extensive inquiry Backman seeks. The man with the most fiscal muscle in the Senate, Ways and Means ChairmanChester Atkins (D-Concord) gave the signal a few weeks ago in a talk to professionals in the field.

Deinstitutionalization is the transfer of mental patients to community-based facilities a program authorized ' away back in 1965. As a result, the state hospital population which once exceeded 25,000 is now reported to be at 2,500. There is merit here, both in cost and patient benefit.

Two large ifs are involved, however. One is the adequacy of community facilities being used and staff capability. The other has to do with the chronic care mental patients who simply aren't able to make an adjustment to any kind of quasi-public environment.

It is important these questions be addressed. Atkins, King and Backman get our support on a study to put the issues in perspective.

More patience

Real estate and banking interests were rubbing hands in anticipation of a resurgence of the housing market over the past two weeks as the prime rate began its descent and mortgage interest fOllowed.

If you are among the young couples who have been waiting patiently for a break in the market to realize the home ownership dream, the outlook isn't that great just yet. Where encouragement exists is in the awareness the high rate express has been checked and its direction reversed.

While larger banks were quick to send the mortgage interest rates down, smaller institutions out in the suburbs were forced to proceed cautiously because of the amount of deposits shifted to money market certificates.

Yields of these are slipping, a sign that the deposit picture may brighten in the months ahead to make mortgage lending resources more adequate. For the young couple now priced out of the market, at adds up to a need for just a bit more patience.

Perspectives

A cavalier attitude among pols

Commentary
by Loring Swaim

BOSTON — Politicians at almost every level in Massachusetts are moving inexorably towards a showdown with their conscience. The litmus paper testing most everyone's mettle these days is those tough reform recommendations of the Ward corruption commission aimed at putting an end to the kind of wrongdoing lately coming to light after two years of investigation. No question' the commission is putting a lot of sensitive feet to the fire. Specifically it is recommending: 1) establishing a supercop on political corruption in the shape of an Inspector General armed with the latest tools of the investigative trade; 2) tightening the procedures for awarding lucrative construction contracts in the future; 3) strengthening campaign finance laws to discourage money-hungry politicians from putting the squeeze on these sources of big bucks. To make their case, the commission is unravelling skeins of corruption over the last l5 years. In almost daily hearings, testimony from witnesses backed by exhibits has told a depressing story of wrongdoing rampant on a field of good intentions. On Tuesday begins a new chapter' the unabridged story of MBM, the New York construction management firm whose illegal "contributions" to Massachusetts pols since 1960 have rocked the Commonwealth and triggered the current commissions' probes and recommendations. In June comes the tales of Richard Thissen and his design firm of Desmond and Lord, if indeed, he and other key figures can be located and summonsed to testify, including Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight.

The legislature and the administration of Gov. King have thus been handed a hot potato — what to do about all this corruption. The response has been a cacophony of righteous indignatiOn, breastbeating about integrity ' finger-pointing, namecalling and motive-questioning, much of it phoney.

In the mind of many, the action of the legislature on the Inspector General bill and on the request to extend the life of the commission is becoming a measure of whether corruption in the Commonwealth is to continue or whether a serious and responsible effort to play things straight will characterize Massachusetts.

There has even developed among some political figures a cavalier attitude that, look, this preoccupation with illegal cash will blow over, everyone is wearying of the repetitive tales of bribery and payoffs and we can survive if we obfuscate the issues and ride out the storm.

Unfortunately these observations are being confused with the views of more responsible politicians who genuinely wonder whether an Inspector General will be any more courageous than the Attorney General or district attorneys we now have. Should the tougher route be taken, one hears it asked, of dusting off our existing safeguards, banging some heads together and either sending wrongdoers to jail or voting them out of office?

One of the most colorful advocates of this reasoning is Bill Masiello who testified last week to every imaginable effort over a dozen years to use the "system" to his advantage and profit. It's not the system, but the people in the system who need change, he now argues. Coming from him, it is gaining wider acceptance and intensifying the dialogue over which way to go — adopt the reforms as written, modify them or build a fire under the existing apparatus.

There are also of course those opportunistic tuttutting souls endeavoring to posture as white knights at the head of the parade of righteousness and ride it all into higher office — as well as those whose reputations for corruptionfighting might by jeopardized if the reforms get sidetracked or watered down.

There is also the customary stone-throwing from the sidelines by people in glass houses' some of them in the media.

The showdown is approaching. The dialogue over reform is heating up and emerging from a wild rhetoric of past weeks to sombre consideration of what tools are necessary, what figures are trustworthy and how to protect even well-meaning dogooders from the potential for abuse.

Meanwhile one hears it increasingly said that the potentional disclosures of these past nine weeks dealt with actions and events of another era, most of which are beyond the statutes of limitations. What of TODAY'S wrongdoing? — the fundraising, the contract-awarding' the wining and dining of decision-makers, the Influence of cash, the favors for friends, the patronage jobs in government?

It is too soon to say which side will prevail in this Impending showdown — the black hats or the white hats.

Vice-presidential chitchat

Commentary
by William F. Buckley,Jr.

A recent conversation with three experienced political analysts, all of them conservative, focused on the question of Mr. Reagan's running mate. Paul Weyrich, the bright young president of the National Committee for a free Congress, has a bizarre suggestion, verging on quaintness. It is that Mr. Reagan should select a conservative Democrat.

Not only could such a move catalyze that geological shift in party affiliation which has been overdue ever since George Wallace missed the historic opportunity to cross the aisle on the day that George McGovern was nominated President, Weyrich adds that only if Reagan's running mate were perceived as more dangerous to liberal Democrats than Reagan — only then would a Democratic congress and Democratic courts behave themselves. The thesis being that a disabled Reagan, yielding power to a conservative Democratic vice president, would bring on the convulsive end to liberal domination of the Democratic Party. All very interesting, and worth ruminating on: on the other hand, it's not going to happen.

J. Daniel Mahoney founded the Conservative Party of New York 20 years ago, which in any election reasonably close has, with New York's massive 41 electoral votes, the balance of power. The Conservative Party of New York intends to back Ronald Reagan even if he chooses Bella Abzug as his running mate: a prudent decision, in my view, since angelism is not the proper pursuit of political parties.

On the other hand there is yet another political party in New York, the Pro-life party, and it is a single-issue party. This is not the time to discuss the question of single-issue voting (I tend to oppose it); but time to acknowledge that just as in the past some people voted with exclusive reference to how a presidential contender stood on the abolition of slavery, or the prohibition of alcohol, or on full civil rights for blacks, some entirely honorable people are standing by to vote with primary reference to how a political contender stands on the issue of abortion. Mrs. McCormack, it is supposed, would stand still for George Bush as vice presidential candidate. But not for Howard Baker. What is the difference in their positions on abortion?

Howard Baker personally opposes abortion (Mahoney points out that everyone running for president personally opposes abortion). On the other hand, Senator Baker has voted every time to make federal funds available for abortions, i.e., in opposition to the Hyde Amendment. And he opposes a Constitutional amendment banning abortion.

George Bush also opposes a Constitutional amendment banning abortion. However, a single word, casting the sentence into the subjunctive mood, leaves Mrs. McCormack dissatisfied. What George Bush said on the subject of consitituional amendments was, "I think issues of this nature ought to be decided by the people closer to home, rather than the federal government; therefore, I could support a constitutional amendment to give the states authority to regulate abortions within these boundaries." Could support. Would support? It is likely that in the very near future Mr. Bush will be asked to coax the word from conditional to declarative. If he's reluctant to do this, he might simply say that the president's position on the matter would bind the vice president's. To satisfy Mrs. McCormack is not a frivolous political ambition. A projection based on her vote running for lieutenant-governor in 1978 (130,000 votes) means that Mrs. McCormack might tip the election in New York.

How much emphasis should Reagan put on the conciliatory gesture? The seasoned political pro Patrick buchanan agreed that such a gesture was important provided it didn't go so far as alienate conservatives. George Bush would appear to be the logical choice here: after all, he was the runner-up in the campaign. Another man who would qualify as validating the ecumenical spirit is Gerald Ford. Would he accept? The conventional wisdom is: No. My own feeling is: yes, he would accept. The panelists agreed that if the convention were left entirely to its own devices, it would very likely come up with — Richard Lugar, senator from Indiana, Rhodes scholar, rhetorical moderate, conservative practitioner; well-liked, well-respected, unconditionally opposed to abortion. Worth thinking about.

Capitol Hill Highlights

Defense spending hike challenged

By ROBERT DRINAN

WASHINGTON, D.C. — House-Senate conferees have approved the 1981 budget — the first balanced budget in 12 years. However, this compromise budget may run into serious trouble on the house floor this week because of the conferees' decision to give in to Senate demands for massive defense spending increases.

The earlier House-passed budget frugal enough in the area of social services, but the Senate version called for even more sacrifice on the part of the poor' the elderly, and working people. The budget proposal which will come before the House this week contains an incredible $153.7 billion for the . Pentagon, which represents an $18 billion increase over current funding.

This increase in defense spending was funded through further cuts in fuel assistance subsidies, food job programs, education, and subsidized housing for needy stamps' Americans.

Many members of the House will be planning together this week to stop this budget, and to work instead for a balanced budget that will spread the burden more equitably throughout our society.

Age Discrimination

Congressman Claude Pepper (D-Fla.) and I will jointly introduce a resolution this coming week calling upon the American Bar Association and the Department of Justice to abandon the indefensible policy of age discrimination in the selection of federal judges.

As it now stands people over 60 are systematically passed over for federal judgeships. This policy continues despite the fact that Supreme Court Justice Holmes was appointed at age 60 and served with distinction until age 91. Justice Black served until 83, Justice Harlan until 72, and Justice Douglas until age 77.

In the recent past there have been several apparent victims of this discriminatory policy, including Archibald Cox, a candidate for a seat on the U.S. Courts of Appeals. Professor Cox, who I am pleased to say is a constituent of mine, was cited as the first choice for this appointment. Both the Boston Globe and the New York Times repeatedly cited age as the reason Professor Cox was passed over.

Congressman Pepper and I hope that our resolution, to be offered as an amendment to the Department of Justice Authorization for fiscal 1981, will force the ABA and the Justice Department to abandon this outdated and discriminatory policy.

Terrorism

I recently joined in a congressional effort to stop the Carter Administration's apparent decision to sell $11.2 million worth of gas turbine engines to power four modern missile-carrying ships being built in Italy for the Iraq navy.

Iraq has repeatedly been identified as a supporter of international terrorism. Only last month the Iraqi-backed faction of the PLO attacked a children's nursery in Israel, where three civilians were killed and 16 wounded.

In a letter to President Carter, I and a number of other members of Congress have asked that the sale of these engines be blocked, in accordance with provisions of the Export Administration Act.

The issue at stake is whether or not the United States will maintain a consistent posture of opposing international terrorism. We cannot afford to acquiesce to Iraq's support for international terrorism by allowing the sale of equipment intended directly for military purposes.

Consumer Alert

With food prices skyrocketing, its helpful to know what food products are a good buy. The May 1980 edition of the National Consumer Buying Alert can help.

Published by the White House Consumer Office, it also suggest ways to get the full value from prescription drugs, some home maintenance tips, and instructions on how to read those new litre gasoline pumps.

For a free copy of the Buying Alert, send a post card with your name and address to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 624 H, Pueblo, Colorado 81109.

Oil price gains defy market glut

by Thomas Friedman

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — When the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries holds its bi-annual summit in Algiers on June 9, there will be much solemn talk about the urgent need to "reunify" prices, as if this were a cure-all for the world's oil market chaos.

Actually, there is no reason to believe a reunification of OPEC prices would provide any lasting stability for the rough-and-tumble international oil market. Even if it did, it would hit consumers.

This assessment emerged from interviews with two leading oil economists, Dr. Robert Mabro of Oxford University and Dr. Marwan Iskandar, director of the Beirut-based Middle East Economic Consultants.

Ever since the revolution in Iran caused the withdrawal of 5 million barrels per day of Iranian production from the market and sent OPEC prices skyrocketing, the 13-nation cartel has drifted away from its single price system, opting instead for an every-country-for-itself arrangement.

Today OPEC prices vary widely from a low of $28 per barrel for Saudi light to a high of $38.21 for top-grade Algerian crude. But things could be worse if OPEC moderates, led by Saudi Arabia, compromised on prices with the radicals led by Algeria.

"Just do the arithmetic," said Mabro. "When OPEC prices were unified, the differential between Saudi Arabia and Algeria — taking into consideration quality and shipping costs — was $3 per barrel. Now it's $10 and the Algerians see no reason to come down for the sake of unity.

"Even if the Algerians dropped prices by $1, consumers would save only $1 million daily since Algeria produces only 1 million barrels per day."

But since it is the Saudis who appear most anxious to have their oil restored as OPEC's unified market price, they are going to have to do the real compromising, Mabro noted.

"Keeping in mind that the differential between Saudi and Algerian prices should be $3 per barrel," he said, "the Saudis would have to come up to $34. That's an increase of $6 per barrel on 9.5 million barrels per day, or an extra $57 million daily in oil payments."

At such cost, the world can ill afford OPEC price unity. In Algiers, said Iskandar, the Saudis probably will offer a less attractive compromise: an increase of $3 per barrel and a cut in production, but even they are not optimistic this will be enough to entice the price hawks to hold down their rates.

"The only OPEC countries really interested in price unity today are those who have chosen for political reasons to keep prices down," said Mabro.

The Saudis, Iraqis and lower Gulf states know they could get more for their oil in the present market but have chosen to price their crude at levels that, will not seriously disrupt developing and industrialized economies.

"But it is embarrassing for the Saudis to have a spread of $10 between themselves and the Algerians when it should only be $3," said Mabro.

It was largely to escape the accusation that they were giving the oil companies a bargain that the Saudis recently upped their rates $2 per barrel, Iskandar said.

Although the Saudis described the increase as "a step toward reunification of OPEC prices," their action only encouraged the other OPEC producers to leapfrog ahead $2 as well.

The Saudi strategy failed to narrow OPEC's price gap, the analysts said, because it was based on the mistaken premise that OPEC rates were near their ceiling.

Nicolazzo, Jr., Victor A. Nicolazzo, Sr., William J.C. Pucciarelli, Jane Pitt' John B. Shorton, Eugene S. Tarsky, Robert L. Tennant' Mrs. Hugh W. Tomb, and W. Edward Wilson.

Newly nominated and elected to Board of Directors for one-year terms were: Helen P. Tresca, Joseph H. Biotti and Carol Ann Shea.

The following honorary members were re-elected: Monte G. Basbas' James F. Doherty, Paul H. Guzzi, Theodore D. Mann, Rt. Rev. John J. McManmon, Giles E. Mosher Jr., Police Chief William F. Quinn, Fire Chief Edward B. Reilly Jr., Rabbi Murray I. Rothman and Howard Whitmore Jr.

Invocation, opening the evening's program was offered by Rt. Rev. John J. McManmon and he also pronounced the closing benediction. A short business meeting followed at which time the outgoing president Michael J. Antonellis reviewed the organization's accomplishments of the past year and congratulated all concerned that assisted in the successful operation of the Boys' Club during his tenure of office.

The principal speaker was Newton City Clerk and Clerk of the Board of Aldermen Edward' English who presented a thorough explanation of duties and obligations to the city. He repeatedly commended the services and accomplishments the Boys' Club is offering in preventing delinquency and for the well being of all boys and young men in Newton.

Refreshments were served by the Mothers Club and a tour of the Club's facilities escorted by members of the Keystone Club followed.

Youth Commission presents awards in June 2 ceremony

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore Mann and the Newton Youth Commission and Advisory Board announce that awards will be presented to five individuals in Newton who have contributed and involved themselves in youth programs.

The presentations will be held in the aldermanic chambers of Newton City Hall on June 2 at 7:30 p.m.

The awards, initiated by the Newton Youth Commission in 1973' are given annually by the Youth Commission in the following categories:

..Adult Award — named in honor of former Chief Justice of the Newton District Court' Franklin N. Flaschner.

Winner—Robert Braceland

Besides serving as police youth officer in Newton for many years, Robert Braceland has been active in the Boy Scouts for over 30 years and continues to operate the first Explorer Post founded in Newton. He has worked with youth throughout his adult life and has lectured on drugs and alcohol in various workshops. He is a member of the Youth Commission Advisory Board' and former Streetworkers Policy Committee.

..Young Adult Award — named in honor of former Chief Justice of the Newton District Court, Julian Yesley.

Winner — Robert McMillen

Robert McMillen has been active in the Boy Scouts and Explorers and, after serving as local Explorer president, was elected as national Explorer president. He is a member of the Newton Red Cross and has served as an emergency assistant. He has also attended the Wilderness Leadership School in South Africa to learn about conservation, ecology, and the balance of nature.

Martin Bern

Martin Bern, a student at South High, has served as head referee in the Newton Girls Soccer League, and is a tutor in the Newton Educational Workshop. He has been active in the Congregation Mishkan Tefila Youth Group (USY) and the Spanish and Science clubs at South High. He is a part-time usher at General Cinema. He receives the Senior Youth Award.

Susan C. Boyajian

Ms. Boyajian has been active in the United Presbyterian Church and has served as a baby sitter for children during church services. She has served as a candy striper at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, and is a member of the stage and dance crews at Bigelow Jr. High. She is also in charge of maintenance of the school auditorium. She receives the Intermediate Youth Award.

Stephen Dowling

Dowling has written several poems that have been published in local newspapers and presented his Flag Day poem at a school assembly. He has assisted special needs students and took particular interest in helping a Chinese immigrant student understand English at the Countryside School. He receives the Junior Youth Award.

Mayor Mann noted, ''Judge Flaschner, while serving as a Newton alderman' and later as chief justice of the Massachusetts District Court system, worked diligently for reform of the juvenile justice system. He was a strong supporter of community youth service programs and served as a leading advocate for the development of alternative programs.

''Judge Julian Yesley, while serving as chief justice of the Newton District Court, was the founder of what are now Newton Youth Centers. He fought for state funding of delinquency prevention programs, and was strongly committed to the concept of youth-run programming.''

''I applaud the Youth Commission for the giving of these awards and feel that they have selected outstanding winners from the candidates nominated. The individuals selected truly serve as examples of dedicated people committed to youth and good citizenship in the City of Newton,'' Mann said.

Robert Cohen, chairman of the Youth Commission, thanked all applicants for the awards and also the Awards Subcommittee' who devoted much time and energy to the program.

''The Youth Commission expects the awards program to grow in significance each year. We look forward to next year and expect the awards program to be a much sought-after honor,'' Cohen said.

Drinan to be keynote speaker at Community Schools symposium

NEWTON CORNER — Congressman Robert F. Drinan (D-Newton), will be the keynote speaker at a free public symposium entitled ''Community Leadership in the 80's,'' to be held Saturday ' June 7, at Bigelow Junior High from 8:45 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The symposium is sponsored by Newton Community Schools, a comprehensive grassroots organization designed to address neighborhood concerns and interests.

''Like all of our programs,'' said William Slotnik, executive director of Community Schools, ''this symposium is designed to emphasize several issues integral to community education-citizen participation in decision-making, the importance of community leadership and the necessity for citizens to impact on community priorities. We are very proud that Congressman Drinan, who is a great supporter of community education, will participate in this symposium.''

At six discussion sessions, community leaders will address critical social issues. The workshops, and their respective discussion leaders, will be: ''Parental Roles in Public Education,'' Jane Morrison-Margulis, co-chairwoman of the Citywide Parents Advisory Council; ''The Economics of Social Services in the Eighties,'' Franklin Ollivierre, regional director of the Administration on Aging; ''Women in Community Leadership Roles,'' Mary Ellen Smith, manager of Community Relations, Boston Public Schools; ''Citizen Participation in Determining Municipal Priorities,'' Michael Ansara, staff director for Massachusetts Fair Share; ''Marketing Your Experience, Women Volunteers and the Work Force,'' Mary Anne Abrams, executive director of the Tri-Lateral Council on Quality Education; and ''Grassroots Services and the Foundation View,'' Donna Ferrovia, administrator of the Polaroid Foundation in Cambridge.

During recent interviews, several of the program participants commented on the importance of community education and citizen involvement.

Said Mary Anne Abrams, whose professional responsibilities include coordinating community leadership efforts: ''Skills developed during community involvement, made possible by such organizations as the Newton Community Schools, can be transferred to the job market in the public, private and non-profit sector.''

According to Jane Morrison-Margulis, who has dedicated more than nine years to community education development, parents should have a real role in decisionmaking concerning their children's education. ''Through community education programs, we can provide the direction needed to help parents in fulfilling their decisionmaking capabilities,'' she said.

In essence' the symposium on ''Community Leadership in the 80's'' provides an opportunity for concerned citizens, staff members and elected officials to collaboratively examine issues critical to effective citizen participation. The symposium was made possible by a grant from the U.S. Office of Education, Community Education Program.

Stolen Orientals recovered

NEEDHAM — Needham police joined with Boston police in a raid that recovered approximately $500,000 worth of stolen property Tuesday morning.

An antique Chinese bench and 25 small oriental rugs believed stolen from Needham were among the property recovered.

Police said stereo equipment, precious and semi-precious gems, furniture and other items were among the property recovered.

Memorial service for Jean Crosby

NEWTON CORNER — A memorial service will be held Saturday, May 31, at 3 p.m. for Jean Crosby in Grace Church' Newton Corner.

Mrs. Crosby, 58, died at home Monday morning. One of Congressman Robert Drinan's earliest supporters, Mrs. Crosby served as coordinator of volunteers at his Waltham office for several years and was his campaign coordinator for 10 years.

Mrs. Crosby was born in Chillicothe, Mo., and graduated from the University of Iowa. She and her husband, former alderman Harry Crosby ' moved to Newton in 1958.

Mrs. Crosby was active in community affairs in addition to her work for Congressman Drinan.

She was a member of the Grace Church Vestry and chairwoman of the church Social Action Committee. Before she became ill, she was secretary of the church.

Mrs. Crosby was a past president of the Bigelow Junior High School PTA.

Before moving to Newton the Crosbys lived in Palo Alto' Calif., and Iowa City, Iowa, where Mrs. Crosby was also active in the PTA.

A world traveler, Mrs. Crosby lived in Risalpur, West Pakistan, while her husband was director of studies at the Pakistan Air Force College.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Crosby former publisher is survived by two sons, Stephen P. of Charlestown' of the Metroguide; and Jeffrey C. of Jamaica Plain; two daughters, April Crosby of Parker, Colo. and Rebecca Crosby of Deerfield, N.H.; two brothers' Chris and Joe Boehner of Missouri; and a sister' Mildred Stout of Pullman, Wash.

Burial is in the old Newton Cemetery.

Donnelly treasurer of Newton YMCA

NEWTON CORNER — James C. Donnelly, treasurer of Boston Gas, has 'been named treasurer of the Newton YMCA.

After serving as an investment analyst with John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. from 1969-73, he joined Eastern Gas and Fuel Associates as an economic analyst and was appointed as assistant to the treasurer of Boston Gas in 1975.

A year later, he became manager of planning services, and in 1978 was appointed treasurer.

Donnelly earned a bachelor of science degree and a master of business administration degree from Northeastern University, and a law degree from Suffolk University.

He, his wife Mary, and their two children live at 77 Park St., Newton Corner. His parents, Charles and Florence Donnelly live in Newton Upper Falls.

The Newton YMCA is in its 103rd year of service to the western suburbs.

Cohen bill aids Office for Children

BOSTON — State Rep. David B. Cohen (D-Newton) is co-sponsoring a late-filed bill designed to strengthen the local councils for children and the Office for Children (OFC).

The bill proposes to strengthen the ability of OFC to ensure that individual children will not fall between the bureaucratic cracks. It also strengthens the role of councils by increasing representation to the Statewide Advisory Council (SAC) and provides for a local council role in reviewing proposals for services to children.

In addition, the new legislation allows for the advice and consent of the SAC on the appointment of the Director of OFC.

Members of children's councils across the state are working jointly with key members of the legislature to persuade Governor Edward J. King that this bill which involves no additional costs to taxpayers, will significantly improve the quality of services to children and is in line with the often stated priority of the governor of improving children's services to help needy children and their families.

"It is imperative that the spirit of the 'Year of the Child' be carried into the decade of the eighties," Cohen said. "This is all the more essential in a time of economic uncertainty, when pressure upon family stability is great. All too often the victim of familial discord is the child. This measure will ensure that a strong agency will be there to help children in need."

Ald. Schur campaigns for state representative

NEWTON — Susan D. Schur, a Newton alderman since 1974 and current vice president of the Board of Aldermen, has announced her candidacy for the Democratic nomination for state representative in the 12th Middlesex District.

She is seeking the seat being relinquished by David Mofenson, who is running for Congress.

In launching her campaign, Ald. Schur stated, "As a full-time representative at the State House' I would consider constituent service and communication as a most important responsibility, just as I have done in my seven years as a Newton alderman.

"Equally as important, the 12th Middlesex District would continue to have a representative who: strongly supports human service programs; is an effective advocate for legislation affecting women and minorities; supports legislation to eliminate corrupt practices in state government; and understands the need for setting priorities within fiscal constraints."

"In my 14 years of government and political experience, I have worked with diverse, often conflicting points of view to resolve problems. I have learned that one may challenge the status quo and still get legislation passed and be recognized as a responsible leader'" Schur said.

"Since the deadline has passed for getting signatures to appear on the primary election ballot Sept. 16, the only way to nominate and elect a state representative in this district will be with write-ins or stickers," Schur noted. Ald. Schur has indicated that she will conduct campaign to reach the voters of the 12th Middlesex District, and ensure they understand the use of stickers on Newton's voting machines.

Mrs. Schur, her husband and two daughters live in Waban. She is a graduate of Goucher College, where she majored in political science.

She has served as an administrator and program planner for the Agency for International Development and for federal state and local housing and human services agencies in New York and Massachusetts.

A volunteer for numerous local charitable organizations and political campaigns, she has been a member of the Democratic City Committee for the past 10 years. In recognition of her accomplishments, Mrs. Schur has been selected for inclusion in "Who's Who of American Women."

Proposed culture cable TV network

NEW YORK (UPI) — A pay cable public television network for cultural programming was proposed today in a report prepared for the Carnegie Corporation of New York.

The new cable network, named PACE and devoted to the performing arts, culture and entertainment, would be financed initially by grants from private foundations, public agencies and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, but would become self-sufficient during its fourth year of operation.

The PACE network was the centerpiece of a report by three staff members of the Carnegie Commission on the Future of Public Broadcasting. That report was issued in January 1979, and concerned conventional broadcasting.

The new report studies the impact on public television of satellites, cable, pay television, video cassettes and discs, and videotext services, concluding that pay television — also called pay cable — so far has been the most successful of the new television industries.

Commercial pay cable systems, working through local cable operators, are primarily devoted to broadcasting commercial-free movies, although sports events and other programing also is shown.

The proposed PACE network is described in the report entitled "Keeping PACE with the New Television: Public Television and Changing Technology." It would establish an independent, nonprofit corporation capitalized at $30 million, half derived from grants and half from loans.

Consumers would pay $9 a month — competitive with Home Box Office and other commercial pay cable systems — which would be split between the local cable operator and PACE.

PACE would offers 210 hours of programs per month, including 20 to 30 new "events" as well as "encore" presentations.

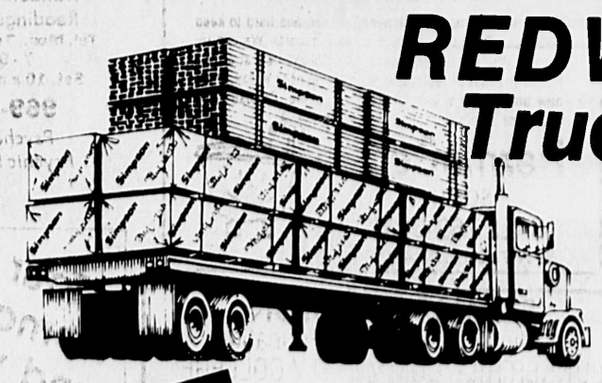

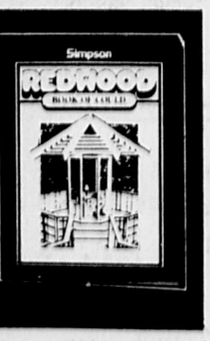

The programs would include American and foreign films, Broadway and other theatrical shows, popular and classical musical performances, dance, cultural documentaries, children's cultural programs, and a series of "arts magazines of the air."

Miss Price is bride of Dr. Paul Mendis

Nancy Bernadette Price became the bride of Dr. Paul Eugene Mendis in an afternoon ceremony in Lincoln Park Baptist Church, West Newton, on April 26.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Price of West Newton, and the groon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Mendis Jr. of New York City.

Roslyn B. Moore, the bride's cousin, was her maid of honor and Laurie Jefferson, Mrs. Lois Thornhill and Mrs. Pamela Tuttle Hollingsworth were the bridesmaids.

The bride is a graduate of Simmons College and works as a department manager for Filenes in Braintree.

The groom is a graduate of Princeton University and Harvard Medical School. He works for the Harvard Community Health Plan.

Mrs. Paul Mendis

A reception for the couple at the Sidney Hill Country Club followed the ceremony. After a wedding trip to St. Martin, the couple took up residence in Milton.

Vale in Waltham site of Geltman-Graynor nuptials

Joan Laura Geltman and Gregory Kenneth Graynor were married at the Vale in Waltham recently by Rabbi Albert Axelrad.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Goldie B. Geltman of Newton and the late Irving R. Geltman. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Graynor of Philadelphia.

The bride is a therapist who graduated from Lesley College and received her MSW at the Washington University School of Social Work.

Mr. Graynor is an administrator who earned both his BA and master's degrees in public administration from Penn State University.

After a honeymoon in the British West Indies, the couple took up residence in Somerville.

Reunion

CHESTNUT HILL — The Class of 1930 of Brookline High School will have a brunch Sunday, June 8, at noon, at the Travelodge, 1200 Beacon St., Brookline.

The cost is $8. Please send acceptance and check to: Mrs. Evelyn Pinkerton Ginesky, 584 Newton St., Chestnut Hill, Mass. 02167.

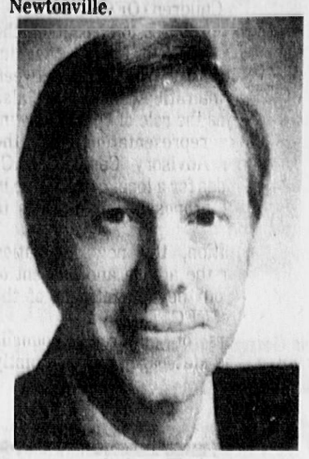

John Tyler will lecture in Newtonville May 31

NEWTONVILLE — In his lecture here Saturday, May 31, John Tyler will discuss what he calls "one of the central messages of Jesus' teachings and of Christian Science: that man is not what the physical senses tell him he is, despite the persistence of their message."

The title of the lecture is "Spiritual Man Discovered," and Tyler emphasizes that "Jesus recognized the great need to lead human thought back to the recognition of man's true and original identity, back to our native freedom and spirituality — our unity with God....In fact," Tyler points out, "everything Jesus knew about man came from his understanding of God."

Tyler, a former university professor, will be speaking here as a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship.

The lecture is sponsored by First Church of Christ, Scientist, Newton, and will begin at 8 p.m.' May 31, in the church auditorium, 391 Walnut St., Newtonville.

Danforth plans bus trip to Brockton, Brandeis

FRAMINGHAM — On Wednesday, June 4, Danforth Museum is sponsoring a bus trip to the Brockton Art Center and the Rose Art Museum at Brandeis University to view "Aspects of the Seventies" exhibitions.

The tour leaves Danforth Museum at 9:30 a.m., returning at 2:30 p.m., and costs $4 per person.

The tour begins with the Brockton exhibition' "Painterly Abstraction"' which examines the continuing strength and development of abstract painting in the 70's. Featured is work by 21 artists, including Jack Tworkov, Frank Stella, Robert Motherwell, Richard Diebenkorn, Helen Frankenthaler and Jasper Johns.

The tour will then break for lunch on the grounds of the Brockton. Guests should pack a lunch.

At the Rose Art Museum the group will view "Mavericks," an exhibition of work by eight artists who have unique, personal visions. Many of these "offbeat" works have never been shown before in New England, such as pieces by Leon Golub, Alfred Jensen and Roger Kizik.

Those interested in joining the bus trip should send $4 to Danforth Museum, 123 Union Avenue, Framingham 01701, without delay, as space is limited. For further information call 620-0050.

Chairwoman announces June temple open house

BROOKLINE — Shera Smith of Newton Centre was recently selected to be the new chairwoman of the Temple Ohabei Shalom Membership Committee.

The committee is planning an open house for individuals and families who are considering temple membership Sunday, June 1, from 4 to 6 p.m. in the foyer of the main sanctuary of the temple, 1187 Beacon St.

Prospective members will have the opportunity to meet the temple's clergy, professional staff and affiliate leaders. Guided tours of the facilities will be offered. Refreshments will be served. Children are welcome to attend and babysitting service will be available.

Wins with elucubrate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jacques Bailly, a 14-year-old eighth-grader grader from Denver, Colo., today won the 53rd annual National Spelling Bee by successfully spelling the word "elucubrate."

Jacques defeated Paige Pipkin, a 12-year-old from El Paso, Texas, after she stumbled on the word "glitch." She spelled it "glitsch."

Who is that masked dog?

'Mad Eddie' Chiles: More bark than bite

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Audiences of 650 radio stations in 16 Midwest and Southwest states invariably have heard the strident Texas accent, backed by a fife and drum, decrying the liberals in Washington.

"I'd trade the whole bunch of liberals in Congress for some straight shooters who haven't lost all their marbles," rants Harrell Edmund "Mad Eddie" Chiles of Fort Worth, Texas, lately the media champion of the nation's arch-conservatives.

Chiles got the nickname "Mad Eddie" from his radio spots, which begin with the announcer asking, "Are you mad today, Eddie?" Chiles responds, "Yeah, I'm mad," and proceeds to deride liberals in government.

On this pleasant Saturday evening, however, Mad Eddie's powder blue eyes twinkle with delight, his smile is contagious and his demeanor appears more bark than bite.

"I'm not like that at all," he tells an interviewer. "This is an advertising gimmick. We stole it from the movie 'Network.'"

This day, his thoughts are on something other than politics. Chiles, who recently became the major stockholder in the Texas Rangers baseball team, is celebrating the owners' apparent victory in negotiations with the players, who called off a threatened strike at the last minute.

"I'm well pleased to be playing baseball," he said. "We've not done as well as we should have but I predict we will win our division this year."

The affable, ruggedly handsome 70-year-old is one of hundreds of Texans who have carved personal fortunes out of the state's oil business. A close and longtime friend of Texas' outspoken Republican governor, Bill Clements, Chiles has in the past four years forsaken the relative anonymity his wealth could allow him.

Instead, he began a media crusade against a government he sees discouraging the type of rags-to-riches opportunities he parlayed into the Western Co., an oil well service business with revenues of $275 million a year.

"Basically, my message is about the free enterprise system and what's damaging it," he says. "This is done in order to wake people up and get Middle America out to vote. Less than half of the eligible people vote. I believe a majority of the American people are interested in the good of the nation."

Chiles visited Midwest corn country to support Rep. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, in his effort to win the June 3 Republican primary and go on to unseat Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, in November.

"I've never done anything like this," Chiles says, admitting he knew little of Grassley other than his 94 percent favorable voting record on issues deemed important to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. Culver, a college roommate of Sen. Edward Kennedy, registered a 20 percent rating.

In fact, Chiles insists, "I'm not an ultraconservative."

"I believe in a lot of controls and I damn sure believe in a lot of our welfare programs. We've got to take care of the sick and indigent and we can't let people starve to death," he said.

"But I damn sure don't like to see healthy, able-bodied people turn down work to stay on welfare."

Critics of Chiles point out he is not above accepting federal aid — $108 million in federal loan guarantees to build offshore oil rigs — and his $1 million-a-year radio spots make a handsome tax write-off.

Chiles admits the booming business in his "I'm Mad Too, Eddie" bumper stickers and his daily political tirades — which only briefly mention his company's name — are good for business.

"Our profits have never been better," he said.

Volcano costing ports millions

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The ports of Portland and nearby Vancouver, Wash., are losing $5 million a day because of volcanic debris clogging the Columbia River.

The river is the main shipping channel for ports in northern Oregon and southwest Washington relying on trade to and from the Pacific.

The monetary figure is an estimate, but it reflects the economic impact of the loss on the two ports. The amount does not include losses incurred by loaded vessels stuck in port because of mud from Mount St. Helens' eruptions that has silted and shallowed the navigational draft in the Columbia.

It also does not include the loss to ships anchored in Astoria at the mouth of the Columbia waiting to go upriver. Every day those ships are idle, the operational costs increase from $15,000 to $18,000, depending on the size of the ship.

Port of Portland officials estimate the port's daily loss at about $4 million, and they are grumbling that the Port of Seattle is playing "dirty pool" in the continuing battle between the two cities over foreign trade.

One Port of Portland officer claims that Seattle port officials had spread the word in shipping circles in New York that the the eruptions from Mount St. Helens have closed the Columbia for at least two years.

Seattle is getting considerable business with diversion of traffic bound to Columbia River ports.

Columbia River ports have united in efforts to keep cargo from going to Puget Sound, relying on dredges being used by the Army Corps of Engineers to keep a shipping lane open in the debris-clogged river.

The port of Longview, which stood to gain the most, has not done much more business, according to marketing manager Denny Pease. He indicated many shippers were fearful more silt and debris would pour into the Columbia and ships were shying away from entering the river.

Port Longview is getting ready to open its new $3 million container handling system, and that could help reduce the backlog of vessels.

Dredges of the Army Corps of Engineers have removed nearly 300,000 cubic yards of debris from the Columbia channel below the mouth of the Cowlitz River, which feeds into the Columbia and has carried most of the volcanic debris into the big river.

As much as 15 million cubic yards of mud and silt have poured into the Columbia during the past week.

Helicopters spray worm

PRESQUE ISLE, Maine (UPI) — Helicopters doused slightly more than 17,000 acres of spruce budworm-infested timberland with the biological pesticide Bt over the weekend without encountering violence threatened by anti-spray activists, officials said Monday.

About 9,500 acres of Maine woodlands in southern Aroostook and northeastern Washington counties were sprayed Monday, said Conservation Department spokesman Jean Parkin.

Another 7,600 acres of timberland owned by Georgia-Pacific Corp. near Clifford Lake were sprayed Saturday and Sunday, she said.

Officials reported no interference from spray opponents, who earlier had threatened to shoot the whirlybirds from the sky.

The entire 200,000 acres slated for spraying with the biological pesticide is targeted for completion later this week, if wind and weather conditions remain favorable, Ms. Parkin said.

The Bt spraying, first phase of the spray program, is a federal and state-funded experiment intended to show that a biological insecticide can battle the budworm as effectively as chemical pesticides.

The more controversial portion of the spray program is expected to begin June 1. That's when aerial applications of the chemical pesticide Sevin-4 Oil will be sprayed from airplanes over about 1 million acres.

University of Maine researchers have concluded that the active ingredient in Sevin — carbaryl — may promote or enhance human viruses.

Forest Service officials have been tight-lipped about when and where Sevin will be sprayed, fearing spray opponents may make good their threats of violence.

Spraying with Sevin is scheduled to begin early next week, but if the weather warms up unexpectedly it could begin sooner. Ms. Parkin said warmer weather would speed the budworm's development, and spraying would have to begin sooner to catch the voracious insect at its most vulnerable stage.

Reynolds remembers

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Burt Reynolds, who remembers old friends and co-stars, has seen to it that ex-stuntman Hal Needham directs "The Cannonball Trophy" in which comedian Dom DeLuise plays a featured role.

Reynolds gave Needham his directorial break in "Smokey and the Bandit" and first hired DeLuise in "The End," which Reynolds directed.

Everything for Cousin Sally. From Uncle Johnny.

These days, you can spend too much energy trying to find the right Lazy Susan. Because most stores put too little energy into their gift and household departments.

So you drive all over creation, pouring money down the gas tank. Instead of into the perfect pewter pitcher.

Next time, drive straight to Johnny Appleseed's. Where we still choose every pepper mill, every table lamp, every piece of stainless, woodware, copperware, stoneware and lead crystal as though we were buying presents for our own families.

As a result, Johnny Appleseed's gifts go to as many weddings as the local preacher. And are as welcome at birthdays as the frosting on the cake.

Come in. You're going to enjoy the good taste of Appleseed's.

RSVP salutes local volunteers during Older American Month meeting

WEST NEWTON — May is the month set aside for national recognition of older Americans.

Since 1900, the population of Americans over 65 has grown sevenfold. Older American Month offers the opportunity to recognize and honor the many services older Americans provide to people and to communities across the nation. Locally, the Newton— Wellesley-Weston Retired Senior Volunteer Program, honored many volunteers this month and offered other senior citizens the opportunity to participate in volunteer work.

The Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) is a national program under ACTION. RSVP is open to men and women over 60, who would like to volunteer but do not know how to contact the organizations that need them, nor where they could best use their skills and talents and find the experience most satisfying. All RSVP volunteers receive transportation assistance, any necessary training, and life and accident insurance coverage.

A recent national survey indicates that 220,000 RSVP volunteers contributed over 40 million hours toward helping meet basic human needs during a one-year period.

By the end of fiscal year 1980, RSVP estimates that 250'000 volunteers will be providing 52 million hours of service to their communities throughout the United States.

RSVP in Newton, Wellesley and Weston has 474 active volunteers, serving in the three communities.

The survey, conducted by ACTION noted that volunteers are involved with a variety of health and nutrition, education, housing, energy conservation, economic development, community services and legal rights projects.

"RSVP volunteers are in an especially strong position to counteract conditions in their communities which go against their own good and that of other citizens," noted Helen Kelley, director of Older American Volunteer Program at ACTION.

Volunteer assignments vary with the skills and experience of the individual volunteer. The Newton-Wellesley— Weston RSVP also conducts training programs for special projects and sponsors volunteer group assignments, a workshop for handicapped volunteers, a friendly visitor program in each community, the Living History Project, and Lifetime Learning Institutes in and Wellesley.

"There can be no question in RSVP communities that both the volunteers and the communities benefit enormously. This is as it should be," Ms. Kelley concluded.

For more information on the Newton-Wellesley —Weston RSVP, call 969-5906.

Scout News

By JANET HOLLy

If you were ever a Girl Scoutou may recall the gold trefoil pin with the eagle on it which goes back at least 35 years or more.

After a nationwide member poll on whether or not to change the G.S. pin' the national board of directors of G.S.U.S.A. has decided to continue the traditional pin and also approve a new' contemporary design. They will both be official for all members above Brownie age. The trefoil shape stands for the three-part promise shared by millions of girls and women in about 100 different countries. Also, added new looks in uniforms for both Cadettes and Seniors are planned for next fall.

If you are among the Massachusetts residents who will be watching those beautiful tall sailing ships on parade in Boston Harbor Friday, May 30, 10 a.m., then watch for one special ship' the 130-foot brigantine "Young America" which will have an all-female crew of 48 Senior Scouts sharing two shifts. The girls will conduct marine wildlife studies during their trip. Troops and families will be welcome to visit for a tour of the ship Saturday, May 31' and Sunday, June 1, 12-6 p.m., and Tuesday, June 3, 1:15 - 5 p.m.

A great day is being planned at Cedar Hill, Waltham, for Newton Brownie troops to give them the feeling of being a part of a group encompassing a whole community, to be part of a flag ceremony and spend the morning in groups learning about outdoor crafts' first aid, fires and using them safely, observing nature and learning to tie a new knot or two.

After a campfire-cooked lunch' everybody will enjoy the companionship of games, songs and sharing while sitting around the campfire. In true Scout fashion' there will be a ceremony to close this day in the outdoors.

Leaders might note that during the morning you can relax and soak up sun or chat with other leaders over coffee while your Scouts are busy having fun. Don't miss June 7, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Remember to get a map of the area.

Camp Winnetaska, Newton Junior Scouts are planning another community get-together' June 20-21. After a get-acquainted time fireside with various group activities, each troop will be asked to put on a short skit, songfest, dance, teach a new game to everybody or some other sharing.

By then' they will all be more than ready for a meaningful and dramatic Scouts Own on the lake.

After an early flag ceremony the next day, groups will gather to learn some new skills. In afternoon competitions, these new skills will be used.

Both of these Girl Scout Community events are planned by Mary Brown, Jan Goodale camping consultants; and ' by Hille Kern, acting Newton Community chairman' and the Newton Service Team.

Zervas-Beethoven School Brown Troop 621 in Waban, led by Rosalyn Bernheimer, has a lot of third graders who are looking forward now to "flying up" to the next level of Scouting.

Assisted by Joan Gibbs and Ricky Levine, who also helps in Boy Scouts, the Brownies have delved into varied crafts, fire safety, met friendly challenge to set table with 12-piece setting. Junior leader needed.

Full-time dog officer sought

NORWOOD — This town is seeking to hire a full time dog officer and has decided to devise a job description that will be advertised.

The Board of Selectmen Wednesday night voted 3-2 to advertise the position now held by Neil Murphy. Murphy is also to be considered a candidate for the post.

Selectmen Mary J. Fox and John F. Kinnaly opposed the plan to advertise the position in favor of allowing Murphy time to prove his worth in the post.

Town Manager John Carroll will write a job description and submit it to the board for approval at its next session.

Camp Chickami to have counselor from Denmark

NEWTON CORNER — YMCA of Newton's day camp for boys and girls 7 - 12 will have an international camp counselor from Denmark, who will work as a senior counselor.

Sussanne Johnson of Alborg, Denmark is ' skilled in soccer, volleyball, swimming, group games, and hiking. The 20-year-old student hopes to gain experience and insight into our culture and traditions through working with the Chickami campers. She will also be able to educate them in the manners and customs of her homeland.

Camp Director Mike Kozul said that there will also be a new Play Adventure Center. This center is a combination of fitness and social interraction to aid the youngsters in learning to work as a team rather than as individuals.

Camp Chickami, located in Wayland, offers activities and learning experiences for youngsters. Children are picked up and dropped off at various locations throughout the area by buses.

Kozul reminded parents that "camp is 80 percent full so if you don't want your youngster to miss out on a fun-filled, adventuresome summer sign them up right away"!

For more information or brochure contact the Y at 244-6050.

Charges in Norwood fight

NORWOOD — A 19-year-old Norwood man was arrested by Norwood police about 9 p.m. Thursday and charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon.

According to a Norwood police report, two men were fighting outside St. Catherine's Church on Nahatan Street when the defendant struck Francis S. Ippoliti, 19, 108 Fulton St., Norwood, in the face with a broken beer bottle.

National Smoker Study Conclusive:

Merit Pre-Empts High Tars!

3 out of 4 smokers choose MERIT over leading high tar brands in tests comparing taste and tar levels.

There's a low tar cigarette that's challenging high tar smoking—and winning.

The cigarette: MERIT.

High Tars Suffer Setback.

Latest research proves smokers actually prefer MERIT over leading high tar brands!

Blind Taste Tests: In tests where brand identity was concealed, a significant majority of smokers rated the taste of low tar MERIT as good as—or better than—leading high tar brands.

Even cigarettes having twice the tar!

Smoker Preference: Among the 95% of smokers stating a preference, the MERIT low tar/good taste combination was favored 3 to 1 over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed!

Long-Term Satisfaction: In the latest survey of former high tar smokers who have switched to MERIT, 9 out of 10 reported they continue to enjoy smoking, are glad they switched, and reported MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried!

MERIT is the proven taste alternative to high tar smoking.

Lancers qualify

Paul Smith pitched his second straight shutout and Bob Luchette contributed a booming 400-foot home run as Newton Catholic qualified for Division III District Tournament action Saturday with an 11-0 win over St. Clement's at Dilboy Field' Somerville.

The Lancers actually won twice Saturday as they also picked up a forfeit victory over St. Mary's of Brookline in the evening, boosting their final season's record to 13-5, and giving them a second-place finish in the Catholic Suburban League.

Smith' who had blanked Mission last week, 4-0, allowed five hits to lift his mark to 5-2. The junior righthander was given a 5-0 lead in the third inning as the Lancers broke from the gate quickly.

Dan Daley's two-run double was a key hit in that frame. Daley also added another double and a single to lead Newton Catholic's offense while Steve Caliguiri had three hits.

Luchette cracked his two-run blast in the seventh, giving the Lancers their final runs.

Newton Catholic begans tournament play June 7th, buts its opponent will not be determined until a June 3rd drawing.

Sophomore righthander Bob Rallis hurled a two-hitter and seor catcher Jim Masteralexis ripped a three-run triple to lead Watertown over Winchester, 4-2, in Middlesex League play Friday at Winchester'

Rallis struck out eight and failed to walk a batter to up his record to 2-5 and his ERA to 1.16. Masteralexis unloaded his run-producing hit in the second inning after Brian Walker and Frank Zaino singled and John Arone walked to load the bases.

The Red Raiders picked up an insurance run in t the aixth when right fielder Dave Smith scored on Paul Torelli's single.

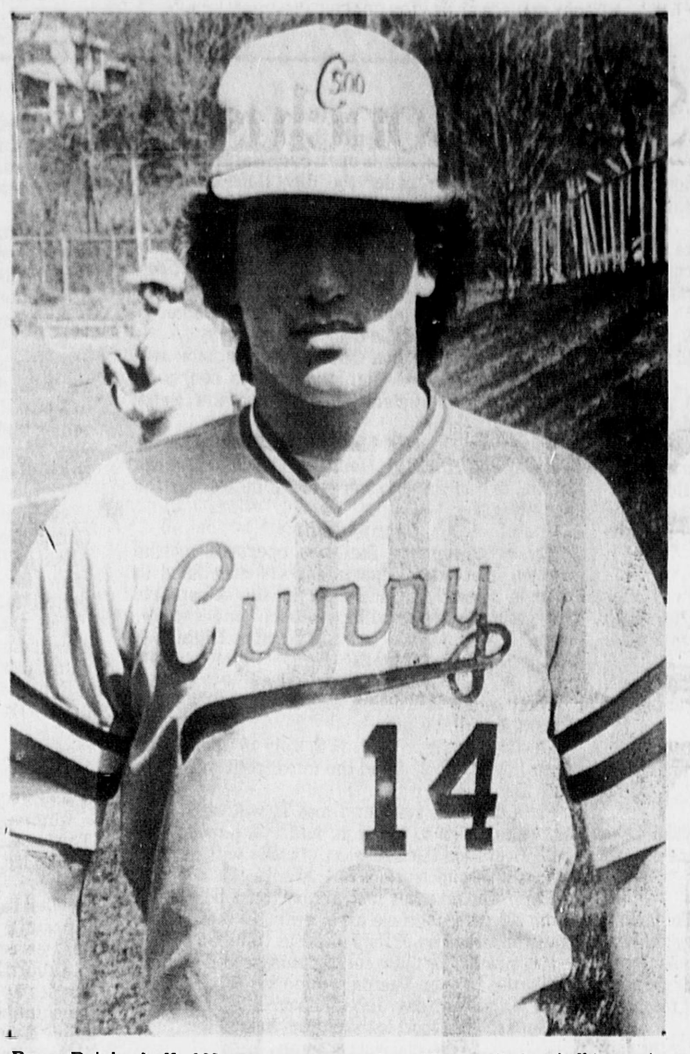

Winchester scored on a two-run homer by Ken Dokus.

Four errors allowed four runs to score and Rivers School of Weston dropped its season's finale to Lawrence Academy 5-1' on Friday at Groton.

Senior righthander Don Macumber turned in a strong mound performance for Rivers, yielding only three hits and striking out 11 but the effort was spoiled by the four unearned runs.

The Redmen punched their only run across in the seventh on Larry Ford's double, which scored Allen Ginsberg. Rivers finished the year 5-10.The summary:

WATERTOWN (4)—Wood 4-0; Danis 4-0; Smith 2-0; Masteralexis 3-1; Walker 3-1; Torelli 3-1; Corliss 3-0; Zaino 3-1; Arone 3-1; Tot. 29-5.
WINCHESTER (2)—Fennell 3-0; Baron 2-0; Dokus 3-1; Kahn 3-0; Tedesco 3-1; Henelly 2-0; Kenton 3-0; McGoldrick 2-0; Matheson 2-0. Tot. 22-2.

Bruce Brinkerhoff of Newton was a member of the varsity baseball team at Curry College in Milton this spring. He is a freshman pitcher.

Hall of Fame inductee

Thomas R. Justice, Jr. will be inducted into the College of Wooster (Ohio) Athletic Hall of Fame on June 13. Justice, who graduated in 1957, starred in basketball, football and track.

Following graduation, he earned his master's degree in American literature at Boston University. After experience as a high school coach and teacher, Justice became an educational consultant for five years. He then returned to the classroom as a second grade teacher in the local school system.

Justice, his wife Marilyn and their four children, live in Newton Corner.

3 area teams play Stan Musial openers

Waltham, Newton and Watertown entries launch th 1980 Stan Musial League season Sunday with doubleheaders scheduled in three different ball parks.

The Waltham team, coached by Al Scafidi, entertains Worcester at Jake Dennis Field in a twi-night affair. The first game starts at 5 p.m.

Newton Legion Post 440 travels to the Medfield High Field to engage Millis with a 3 p.m. start.

The Watertown Hiboes vidit Oxford.

Scafidi has nominated Bill Hart, Northeastern righty, to toe the mound in the lid-lifter while either Ron Minassian of Bentley or Brn Kinhart of Medfield will start the nightcap.

The Waltham lineup will be comprised of catcher Ronnie Wilson, first baseman Jim Lupo, second baseman Chuck Agrillo, shortstop Cliff Richardson and third sacker George Vincuilla, with Mark Canavan, John Jaskul, Brian Fellows and Tony Lando seeing outfield duty.

Post 440 player-coach Maynard McCorkie of Needham has elected Chris Charloff, ex-Newton South flinger, to start the opener and will throw Steve Rand, former Newton North chucker, in the second game.

The starting lineup for the Legion nine consists of catcher Ralph Berry, an infield of Andy Garber (first), Steve Algeri (second), Jeff Merzel (shortstop) and Bill Mazzarini (third), with Jim Florentino' John Connelly and Gary Sementelli in the outfield. Paul Ferrier will be the designated hitter.

After a 10-year absence, the Watertown Hibos will beqin Stan Musial League play again Sunday when they open their 1980 season with a doubleheader at Oxford.

The Hibos will send righthander Jim Corsi of Newton in game one with Steve Kherdarian tossing the second contest. The Watertown lineup will see Mike Kelly leading off and playinq centerfield. The former St. Patrick's star will be followed by Neil Coiley (shortstop), Peter Centola (first base), Steve Flening (right field), John Cloherty (catcher) and Ed Pendleton (third base). Batting seventh and filling the designated hitter spot is Jim Gentile while Dave Boyce (leftfield) and Dennis Bannon (second base) round out the order.

Lions split in Conn.

Newton South traveled to the Memorial Baseball Classic in New Britain' Conn., over the holiday weekend and split a pair of games, losing to Southington, Conn., on Friday and defeating Our Lady's of Providence Saturday.

The Lions opened the tournament by losing 10-6 to Southington, which entered the competition as the topranked team in Connecticut with a 15-2 record.

Southington wasted little time showing why it was so highly seeded, scoring five runs in the very first inning' Newton South cut the gap to a manageable 5-3, but a three-run fourth by Southington closed the door.

Art Walton, Dale Lewis and Kevin Castellanos all has run-producing singles for the Lions.

Newton South rebounded Saturday with a 2-0 blanking of Our Lady's as Harry Raphael tossed a three-hitter and struck out seven.

Mike Dwyer drove in the Lions' first run in the opening frame with a single and Lewis brought forth the second when he tripled home Jeff Davis in the sxith.

phael's only troublesome inning was the first when Sean Galloly tripled with two out. The Lions' righthander retired Phil Cossetti, howeverm for the final out.

Now 10-7, Newton South will host Weston Tuesday night, 7:45 p.m., at Albemarle Field.The summary:

David Chused, a senior from Newtonas the "stingiest" pitcher as Union College neared the mid-point of its baseball season. Chused, with a 1-0 record' had a team-leading ERA of 2.0, giving up only four earned runs in 18 innings of pitching. During that period he struck out seven and walked four.

Recreation Notes

Senior Trips

The Newton Recreation Department is offering Newton's senior adults trips to Rockport on Thursday, June 19' and Wednesday, June 25. There are 90 seats per date available. The coaches are air conditioned.

Those who take these trips will have the opportunity to explore Rockport. Bring a picnic lunch, or have lunch at one of the many restaurants. Cost of the trip is $3.

Registration begins Tuesday, June 6. Applications received before this date will be held until the June 6 mail is opened.

To register send choice of date, address, zip code, telephone number and a check for $3 made payable to the car of the Newton Newton Senior Adult Association, to Seniors' Recreation Department' 70 Crescent St.' Auburndale, MA 02166. Postcards indicating trip, date, pickup time and location will be sent to participants. No reservations will be taken by telephone.

Adult Swim Lessons

The Newton Recreation Department will offer adult swim lessons for eight weeks, June 30 through Aug. 22, weekdays from 5:30 to 6 p.m. at Crystal Lake.

There will also be advanced life saving classes from 6 to 8 p.m., June 30 through July 25 at Crystal Lake.

A third class, basic rescue, will be held at Crystal Lake from July 28 to Aug. 8, or Aug. 11 to Aug. 22, from 6 to 8 p.m.

Swim Registration

Registration for swim classes at Crystal Lake will be held at the facility Tuesday, June 24, and Thursday, June 26, from 2 to 4 p.m.

Mini-Bike Riders

The Recreation Department's Mini Bike facility at the site of the former City Infirmary on Winchester St., Newton Highlands, will remain open through the month of June. It will close for the peak vacation months of July and August and reopen in September for the fall season.

There are three trails at the facility. It is the only legal and safe public area in Newton where mini bikes may be operated. They must be transported to the track in a legally registered vehicle. They cannot be pushed or ridden to the tracks.

The mini bike facility is open each Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. under the direction of Newton Police Officer Paul Golden and Steve Mazzola of the Recreation Department. Riders must wear helmets and hard-toed shoes. Bikes must have spark arresters, mufflers and safe brakes and tires.

There is a $5 registration fee for each mini bike and a $1 fee for each additional rider of that bike.

Tennis Lessons

The second six-lesson adult tennis session will begin at the Newton Highlands tennis courts on June 9 with instructors Susan Casy and Peter Paltios.

Classes will be held Monday or Wednesday or Tuesday and Thursday. Hours will be 10 to 11 a.m., 11 a.m. to noon and 6 to 7 or 7 to 8 p.m. Fee for the activity is $5.

Swim Season

The two swimming facilities operated by the Newton Recreation Department are scheduled to open in June. The Gath Pool at the Albemarle Playground in Newtonville will open on Saturday, June 14, while Crystal Lake in Newton Highlands will open Saturday, June 21.

Sailing Instruction

Three sailing instruction sessions will be held at Crystal Lake this summer.

The first runs from June 30 to July 18' the second from July 21 to Aug. 8 and the third from Aug. 11 to Aug. 22.

Class times for sessions I and II will be 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.; 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Hours for third session classes will be 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Those who take this instruction must be able to swim 200 yards, surface dive, swim 15 feet underwater and tread water for 5 minutes (clothed).

Registration for these sailing classes will be held at Crystal Lake on Tuesday, June 24; Wednesday' June 25 and Thursday, June 26, from 4 to 6 p.m. Applicants should report to the sailing instructor.

Special Needs Camps

Special Needs Director Gary Hofstetter advises that Camp Echo Bridge, a seven-week day camp, will be held at the Mason-Rice School in Newton Centre, June 30 to Aug. 15.

The program will include arts and crafts, swimming, tennis' athletics, field trips, drama and music.

The camp staff is made up of college-age men and women who are majoring in special education, therapeutic education, therapeutic recreation and occupational therapy. There are usually about 60 young people served by this program.

A second camp program, Camp Arrowhead' is also available for special needs children. This is a six-week day camp program weekdays from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. from June 30 to Aug. 8, for elementary to senior high-age physically handicapped young people. Those interested in either camp should call Hofstetter at 552-7120.

Resident Camping

At the conclusion of the Camp Echo Bridge Day Camp program the staff will move up to Camp Allen in Bedford, N.H., for a resident camp program for Aug. 20 through Aug. 26. This camp is limited to 30 between the ages of 8 and 22.

The $125 fee covers transportation, meals, insurance and cabins. The program includes hikes, campfires' fishing, boating and swimming.

For additional information call Gary Hofstetter at 552-7120.

Women's Basketball

The Women's Summer Basketball League will begin play June 17. The rosters are due on June 2. Interested women, 16, or older, should contact Director Fran Towle at 552-7120.

Swim Permits on Sale

Newton residents may purchase 1980 swim permits at the Newton Recreation Department, 70 Crescent St., Auburndale, Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. beginning on Monday' June 2. These permits allow Newton residents to use Gath Pool and Crystal Lake. The cost for permits is $2 for children, $5 for adults and $15 for families.

Newton's Peter Close named 'Coach of Year'

BOSTON — Peter Close, of Newton, who directed Tufts University to an undefeated indoor season and a New England championship, has been elected Division III "Coach of the Year" by the track coaches of the New England Intercollegiate Amateur Athletic Association.

In his third year at Tufts, Close directed the Jumbos to an 11-0 dual meet season, their first undefeated indoor track season in eight years' capped by the team championship in the New England Division III Indoor Track and Field Championship at Colby College, this winter.

Even though Tufts does not have an outdoor track facility, Close has coached his track teams to five winning indoor and outdoor seasons and has compiled an overall record of 34-13-1.

"This really should be a multiple award. I have to share it with my assistant coaches, weights coach Kevin Coyne, jumps coach Greg Olson, hurdles coach Fred Hintlian and sprints coach Dave Sheppard. They've done a great job of teaching in their specialized areas while I've walked around and looked good'" Close said.

Since joining Tufts on Sept. 1, 1977, Close has developed four New England champions and four school record setters. "But, it's all the kids who took part who made this program as successful as it has been. At times, we've had so many people out for the team that we've run practice sessions in two shifts, but it has been our team depth that has allowed us to win as much as we have," he said.

Close previously served as assistant track coach at Massachusetts Institute of Technology for five years. He also served as M.I.T.'s director of sports information from 1962 through 1976.

Close was an outstanding distance runner at St. John's (N.Y.) University where he was selected for the All America Cross Country Teams in 1957 and 1958, the All America Collegiate Track Team in 1959 and was named Metropolitan New York Track Athlete of the Year in 1959.

The two-time IC4A mile champion ('58 and '59) was selected for the 1960 U.S. Olympic Track Team and competed in the 1500-meter run at the Summer Games in Rome that year.

Red hot Brewers in town

by PETE TAUSSIG
Staff Writer

It may well be that the events of this weekend could conceivably make people forget the Carnage of September, 1978, when the Yankees laid waste to the Red Sox on Boston's own battlefield.

The Milwaukee Brewers will need everything going for them — hot weather, even hotter bats, the wind blowing out, and presumably a few meatballs from the mound — to approach the 42-9 margin the Yankees achieved in hauling themselves back into a pennant race. Only Bunker Hill was a more bloody confrontation in the 350-year history of the Hub.

On the other hand, the Brewers won't have to outscore the Sox by eight runs per game to chalk up victories. One-run margins would be quite enough, but the way the Brewers are smashing the ball around, Boston's bats better perk up in a hurry. Otherwise, Milwaukee is likely to beat the point spread in all three games.

The Brewers, in case you haven't noticed, have taken over Boston's position as the best-hitting lineup in baseball. As a team, they are leading or near the top of the major leagues in most batting categories. As individuals, they seem to have at least three guys in the Top Ten in virtually every offensive department. If it isn't Ben Oglivie leading in home runs and slugging percentage, it's Robin Yount outpacing everybody in runs and total bases. And if it isn't Paul Molitor challenging for leadership in batting average, runs, and on-base percentage, it's Cecil Copper near the top of the list in average and RBI's.

And, lest you've forgotten, Messrs. Oglivie and Cooper used to ply their trades for the Red Sox.

For more bad news, be advised that while the Brewers have scored the most runs in either league, Boston's staff has surrendered the most. Sounds encouraging, doesn't it?

And just in case you thought the Sox staff has exhibited marked improvement recently — which it has — be advised that Milwaukee has won six in a row and surrendered all of four runs in the process.

But it's the Milwaukee offense that could make this a three-day shoot for "The Guns of Navaronne II." While on one hand, they have the aforementioned four guys all hitting well over .300, they also have two others — Sixto Lezcano and Gorman Thomas — who are both hitting just a shade above .200, but have still managed to drive in more runs than everybody on the Red Sox save for Tony Perez.

So how does one stop this collective batting machine?

When Carlton Fisk was faced with that query, his first response was a low, gutteral cackle bordering on extreme nervousness. "They say good pitching will stop good hitting most times, but with those guys...

"Jeez, it looks like Oglivie's been knocking the stuffing out of the ball. It seems I see his name up on the board every night when they list the homers.

"I think they've got as good a hitting lineup as any team in either league," Fisk continued, "and they've all been hitting the ball whereas we still have quite a few guys fighting slumps."

And that includes just about everybody but Rick Burleson, Jim Dwyer, Jack Brohamer, and Jerry Remy. You'll notice that the power boys are conspicuous by their absence. It shows. In Boston's last 12 games, in which they are 5-7, they have averaged just 3.2 runs per game while being outscored 42-38. By contrast, Milwaukee, 8-4 in their last dozen games, have pounded the opposing pitching to the tune of 6.4 runs per game while bombing their four opponents, 77-44.

Perhaps the most obvious reason Boston isn't turning Fenway Park into what often passes for a missile launch site is that just about all their fly balls are dieing at or just short of the warning track. Just about every night during this homestand, the Boston players have trudged out on to the field for batting practice before the game, looked out at centerfield, and have seen the ugly site of the Stars and Stripes waving its stripes toward the rightfield foul pole — hardly optimum conditions for their righthanded power hitters.

"We've had a lot of September-type nights that have not been conducive to hitting the long ball," says Fred Lynn, cognizant of the fact the Sox have managed just one home run in their last five games. "The wind has been blowing in and cutting down on our productivity. We're a home-run hitting team and when we don't hit home runs, we don't generally win.

"And we don't tend to hit a lot of home runs in April and September. Our big hitting months are June, July, and August. If we don't turn it around then, we'll never do it."

Given that June 1st is two days away, the time has come for the Sox to unload their big guns. If they don't, Milwaukee's lineup of cannons will likely oblige and there may not be much left in the annual 162 Days War.

Westwood Boosters

The Westwood Boosters Club will have their final meeting of this school year Monday, June 2 at 8 p.m. in room 113 at the Senior High School.

At this very important meeting, adjenda items discussed will be the awards concept of giving jackets, etc. to the Varsity athletes. We would appreciate any parents and/or coaches to come and give us their input on this subject. There will also be a vote on this year's Nickerson Award winner.

Please try to join us. Help us to Help Our Athletes.

Brian Yates wins Jaycee DSA award

NEWTON — Brian Yates is the winner of the 1980 Distinguished Service Award of the Newton Jaycees. The 30-year-old neighborhood activist received the award at the Annual Jaycees DSA Breakfast held at Vallee's Restaurant on Sunday, May 4.

Yates is the director of planning and program development for Community Teamwork, Inc.' the Greater Lowell Community Action Agency.

He has made a number of contributions to the Newton community at the neighborhood and higher levels. Yates has been involved for several years in the effort to revitalize the Pettee Square commercial area of Upper Falls. He was a leader in the effort to keep the Emerson School open. After the closing was confirmed by referendum, Yates worked with his neighbors to secure federal and local funds to maintain the building as a community center.

Legislation conceived by Yates to reform the school-closing decision-making process has passed the state House of Representatives and is currently before the State Senate. He is also the author of several other state bills in such areas as election law reform and government reorganization.

Yates has also been active in library, church, and political affairs. He is the vice president of the Friends of the Newton free library and was a delegate to the 1979 Governor's Conference on Libraries.

In his parish, Mary Immaculate of Lourdes, he is an usher, a lector, and chairman of the Christian Service Commission of the Parish Council. He has been active in political campaigns for offices in all levels of government. He has been chairman of the Ward 5 Democratic Committee for five years and was recently elected southside vice-chairman of the Democratic City Committee.

The other finalists for the Distinguished Service Award were Stephen Buchbinder, Vincent Marini, Glen Morris' and Walter Tennant. Buchbinder, an attorney ' is chairman of the Newton Housing Services Commission and an active member of Temple Mishkan Tefilia.

Marini is assistant principal of the F.A. Day Junior High School and a member of the PTA Council and the Newton Youth Commission.

Morris, an architect, is the co-founder of the Newton Corner Community Development Corporation.

Tennant, an insurance agent, is president of the Board of Directors of the Newton YMCA, past president of the Newton Kiwanis Club, a member of the Newton Council on Aging, and a board member of the Norumbega Workshop.

The judges for the award were Elizabeth McKinnon of the Newton Graphic, Carelton Merrill, Newton Veterans Services director and Licensing Board director and apast Jaycees president and DSA winner; and Russell Pergament of the Newton-Brook— line Tab.

Ald. Robert Katz served as master of ceremonies for the DSA Breakfast. Rep. William Robinson 1 R-Melrose), the minority leader in the state House of Representatives, spoke on the need for citizen involvement in community affairs.

Jaycee President Rob Daniels presented an honorary membership in the chapter to Mayor Theodore Mann and described the role of the Jaycess in the community.

Appleby appeal

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (UPI) — Convicted felon Kenneth Appleby says he has filed papers in U.S. District Court in Boston to overturn a state Supreme Judicial Court ruling on an appeal of his conviction for beating his homosexual lover with a riding crop.

The state's highest court last month rejected Appleby's appeal on the 1978 conviction.

Norbert Fullington (left) of Auburndale, associate professor of history at Northeastern University, accepts a Certificate of Merit and a university chair from Northeastern President Kenneth G. Ryder (right) in appreciation of 25 years of service. With Fullington is his wife, Lucille.

Second Baptist planning for Bible School

UPPER FALLS — Second Baptist Church, Newton Upper Falls, and its pastor, the Rev. Francis Crisci, would like all parents in the area to be reassured that its regular Sunday School will continue during summer school vacation. Special films, crafts, music and prayer time begin at 9:45 a.m. each Sunday. All ages are welcome.

A program has also been prepared by Second Baptist for its annual Vacation Bible School, to be held from Tuesday, July 8, through Thursday, July 17. A special meeting to help formulate this important event was held recently at the home of Ruth Whalen, Newton Upper Falls. Those in attendance were Grace Stresinger, Anne Theodore, Marilyn Anzivino, Phyllis Stranahan, Betty Crisci and Pastor Crisci, all of Newton and Barbara Tirro of Needham.

Workers and helpers in the school are needed and welcome during this period. For information regarding attending or assisting, please call Betty Crisci, 527-8567.

Honored by Boston College

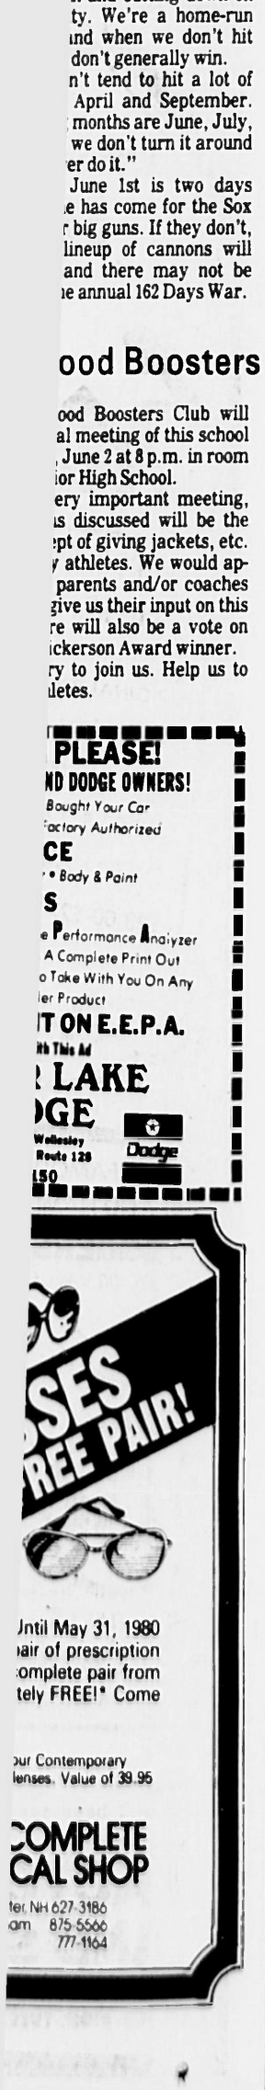

NORWOOD — Philip E. McNulty, son of Mr. and Mrs. John McNulty of Norwood recently graduated summa cum laude, with a bachelor of arts degree, during 104th commencement exercises at Boston College.

A 1976 graduate of Norwood High School, McNulty concentrated in history at Boston College.

His undergraduate activities included two years in the honors program and two years as a tutor in the Boston Public School System.

McNulty plans to attend Simmons Graduate School in June, for a masters degree in library science.

Scare mayors

SEATTLE (UPI) — Sensationalized accounts of the Mount St. Helens' eruption apparently have frightened some of the nation's mayors expected to attend the U.S. Conference of Mayors beginning June 8 in Seattle.

"We got a number of telephone calls from people who were concerned about their safety, about roads and airports being open and things like that," John Gunther, executive director of the group, said Thursday.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

REALTORS in 17 cities and towns in southwestern Norfolk County have launched an anti-vandalism campaign as this year's "Make America Better" project, enlisting the support of fifth and sixth grade students in their area.

As part of the program, the REALTORS are showing a film on vandalism at the more than 40 schools participating in the project. After viewing the film, distributed by the National Association of Realtors, the fifth and sixth graders are asked to create anti-vandalism posters, expressing their feelings on the subject.

A winning poster will be selected at each school to be displayed in a public place, and the winning students will be presented awards during the REALTORS' "Private Property Week", April 15-21.

The program is being conducted by members of Council I & M, a regional organization of the Brokers Institute, a division of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board.

Edward F. Smith of the Audrey C. Fields office and Karen Glaser of the Florence Kates office in Canton are coordinating the project as co-chairpersons of the council's Make America Better Committee.

Council I & M represents REALTORS in Bellingham, Canton, Dedham, East Milton, Foxboro, Franklin, Mansfield, Medfield, Medway, Millis, Milton, Norfolk, Norwood, Sharon, Walpole, Westwood, and Wrentham.

115 Vacation Property For Sale

CAMELOT(S)
DON'T HAVE TO COST A LOT
Make your winter dreams come true this summer by building your summer home on the finest location on the "Gateway to the Cape".
There's a lot of Camelot on this 30,300 sq ft of prime waterfront land in Wareham. It's on a beautiful, breathtaking knoll overlooking the sparkling Weweanic & Marion shore.
Yet it's only a 50 minute drive from the Greater Boston area even on the busiest of traffic weekends since you don't have to go over either of the clogged Cape Cod Canal bridges.
This Camelot is the nicest area left on the Upper Cape. A one minute walk to a private sandy ocean beach on one side while there's just a saltmarsh between you and the river on the other.
You can build your own private dock riverside or just stroll across the road to an Atlantic inlet and a spectacular view of Buzzards Bay.
Land has 165 feet fronting on water with 200 feet bordering on rustic road. Asking $30,000 and at that price it's the last bargain left on the Upper Cape. Shown by appt. only by ROD MERRILL, Realtor, Wareham. 1-295-4443.

A GOOD START: A GREAT FUTURE

Arkwright-Boston, a leading industrial insurance company, underwriting property values of over $100 billion, has the following openings:

Policy Writers

Opportunity to join our Underwriting and Rating Division.

The successful candidates will possess a flair for writing and organizational skills.

Experience not essential since we will train.

These positions offer an excellent opportunity to develop an interesting skill outside of the usual clerical responsibilities.

Data Entry Operators

Opportunity to join our large and up-to-date data entry facility on the 1st shift. Prior experience on key to disk or 029/129 required.

Clerk Typists

Positions available for beginner as well as seasoned typists working in the Underwriting and Rating Division.

Those demonstrating competence and a desire to learn will have the opportunity to advance into policy writing.

The Arkwright-Boston commitment to employee growth makes this a very good place to start. And that commitment is backed up with excellent salaries, an internal job posting system which is taken seriously, a fully paid tuition program to enable you to further your career, 36 ¼ hour work week, complete fringe benefits, modern cafeteria and ample free parking.

It all adds up to a great future. So take the first step. To apply drop by or call the Personnel Division at 890-9300, ext. 358.

Condo conversion regulation passes

WATERTOWN—In a narrow vote requiring a hand count, Town Meeting accepted Tuesday by a 37 to 34 margin a condominium conversion regulation mandating a six-month eviction notification of tenants.

According to Town Planner Gerald Marquis, 18 percent of Watertown's rental units are now intended for condominium conversion.

Marquis offered this fact in response to comments made by Town Meeting members that the Planning Board sponsor one article was a reaction to a crisis situation that did not yet exist.

Said Marquis, "The research wasn't made in response to a crisis, but to provide more information for the Planning Department. The six-month notification is a modest regulation."

In another action, Town Meeting rejected an article which would have switched the Coolidge Ave.-Grove Street area from a medium density multi-family to a multi-use category.

Planning Board Chairman Timothy Churchill said the board was seeking the change to encourage one developer with a specific plan to construct an office building on property currently owned by Mt. Auburn Cemetery.

"What happens?" asked Town Meeting member Daniel Losati, hinting at the Arsenal difficulties, "if this deal falls through as others have in the town. Then we won't know what will go up there."

Churchill said the Mt. Auburn Cemetery property owner had agreed to sell to this buyer only and argued against Town Meeting accusations that the proposal was spot zoning.

Finance Committeeman Demos Zevitas had commented, "The Planning Board has overstepped its bounds. This proposal is for an individual not for the good of the town. We have a Zoning Board of Appeals for problems like this."

Pharmacy is held up

WALTHAM — An armed black male held up the Bruce Pharmacy at 32 Warren Street shortly before 2:45 p.m. Monday and stole "an unknown quantity of schedule II drugs," Capt. of Detectives John R. McDonald Jr. said Tuesday.

The thief was described as 5 feet, 5 inches tall, about 140 pounds and wearing a white Nehru jacket and a white tennis hat. He reportedly wielded a handgun in a paper bag, McDonald said.

Police isued a statewide alert of the suspect's description.

A schedule II drug is the strongest narcotic that can be purchased with a prescription. Abuse of such drugs could lead to physical or psychological dependence.

Stoning

BOSTON (UPI) — Detectives have charged three teen-agers with stoning and robbing an off-duty patrolwoman and her friend. A fourth suspect was being sought.

Volvo Village head elected chamber vp

WEST NEWTON — Raymond J. Ciccolo, owner of Volvo Village and Village Chevrolet, has been elected vice president of the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce.

He succeeds Janice Butler, who has resigned. Mrs. Butler, former regional community relations representative for Boston Gas, was chairwoman of the chamber's Federal Legislation Committee for the past two years and served as the vice president of public policy more recently.

She has moved to Cincinnati, Ohio.

As a result of her resignation, there have been several additional changes in the chamber's organizational structure.

Senior VicePresident Bryan Carlson is now responsible for the chamber's Public Policy committees.

Graduate from Bowdoin

DEDHAM — Marie P. Buckley and Derek W. Van Slyck of Dedham received bachelor of arts degrees recently at Bowdoin College in Brunswick' Maine.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
LAND COURT
Middlesex, ss.
To The Honorable The Judges of the Land Court for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
Respectfully represents Ellin Saltzman (Silberberg) of Newton, in the County of Middlesex and said Commonwealth; that she is owner of certain lot of land with the buildings thereon situate in Newton, in the County of Middlesex, and said Commonwealth bounded and described as follows:
NORTHERLY: by Hartman Road eighty-four and 93/100 feet;
NORTHEASTERLY: by a curved line forming the junction of Hartmen Road and Village Circle thirty-four and 33/100 feet;
EASTERLY: by Village Circle seventy-six and 03/100 feet;
SOUTHERLY: by lot 429 on said plan eighty-five and 89/100 feet;
WESTERLY: by Lot 427 on said plan one hundred seventeen and 27/100 feet, that the record title to said lot of land is clouded by a mortgage given to Fox Meadow Corporation by George (now deceased) and Ellin Saltzman, dated May 4, 1950 and duly recorded Book 7574, Page 173, purporting to secure a note for $1,000 payable with interest annually, which mortgage appears to be undischarged, unassigned and unforeclosed on and by the record--or not properly or legally discharged of record:
That for more than twenty years after the expiration of the time limited for the full performance of said condition no payment has been made and no other act done in recognition of said mortgage and;
That the mortgagor named in said mortgage and those claiming under her have been in uninterrupted possession of said land for more than 20 years after the expiration of time limited in said mortgage for the full performance of the condition thereof.
Wherefore your petitioner pray that after appropriate notices a decree may be entered on the foregoing allegations as authorized by Section 15 Chapter 240 of the General Laws as amended by Chapter 20, of the Acts of 1924.
By the Court.

Prices for schools

NEWTON–The Finance Committee has set minimum prices for the sale of Weeks Junior High School and the Murray Road School.

Weeks should be sold for no less than $200,000, the committee decided, while Murray Road School should cost at least $100,000.

Weeks will be closed by the School Committee in 1981.

The city will request proposals to convert the junior high to between 65 and 80 apartments, 10 percent of which will be for low-income families with the balance of the apartments for elderly tenants.

The Land Use Committee feels half the elderly units should be subsidized, with the remainder offered at market rates.

The Murray Road School will be converted to no more than 80 apartments, or will be razed.

Historic documents may stay at Newton City Hall

NEWTON–Plans to move historic city documents to the Jackson Homestead may be revised because the state feels storage of current documents at City Hall is inadequate.

Wilson F. Pollack, Jr., an appointee to the homestead's Board of Trustees said the documents may not be moved, and the homestead may rely on copies.

Pollack attended a recent meeting with state officials who said they could not approve the transfer of pre-1870 records when up-to-date records are not adequately protected.

The documents to be transfered to the homestead are dead-filed and inaccessible to the public Pollack said, and cannot be handled without being destroyed.

The Board of Aldermen last year appropriated $77,000 for a vault at the Jackson Homestead for storage of dated municipal records.

The Friends of the Jackson Homestead, a non-profit support group for the museum, agreed to raise funds to construct an addition that will have private historic material.

Deputy Secretary of State Renee M. Landers, supervisor of public records, has told the city the state cannot approve the transfer of documents until the city takes steps to improve storage at City Hall.

None of the vault doors at City Hall carry the required fire rating, and dated records stored in the basement are inadequately protected from fire and theft, according to the state.

Newton's asbestos going to Halifax

NEWTON–The city has found a place to dispose of the asbestos that will be removed from Newton North High School this summer.

Building Commissioner Allan Fraser said the asbestos will be placed in sealed containers and trucked to a private landfill in Halifax, Massachusetts. The material must be wet when it is shipped.

This disposal of asbestos from Newton North High School poses a significant problem for the city. Mayor Theodore D. Mann has been critical of the state instructions to remove asbestos from the school without available disposal sites.

Fraser said the Halifax Board of Health will allow disposal of the suspected carcinogin only for Newton, and he said the landfill may only be available for the first phase of removal.

Other sites that are available are in New York and Tennessee.

The work at the high school this summer will cost $203,331, of which $35,000 is set aside for disposal.

Material that contains asbestos will be removed from the library, cafeteria, main corridor, common rooms and elevator shafts.

Fraser feels there is a possibility of almost full reimbursement by the state for the work.

The Building Department initially estimated cost of the project at $530,000 and the Board of Aldermen authorized a conservative appropriation of $800,000. About 50,000 square feet of the building is involved in the first phase.

City officials estimate removal of all asbestos from the building will cost between $6 million and $8 million.

Seagull Environmental Company of Dayton, Ohio has been awarded the contract for the first phase of removal.

In a related area, two aldermanic committees have rejected a request from Fraser for a $23,000 appropriation to fund the testing of asbestos pipe covering in 61 municipal buildings.

Fraser requested the money at the urging of the city Health Department. Several aldermen told Fraser a visual inspection by his department could identify damaged sections of pipe that may be releasing asbestos fiber.

Travel Talk

by Josephine Arria

From its 15th century gates and towers to its discotheques, Budapest has something to offer everyone. As the largest city in Eastern Europe, Budapest is a megalopolis, stretching across Strauss' immortal Blue Danube River rustic and castled, buda is on the right bank; the more modern fast-action city of Pest is on the left. It is also an art lover's haven, ringing with the music of Bartok and Liszt and crowded with fifty art museums, two major opera houses, a world-famous ballet, theatres, concert halls, a wonderful symphony orchestra, a circus, folklore, marionette shows and cabarets.

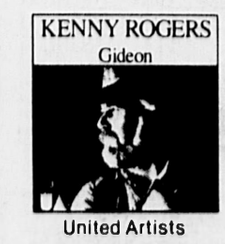

From the right bank to the left bank to the interesting world of travel, you will find a "vault" with a treasure chest of travel ideas when you come to BARCLAY INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL SERVICE, INC., 305 A Washington St., Newton Corner. Our friendly and helpful staff will assist you in planning the travel you've always dreamed of.
